COMING COAL YEAR'S COMPLEX PROBLEMS

As the new coal year opens, April 1, the outlook is far from favorable. An immediate rise in miners' wages, a later rise in freight rates and a governmental tangle to which no one knows the solution, are the chief factors in the complex situation which greenhouse men have to consider.

READERS of The Review will remember that in the early part of last summer growers were advised to buy coal heavily in advance, without waiting until increasing demand had forced the price up and the supply down. Yet during the winter just passed, many were the reports of ranges reduced to a pitifully small coal supply, of valuable stock either ruined or retarded in development and of frantic endeavors to keep the temperature above the danger or disaster point. Some growers hauled their own coal long distances, after having paid famine prices for it; some cut down growing timber and fed the green wood to the boiler fires, and some either installed or began to think of installing oil burners in place of coal. A few fortunate ones had coal deposits on their own land and were able not only to save themselves but to help others. They, however, were rare exceptions.

Now, again, the question is arising as to how soon and how much to buy. The experience of the winters of 1917-18 and 1919-20 suggests an early laying in of as ample a supply as can be afforded, since there is no surety that the next winter will be so mild or the growers so well supplied as was the case in 1918-19.

But the beginning of the coal year of 1920-21 finds a situation too complex to be so easily dismissed. The mining cost of coal, the cost and availability of its transportation, the demand of other industries than that of flower growing—these and other essential elements in the problem are so uncertain that even careful analysis can only reach tentative conclusions and leave the future to unfold its own mysteries.

Summer Safest.

Because of considerations of price, supply and transportation facilities, the summer is usually thought of as the best time to buy coal. There are three possible exceptions. The requirements of that particular consumer may be smallest at that time. That is, of course, true of the greenhouseman, but it is understood that he is buying for storage rather than for immediate consumption. Secondly, the buyer may have to pay long-haul prices in order to get good storing coal. But almost any bituminous coal will store reasonably well; the chief danger is that the coal dust in mine-run coal will give rise to fires from spontaneous combustion, a danger which can be most easily eliminated by storage in water, where such storage pits are possible. Finally, the grower may not have adequate storage facilities. That problem, of course, must be worked out to accord with his particular requirements and available space.

Inadequate Transportation.

Coming more closely to the present situation, there are two main obstacles to sufficient production of coal for next winter, inadequate transportation and a possible strike. Labor itself is available in adequate supply; its restlessness has been due in part to the fact that the car shortage has cut down, often by half or even more, the amount of coal which can be produced. Since there are practically no storage facilities at the mines, bituminous coal must be put into cars as soon as it is mined and, consequently, any shortage in cars at once affects the quantity of coal which can be taken from the mines.

Inadequate transportation is due chiefly to the lack of enough cars, the mislocation of cars in various parts of the country, the use of cars for storage, the withdrawal of ore-carrying cars which were temporarily used in carrying coal in the northwest to relieve the shortage of other cars and insufficient motive power to move what cars there are. It has been estimated that 300,000 more cars are needed to bring the total up to the present requirements and, since the car manufacturers' maximum capacity is believed to be 100,000 cars annually, the solution of that part of the problem evidently is at least a three years' job. As a result of the strike last fall, cars of coal were shipped all over the country in the attempt to supply the essential needs; those cars are slow in finding their way home, some even requiring six months or more. The use of cars for storage is mainly of two kinds, one the storage of coal confiscated by the railroads and the other that of coal waiting at tidewater to be exported. Another factor which may be effective next fall is that when the grain crop begins to move, the resulting scarcity of box cars may require the use of gondolas, which would otherwise carry coal, for the transportation of goods normally carried in box cars. While more cars are being manufactured and more are being returned to active service, relief here is slow, at a time when remedies must be speedy to be effective.

Strike Coming?

The possibility, if not the probability, of a strike of the coal miners April 1 has been suggested in the accounts of the negotiations between operators and miners published in The Review March 18 and 25. The officers of the United Mine Workers have sent notices to the local unions in the anthracite coal region notifying them to remain at work after April 1 pending negotiations, since the operators have agreed to make any wage award retroactive to that date. But the situation with the bituminous coal miners, in whose affairs growers are more closely interested, is less hopeful.

Thursday, March 25, President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, received an acceptance from Thomas T. Brewster, representing the operators, of a proposal for a joint conference between operators and soft coal miners in New York city during the last few days of March. The delay in Mr. Brewster's acceptance was due to the fact that the operators, following the government's indictments against many of them at Indianapolis for participating in joint conferences with their men, referred Mr. Lewis' invitation to their lawyers for advice; the acceptance was sent as soon as a favorable opinion had been received.

This conference may result in a settlement acceptable to the miners, but the history of previous conferences holds out little hope of such outcome. In what condition will a strike find the country?

Small Supply and Heavy Demand.

According to a rough estimate, at the beginning of the strike last fall coal production was 40,000,000 tons behind what it should have been and the strike doubled that deficit, which by this time is yet greater. Most industrial establishments have largely exhausted their reserves and now are going on a week-to-week basis rather than on a 2 or 3-month reserve basis; this is true of growers as of other coal-users. The railroads, which use one-fourth to one-third of the coal produced, have nearly come to the end of their reserve supply, even with confiscation to help them.

The summer's demand will be exceptionally heavy. When the export restrictions are removed, Europe will call for at least 50,000,000 tons, about four times last year's export. Because of the personal hardships of last year, the domestic consumer will to some extent buy sooner, beginning in June or July rather than in August. While uncertainty as to general prices is making manufacturers wary of embarking heavily in new enterprises, the present depletion or diminution of their coal reserves will make their minimum demand a large one and, if the economic situation gains soon in stability, they will call yet more for coal. Growers themselves, with the formation of their national organization and the certainty of an effective continuance of the publicity campaign, will have to meet a demand for flowers which will keep their greenhouses operating at full capacity; consequently, their own coal needs will be large.

High Prices for High Wages.

Not only will the increasing demand make coal difficult to obtain and high-priced when obtainable, but the wage awards for the coal miners and railroad workers will help to raise the price of coal. The increase in freight rates is expected to be nearly, if not quite, fifty per cent, the exact amount depending upon the decision of the interstate commerce commission as to what rates are necessary to pay the increased wages and at the same time give the roads their legal minimum earnings of five and one-half per cent. That increase may not come till September 1; it will not come later. A Chicago coal dealer stated that, in his belief, a fifty per cent raise in freight rates would add, for the Chicago buyer, $2 a ton to eastern coal and 80 cents a ton to coal from southern Illinois.

In view of past negotiations, the increase in the miners' wages can hardly be less than the twenty-seven per cent recommended by the majority report of the commission; it is estimated that that will raise the price of coal by from 60 cents to $1 per ton. A strike can have no other effect than to increase these prices even further, as well as making coal still more difficult to obtain.

Various other elements contribute each a share to the complexity of the coal situation. Senator Frelinghuysen has introduced a bill in the Senate to provide for the appointment of a federal coal commissioner, with large powers and responsibilities, as noted in The Review last week. The indictment in Indianapolis of more than a hundred operators and miners has thrown a cloud of uncertainty over the use of collective bargaining in the coal industry. At present, too, there are, on the one hand, various suits being pushed to test the constitutionality of the Lever act or more per ton during the other months of the year, making a 50-cent difference between the summer and winter rates. Another plan which has been suggested is that the operators and wholesalers should agree to make the price of coal to the consumer 50 cents per ton less at the beginning of the light season and then increase it 10 cents per ton each month.

Additional factors affecting the future are that the further electrification of the railroads will help to lessen their demand for coal, since the coal at power stations can be burned more economically; the development of hydroelectric power will effect a permanent saving in coal and a consequent decrease in the total demand, and the greater use of fuel oil will also relieve coal of some of its burden, especially if the production of oil is stimulated, as it may be, by the government land-leasing bill.

Buy Coal Early.

While these various factors may be kept in mind by the grower in making his own appraisal of the situation in its succeeding developments, their effect can hardly be large or immediate enough to change radically the prospect for this summer. Whether or not the miners strike, the demand is certain for some time to be much greater than the supply and the price will be raised soon to cover the increase in the coal miners' wages and later during the summer to take care of the increase in the railroad workers' wages. The possibility of a sudden, catastrophic drop in all prices remains, but it is only a possibility. Similarly it is possible that the next few months will see a comparatively permanent settlement of the wage disputes and a sufficient betterment of transportation facilities to allow a steadily increasing production of coal, but even then the demand will take care of it all and call for more.

MINERS WILL CONTINUE WORK.

The scale committees of the bituminous operators and mine workers agreed March 29 to make the monetary provisions contained in the award of the bituminous coal commission, as affirmed by the President, become effective April 1 and that the mines continue in operation pending the working out of a new agreement.

All local unions of the United Mine Workers in the central competitive fields were notified immediately by telegram, John L. Lewis, international president of the mine workers, announced.

"This action will avoid any necessity for cessation of operations," Mr. Lewis said, "and will fully protect the public by continuing the supply of coal after April 1, pending the negotiation of a new contract."

Springfield, O.—The Springfield Floral Co. has recently changed hands and now is known as the Springfield Floral & Fern Co. The active parties are Louis R. Niles and William S. Mackenzie, the latter having acted as secretary of the old company since the death of R. R. Mills. He has been connected with Mills Bros., builders' supply dealers, for the last eleven years. It is planned to push the business and enlarge the establishment.

else prove that it does not allow the railroads to have "a just and reasonable profit" and, on the other, Senator Frelinghuysen's bill to repeal the act insofar as it relates to coal.

To Encourage Summer Buying.

Other attempts are being made to find a more permanent solution of the problem. At a meeting in New York city of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers in the latter part of February, a plan for all-the-year-around coal merchandising was outlined by Eugene McAuliffe, director-general of conservation of the United States Railroad Administration; as a result, a committee of fifteen was appointed to study ways of stabilizing the bituminous coal industry. The Kansas state court of industrial relations is planning to make an intensive study of every phase of the coal industry.

The transportation committee of the Chicago Coal Merchants' Association is working on a plan for a 25-cent difference in freight rates during the months from April to August; this saving would be more or less completely passed on to the consumer to induce him to buy early and the railroads would compensate themselves by charging 25 cents

BOSTON'S BIG SHOW

MOST SUCCESSFUL ON RECORD.

Orchids the Feature.

The great spring exhibition of orchids and other plants and flowers, held in Horticultural hall, Boston, March 24 to 28, by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, proved to be the most successful in point of exhibits, quality of specimens shown, tasteful arrangement and attendance that this old society has yet held. Even with the price of admission advanced to $1, the attendance increased each day, people being willing to pay double former prices to view a flower show of such unquestioned merit.

The exhibition halls are small when compared with the Grand Central Palace, New York, and there is no room for the commercial booths, which proved to be such a feature and financial aid in the metropolis, but as a flower show artistically arranged, free from commercialism and including some remarkable novelties in addition to plants showing high culture, the Boston show was considered to be superior to the one held in New York.

In Boston there were no rose, rock or bulb gardens and few cut roses, but orchids were ten times as numerous as in New York. Hard-wooded plants were much superior. Azaleas and rhododendrons, hardly seen in New York at all, were numerous and of great excellence. Cyclamens, cinerarias, schizanthus, hydrangeas and carnations were as good as or better than those seen at the Grand Central Palace, and in plant novelties Boston was far in the lead.

Burrage's Fine Display.

Orchids were the greatest feature and were never before so extensively shown at any exhibition in America; in fact, A. C. Burrage alone, whose exhibits filled an entire hall, staged more orchids than were ever previously seen at any exhibition in this country. The lecture hall was transformed into a veritable tropical jungle at great expense. Big pillars, covered with natural cork bark to resemble forest tree trunks, were scattered over the central part of the hall and in the pockets cattleyas, lœlias, oncidiums, phalænopsis and other orchids grew in profusion. Towering above these were tree ferns and nestling among them were canaries and other song birds, pouring out their melodious notes. Along the sides of the hall were sloping banks in which tufa stone was freely used. Here were quantities of phaius, cymbidiums, cypridiums and other terrestrial orchids. On one side a magnificent group embracing numerous genera was arranged for effect and it contained a bewildering multitude of choice varieties.

A few specially fine varieties noted were Cattleya Trianae alba, Angræcum sesquipedale, Lœliocattleya Lenda, Phalænopsis intermedia Portei, Brasocattleya Imperatrice de Russe, Lœliocattleya F. G. Sealy, Cymbidiums Doris, Schlegelii, Pauwelsii, Gottiana, Sybil and Alexandra; Odontiodas Royal Gem, Bradshawii and Vuyksteke; Odon- toglossum Rolfe; Lycastes lasioglossa and Skinneri alba; Miltonia Bleuana nobilior; Cattleya Empress Frederick; Phalænopsis leucorrhoda and Stuartiana and numerous sophrocattleyas, brasocattleyas, oncidiums, vandas, choice cypridiums, dendrobiums and other genera. There were veritable forests of cymbidium spikes and, in all, some 3,000 orchid plants were used in this remarkable collection.

A large glass case showed the evolution of orchid raising from seed, plants being shown from the germinating to the flowering stage. Numbers of similar cases contained a collection of the finest works on orchids obtainable, colored plates and descriptive matter being read with interest by many visitors. Mr. Burrage also wrote, printed and distributed over 10,000 bulletins

ORCHIDS.

[Written while viewing the orchids shown by Albert C. Burrage at the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Boston, March 27, 1920.]

On ev'ry side rare orchids grow,
From earth, from trees, from air;
From rocks they gleam, from moss and fern,
They blossom ev'rywhere!

Fair fragile blooms a queen might wear
Delight the eyes of all,
Who throng to gaze upon the wealth
Shown in this orchid hall.

Like tiny birds of golden hue,
Bright sprays float in midair,
While fringes pale of lavender
Are treasures, costly, rare.

Like faces kind of pansies true,
White orchids smile today,
While others in their stately pride
In dreams are far away.

Long years went by ere blossoms came;
Now faith and hope are crowned,
For orchids in their glory gleam of popular information regarding orchids. His generous public spirit deserves the highest commendation and the tasteful work done by Superintendent Douglas Eccleston and his corps of assistants won admiration from the crowds of visitors.
In tropic splendor 'round.

Roehrs Takes Gold Medal.

The Julius Roehrs Co. won first prize of $500 and a gold medal for the finest group of orchids for commercial growers, with a wonderfully fine arrangement of choice varieties. Some especially noteworthy varieties were Lœliocattleya Moonbeam, Cattleya Zephyr, Vanilla planifolia, Cattleya Anid, Cypridium Duke of Marlborough, Cattleya speciosissima Empress, a lovely pure white form; Cattleya Trianae Peach Blossom; Cattleya Cappei alba; Odontiodas Vuyksteke Diana, rosefieldensis and Bradshawii; Cypridium Yser; Vanda Amesiana; Cattleya armainvillierensis; Vanda lamellata; Phalænopsis amabilis, Stuartiana and Schilleriana; Cymbidiums Pauwelsii, Schlegelii, Doris, Gottianum, insigne and eburneo-Lowianum; Cypridium Olivia and Maudie magnificum; Epiphronitis Veitchii; Odontioda Madeline, and beautiful odontoglossums, bras- socattleyas, dendrobiums, oncidiums and other varieties.

Albert C. Burrage, Douglas Eccleston, superintendent, had the best group for private growers. This group also secured a gold medal and a special additional prize of $100 for the most artistically arranged orchid group in the show.

Prize-Winners.

The list of awards in other classes is as follows:

Twelve orchid plants in bloom, distinct—Julius Roehrs Co., first, with Selenipedium Schroederæ, Cymbidium insigne, C. Pauwelsii, Lycaste Skinneri, Phalænopsis Schilleriana, Cypridium Zampa, Odontoglossum Insleyi, Cattleya Trianae, C. Schroederæ, Vanda Amesiana and Dendrobium nobile; J. T. Butterworth, second.

Six orchid plants, distinct—J. T. Butterworth, first, with excellent plants of Lœliocattleya Nysa, Cypridium Van Dyke, Dendrobium Jamesianum, Phalænopsis Schilleriana and Cymbidium Lowianum.

Three orchid plants—J. T. Butterworth, first, with Cymbidium Lowianum, Odontoglossum Hallii x triumphans and Lœlia aroona.

Six cymbidiums—A. C. Burrage, first, with magnificent plants of Pauwelsii, Doris and Schlegelii, some spikes carrying twenty-five to thirty flowers each; J. T. Butterworth, second, with Sybil, Rachel, Lowianum concolor, eburneo-Lowianum and insigne.

Twelve cypridiums, distinct—Donald McKenzie, gardener for E. B. Dane, first; J. T. Butterworth, second.

Largest and best collection of cypridiums—E. B. Dane, first.

Six dendrobiums, distinct—J. T. Butterworth, first, with noble Cooksonæ, nobile rubrum, murrhinicum, Jamesianum, nobile and nobile albiflorum.

Six phalænopsis—A. C. Burrage, first, who showed grandly flowered plants of Schilleriana, amabilis and Stuartiana.

Specimen Cattleya Mossiæ—A. C. Burrage, first, with a huge well flowered plant. He also won for specimens of C. Schroederæ and C. Trianae, the latter a grand plant carrying over 100 flowers. Second, J. T. Butterworth.

Specimen coelogyne—W. O. Rust, superintendent for Mrs. C. G. Weld, first, with C. cristata Chatsworth var.

Specimen lyciste—J. T. Butterworth, first, with L. Skinneri alba; Henry Stewart, superintendent for Miss Cornelia Warren, second.

Specimen hybrid cattleya—Julius Roehrs Co., first; J. T. Butterworth, second.

Specimen brasocattleya—Peter Arnott, superintendent for E. S. Webster, first, with Brasocattleya speciosa.

Specimen lœliocattleya—J. T. Butterworth, first.

Specimen plant, any other bigeneric hybrid in which lœlia or cattleya is one of the parents—J. T. Butterworth, first.

Specimen cymbidium—A. C. Burrage, first, with C. eburneo-Lowianum; Julius Roehrs Co., second; T. D. Hatfield, superintendent for Walter Hunnewell, third.

Specimen cypridium—E. B. Dane, first, with a beautifully flowered plant of C. Maudie; Mrs. C. G. Weld, second; W. N. Craig, superintendent of Faulkner Farm, third.

Specimen Dendrobium nobile—Henry Stewart, first, with a huge plant of D. nobile; Julius Roehrs Co., second; J. T. Butterworth, third.

Any other variety dendrobe—J. T. Butterworth, first, with D. Jamesianum.

Specimen odontoglossum—Julius Roehrs Co., first, with O. Niobe; E. B. Dane, second; J. T. Butterworth, third.

Specimen miltonia—A. C. Burrage, first, with M. Bleuana.

Specimen odontioda—A. C. Burrage, first; Julius Roehrs Co., second.

Specimen oncidium—A. C. Burrage, first.

Specimen vanda—E. S. Webster, first, with V. Suavis; J. T. Butterworth, second.

Specimen any other genus orchid—J. T. Butterworth, first, with Epicattleya Orpetiana.

Collection of cut orchids arranged for effect, Oliver Lines, superintendent for A. N. Cooley, Pittsfield, Mass., first, with a superb collection of rare and choice varieties, including Brasocattleyas Cliftonii magnificum, Veitchii, Queen Alexandra, Oberon Majestic, Madeline, Langleyensis, Cattleya Mossiæ Reineckiana, C. Trianae, Mrs. Cooley (pure white), Colossus, Schroederæ alba, Magali Purity, Olympus and Trianae virginale; Lœliocattleyas Lucia magnifica and Snow Queen (Cooley's var.); Phalænopsis Rimestadiana; Odontiodas Gladys, Cooksonæ and Vuyksteke; Cymbidium Primrose, Odontoglossums Jeanette, Jasper and ardentissimum; Renanthera Imshoottiana and Oncidium Cavendish- ianum; Julius Roehrs Co., second; J. T. Butterworth, third.

Silver medals were awarded to the Julius Roehrs Co. for Cattleya speciosissima Empress; to J. T. Butterworth for Dendrobium Wardianum album; to E. B. Dane for Soprocattleya Thwaitesii, and to Thomas Roland for a group of orchids which included a most unique form of Cattleya Schroederæ.

Leaders in Plants.

Coming to other departments of the show, the prize-winners were as follows:

Henry Stewart took first prize for six Azalea indica, one specimen azalea with a huge plant finely flowered of A. indica alba, six Primula malacoides and specimen genistas. He also took third prize for an artistic group of flowering and foliage plants.

W. C. Rust, superintendent for Mrs. C. G. Weld, was first for six cyclamens with splendid plants, six Primula obconica, six pans of Darwin tulips and for an artistic group of flowering and foliage plants; also second for four schizanthus.

Peter Arnott, superintendent for Edwin S. Webster, captured first for four schizanthus with perfect specimens four feet across, specimen ericas, six Cineraria grandiflora, six Cineraria stellata; second for six hydrangeas and six cyclamens.

W. N. Craig, superintendent for Faulkner Farm, was first for specimen acacia with A. pubescens, specimen rhododendron with Pink Pearl, three marguerites and a 100-foot group of forced shrubs in which well flowered laburnums were noteworthy.

Duncan Finlayson, superintendent for Weld Garden, was first for four kentias, four phoenix, four of any other variety of palm, and second for any other variety of plant in flower.

The W. W. Edgar Co. was first in the two classes for rambler roses; second for group of flowering and foliage plants with an artistic group and third for six hydrangeas; also first for any other variety plant, with a fine metrosideros.

Fred E. Palmer had the best six hydrangeas, also best single specimen, perfect plants carrying an average of forty heads of flowers each. William Thatcher, superintendent for George F. Gardner, was second for six Cineraria stellata and six Primula obconica. Walter H. Colby, superintendent for Edward A. Clark, was first for four genistas and three pans of poetaz narcissi; second for six Primula malacoides and six Azalea indica. William Martin, superintendent for N. T. Kidder, took first for any other bulbous plant in flower, with a splendid plant of Veltheimia viridifolia.

R. M. Saltonstall was first for twelve amaryllis and third for four schizanthus.

Miss M. A. Rand captured all the prizes in the amateur bulb classes.

Cut Flower Classes.

In the cut flower classes antirrhinums were of grand quality. Prizes went to Peter Arnott, James Marlborough, superintendent for Thomas E. Proctor, and William McKay.

Carnations made a fine showing. Prize-winners were:

One hundred blooms any variety—Coombs the Florist, first, with Belle Washburn.

Twenty-five blooms crimson—John Barr, first, with Doris; Coombs the Florist, second, with Doris.

Twenty-five blooms light pink—Coombs the Florist, first and second, with Pink Sensation and Laddie; John Barr, third.

Twenty-five blooms dark pink—John Barr, first, with Mrs. Ward; Coombs the Florist, second, with Mrs. Ward; Coombs the Florist, third, with Rosalia.

Twenty-five blooms scarlet—Betty K. Farr, first, with splendid Belle Washburn; John Barr, second, with Beacon; Coombs the Florist, third, with Eureka.

Twenty-five blooms white—John Barr, first, with Crystal White; John Barr, second, with Matchless; Coombs the Florist, third, with Matchless.

Twenty-five blooms, noncommercial growers—W. C. Rust, first, with Laddie; F. E. Proctor, second, with Laddie; J. L. Smith, superintendent for A. W. Preston, third.

For sweet peas, the winners were:

Fifty sweet peas, white—M. W. Farr, first, with White Orchid.

Fifty sweet peas, lavender—M. W. Farr, first, with Mrs. A. Zvolanek.

Fifty sweet peas, pink—M. W. Farr, first, with Beauty; M. W. Farr, second, with Louise Gude; M. W. Farr, third, with Rose Queen.

Special Awards.

Strout's, Inc., showed fine vases of Maine Sunshine which seemed popular with everyone, White Delight and Donald. S. J. Goddard had superb Laddie. He also had a collection of new Dorner varieties and secured honorable mention for Boston White, The Lark, Endurance and No. 156.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., had a vase of 150 fine flowers of the new rose-colored Hope Henshaw and was awarded a first-class certificate.

The new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, from J. H. Dunlop & Son, Toronto, Can., received a silver medal. It was greatly admired.

Peter Arnott received a cultural certificate for Begonia Mrs. Peterson and James Wheeler a similar award for Godfrey callas of remarkable size.

Silver medals were awarded to Strout's for Carnation Maine Sunshine; to T. D. Hatfield, superintendent for Walter Hunnewell, for a group of the new rhododendron, Miss Louise Hunnewell, of a rich orange color. This proved to be one of the sensations of the show. He received another silver medal for a grandly flowered batch of the beautiful pure white Rhododendron formosum. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. arranged a bed of the beautiful Lilium regale flanked by borders of the brilliant Azalea Kaempferi. These beds had a background of cedars and showed up beautifully and were awarded a silver medal.

Thomas Roland showed two wonderful banks of acacias in great variety and all beautifully flowered. Their arrangement was most artistic and an admiring crowd constantly surrounded them. These groups covered over 1,200 feet of space and about every good variety was represented. It was worthily awarded a gold medal. Faulkner Farm received a silver medal for a collection of Camellia japonica.

Begonia Peerless from J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, received a first-class certificate. Rhododendron Davidsonianum from T. D. Hatfield received a first-class certificate and Rhododendron mucronulatum var. Sekidera a similar award. Mr. Hatfield also showed a nice group of Cytisus albus and Polygala dalmaniana. Ernest H. Wilson was awarded a gold medal for the collection of Kurume azaleas received from Japan and Charles Sander, superintendent for G. S. Sargent, received a gold medal for his successful culture of these azaleas. Mr. Sander received a first-class certificate for Azalea indica balsaminiflora.

Kurume Azaleas.

The remarkable collection of Kurume azaleas from the Arnold Arboretum was arranged between the two groups of acacias and proved one of the greatest sensations at any exhibitions of late years. Over 100 beautifully flowered plants were shown in over fifty varieties. The habit of the plants is similar to A. amcena, but the flowers are longer and almost every imaginable color is represented, such as crimson, scarlet, deep and light shades of pink, orange, apricot, sulphur, lavender, and including many shades never seen in Azalea indica.

The flowers have far greater lasting qualities than the Indian and mollis types of azaleas. As they propagate readily from soft-wood cuttings and seeds, in the not distant future they should become great florists' favorites and, if the ban on Indian azaleas is continued, they should eventually take their place. These remarkable and beautiful azaleas were secured by E. H. Wilson in Japan and are certainly one of the greatest acquisitions of the present century.

Retail Florists' Exhibits.

Retail florists made an excellent showing. Penn's and the Houghton-Gorney Co., with artistic displays, secured silver medals. Caplan, the Beacon Florist, John J. O'Brien and H. R. Comley were awarded bronze medals. James Marlborough secured a silver medal for a grand lot of hybrid perpetual roses in pots.

W. H. Golby had some fine standard geraniums and penderosa lemons in fruit. W. A. Manda had a collection of interesting new and rare plants.

Advance publicity, which cost several thousand dollars, proved an excellent investment. Perfect weather lasted during the time of the show and door receipts broke all records.

Orchid Lectures.

In connection with the orchid show a series of orchid lectures was given in the lower lecture hall. These attracted large attendances and great interest was manifested, judging by numerous questions asked. March 25 Professor Oakes Ames, of Harvard, lectured on "The Basis of Orchid Classification" and John E. Lager on "Collecting Orchids in the Tropical Forests." March 26 Ernest H. Wilson spoke on "The Geographical Distribution of Orchids," followed by W. A. Manda on "The History of Orchid Culture in the United States." March 27 there were excellent papers by Clement Moore on "The Hybridization of Orchids" and George I'Anson on "The History of Orchid Cultivation in Great Britain." So successful were these lectures that they are likely to be continued at future important shows.

Entertainments.

March 24 the horticultural interests of Boston gave a banquet at the Parker House to many of the visitors to the great orchid show; a number of prominent local growers also attended. There were 100 gentlemen present. E. H. Wilson presided and a number of toasts were given, the first being to the commonwealth of Massachusetts. John K. M. L. Farquhar responded for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; the response for the New York Horticultural Society was made by F. R. Pierson. Douglas Eccleston and Edward Roehrs spoke for the orchid exhibitors. A.

Herrington and Thomas Allan spoke for the managements of the New York and Boston shows, respectively. Herman H. Bartsch and Frank W. Dunlop responded for exhibitors; W. N. Craig and Edwin Jenkins for professional gardeners, and S. J. Goddard and Joseph Manda for the judges. Leonard Barron replied for the horticultural press, Robert Kift for the trade press, Frederick L. Olmsted and Percival Gallagher for the landscape architects, P. Welch for wholesale florists and Henry Penn for retailers. The occasion was an exceedingly pleasant one and much enjoyed.

Friday, March 26, William C. Endicott, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, entertained about 100 ladies and gentlemen at luncheon in the directors' room of Horticultural hall, a good number of visitors from a distance, prominent exhibitors and members of the trustee board being included.

Various Show Notes.

The thousands of orchid flowers in the magnificent display of Albert C. Burrage, embracing thousands of cattleyas and hundreds of magnificent spikes of cymbidiums, phalaenopsis, oncidiums, odontoglossums, etc., were cut and distributed to the hospitals March 29. Mr. Burrage refuses to allow any flowers to be sold and habitually sends large surplus supplies of his choice flowers to various charitable institutions.

Miss Low, daughter of Stuart Low, of Enfield, England, arrived just in time for the Boston show and was greatly charmed with it; two of the daily papers published her impressions.

At the first orchid show, in 1910, which set a high-water mark for orchid shows in America, all the largest exhibits came from New Jersey; on the present occasion nine-tenths of them came from Massachusetts.

The Federal Horticultural Board got many hard knocks during the lectures and discussions and the general public failed to understand how such beautiful plants from tropical lands can bring dangerous pests to devastate a temperate country like ours.

Boston's show was really more "international" than New York's, since there were visitors from England, Canada, China and Japan and, furthermore, there were grand displays of cut cymbidiums, odontiodas and other orchids from England, as well as roses from Canada, not to mention the wonderful Japanese azaleas.

Kewites in America held a reunion March 26. An excellent dinner at the Cafe Minerva was followed by a business and social meeting and W. H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum, was chosen permanent secretary-treasurer. The members voted also to establish local branches in several horticultural centers.

The Visitors.

Visitors were more numerous than ever before at a show here, excepting the S. A. F. national show. A few of those noted were: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.; F. R. Newbold, T. A. Havemeyer, W. E. Cahill, F. Sealy, Barney B. Jacobs, New York; A. E. Miles, Somerville, N. J.; Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J.; Joseph Manda, East Orange, N. J.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; John E. Lager, Summit, N. J.; Oliver Lines, Edward Smith, Pittsfield, Mass.; Walter Mott, Beacon, N. Y.; C. Robertson, Newport, R. I.; David Lumsden, Ithaca, N. Y.; Louis Burke, Philadelphia; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; P. W. Popp, George E. Baldwin, Harry Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; William McKay, Andrew Meikle, James Brown, Newport, R. I.; F. C. Green, William Hay, Providence, R. I.; John De Buck, Secaucus, N. J.; F. W. Dunlop, Toronto, Can.; Miss Low, Enfield, England; H. Suzuki, of Yokohama Nursery Co., Japan; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; A. J. Loveless, Edward Norman, R. Carlquist, Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; Robert Kift, Philadelphia; William Young, Madison, N. J.; Henry Hicks, Westbury, L. I.; R. T. Brown, Queens, L. I.; Paul V. Fortmiller, Newark, N. J. W. N. C.

BOARD WON'T BUDGE

ORCHIDS STILL BARRED.

No Change in Quarantine.

The Department of Agriculture has issued a statement of the Federal Horticultural Board's decision to make no change in Quarantine 37 as a result of the orchid hearing. The reasons of the board in this determination are set forth in the statement as follows:

"The Federal Horticultural Board has decided that no modification of Quarantine No. 37 with regard to orchid importation is warranted at this time. As a result of a general discussion of the orchid situation in connection with the Detroit meeting of the Society of American Florists in August, 1919, it was suggested by the chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board that if those interested in orchids in the United States, as importers and as orchid growers or propagators, would endeavor to harmonize their interests, which seemed to be more or less conflicting, and present the board with a program which these interests had agreed upon as most desirable and necessary for the development of orchid production in this country, the board would be glad to consider their recommendations, and if such recommendations seemed to be reasonable and well founded, to put them into operation so far as might be practicable. An effort was made on the part of these interests to meet this requirement, but without much success. It seemed, nevertheless, desirable to give an opportunity for a full discussion of the subject and, therefore, a conference was held at the Department of Agriculture, February 10, 1920.

"This conference brought together the principal orchid importers and orchid growers of the United States, and the needs of this industry from the production and other standpoints were fully discussed.

"As a basis for this discussion the principle which governed in the drafting and promulgation of Quarantine No. 37 was pointed out by the board, namely, that inasmuch as any importation of plants carries some risk of bringing in new and probably dangerous plant diseases and insects, such importations should be limited to those classes of nursery stock and other plants for propagation which are determined to be absolutely necessary to the horticultural, floricultural and forestry needs of the United States, and that on this principle the question of orchid importations would have to be decided on the determination of this factor of necessity.

Conflicting Interests.

"The discussion which followed developed the cleavage already indicated, nor were these two conflicting interests able to come to any agreement. The orchid producers contended that the restrictions on the importation of orchids under Quarantine No. 37 were necessary and desirable and were not hurtful in any way to the development of the orchid industry in this country, but, on the other hand, would be distinctly helpful to such development, and, further, that the needs of the country could be met by home production from existing stocks and by importations already provided for in Quarantine No. 37 of the necessary propagating material not now available. On the other hand, the orchid importers, who have hitherto been bringing in wild orchids in considerable quantities from South America, the Philippines and elsewhere, objected strenuously to the restrictions on their business and the elimination of this source of profit and contended that such importations were necessary at the present time for the maintenance and development of orchid production in America. No new and specific reasons for this contention, however, were advanced, and in the end there was a general agreement on the part of practically all of the persons who participated in the discussion that the production of orchids from seed, either of species or by hybridization, was entirely feasible and practicable, the group of importers, however, still contending that the importation of orchids should be continued pending adequate development of such home production.

"It appeared, therefore, that the only thing to be considered by the board was the time factor, and from the information presented it did not appeal to the board that this factor was of vital importance in view of the showing of large available stocks now in this country, together with the progress which had already been made in the growing of orchids from seed. It was believed that the future needs of the industry, therefore, could be met under existing conditions and under the provisions of Quarantine No. 37 for the importation of any stocks necessary for the introduction of new varieties and for the supplying of propagating material not now available in the United States.

"After a full consideration of all the representations made at the conference, the board has decided that no new or valid reasons had been brought forward to warrant any modification at this time of Quarantine No. 37 with respect to orchid importations."

AMERICAN ORCHID SOCIETY.

New Society Formed.

On the evening of the second day of the Boston exhibition, March 25, a number of orchid specialists, both private and commercial, met to consider the formation of an American orchid society, it being felt that orchids should have an equal standing with other flowers which had special societies. Thomas Roland, who had been mainly instrumental in getting the meeting called, was appointed chairman and Gustave Thommen secretary. After some discussion, participated in by Joseph Manda, John E. Lager, Edward Roehrs, W. N. Craig, George W. Butterworth, A. E. Miles, A. J. Loveless, W. A. Manda, Clement Moore, Douglas Eccleston, Duncan Finlayson, Oliver Lines, David Lumsden and others, it was unanimously voted to form an American orchid society and to elect temporary officers. The election resulted as follows:

President—Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.

Secretary—W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass.

Treasurer—Alfred J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass.

Plans For Organization.

After some discussion, W. N. Craig moved that the chairman appoint a committee of three who should retire and bring in a list of fifteen names for the executive committee, representative of various sections of the country. He appointed Joseph Manda, W. N. Craig and A. J. Loveless and they submitted a list which was unanimously accepted. It was voted to call an executive committee meeting at an early date, when by-laws, constitution and permanent officers could be presented for acceptance. A good number of charter members were secured and Thomas Roland generously offered $100 as his share toward giving the movement a proper start. The prevalent opinion expressed was that the amateur element should largely control the new society and its affairs and a membership of over 200 in a short time was predicted.

A congratulatory telegram was forwarded to A. C. Burrage, at Pasadena, Cal., in the name of the American Orchid Society, complimenting him on his wonderful orchid display, and he replied as follows:

Thanks for telegram received. Coming from such experts as constitute American Orchid Society surely is ample reward for labor and time required for such an exhibit as we have put into this week's horticultural show. I am delighted exhibit was successful and that so many people are interested. My only regret is that I am unable to be present and enjoy it.
W. N. C.

were looking for rare varieties and I had the opportunity of gathering some fine forms, which later were of great value in my hybridizing. While collecting rare varieties I began to picture in my mind what would be the probable result of a combination of two extra fine flowers of different varieties and, reading of the wonderful work in hybridizing in progress in England, I determined to make some trials. I began to fertilize flowers likely to produce the combinations I had in mind. In a majority of cases I succeeded in ripening seed pods, but in many instances, particularly in the fine varieties, the flowers would not fertilize, or if they apparently did, the seed pods failed to mature, although in some instances the same plant would later produce a seed pod fertilized with a different variety of flower. I have not yet been able to satisfactorily determine the reasons.

Seed Almost Invisible.

The cattleya hybrid seed pods are quite dissimilar in shape, size and color and likewise as to the quantity of seed; some of the more ordinary forms will have tens of thousands of seeds, while many of the rarer varieties will have but a small quantity of fertile seed. Cattleya seeds are so minute that it is necessary to use a strong magnifying glass to examine them in order to discern the seed from the chaff.

For a long time I was unable to germinate any of the seed. The failure, as I later discovered, was on account of a too cool and dry temperature and improper methods of sowing. The essentials for success are patience and close attention and to have your orchid grower a man who combines these qualities with a love for flowers.

From germination to flowering stage will average five years or more. The seed should be sown preferably in a small house capable of holding the proper atmosphere, which must be humid. The night temperature should be 70 to 72 degrees and the sun heat in the daytime 75 to 85 or 90. This temperature should cause the seed to germinate and develop the fungi, without which it is stated the seedlings will not grow. The germination of the seed is most variable; some will come up strong and make good progress, while others will germinate but make no further progress. I have lost many wonderful crosses at this stage and ascribe the failure to an insufficient amount of the fungi to carry the seedlings over the germinating stage.

Overcoming Difficulties.

Frequently the bearing and maturing of a seed pod causes the plant bearing it to shrivel and die. I have lost many plants on this account. It would seem as if the life of the mother plant passed into the seed, for this seed germinates and grows more vigorously. Lælias and læliocattleyas are prolific and easy to raise and, of cattleyas and brassocattleyas, the finer and rarer the variety, the more difficult it is to raise. Notwithstanding the meagerness of seed from some of the finer and rarer varieties, considerable success has been achieved in overcoming the difficulties of germinating the seed of these choice forms, from which I am expecting wonderful things.

In England, in recent years, the hybridization of orchids has made wonder

HYBRIDIZATION OF ORCHIDS.

Comparatively Recent.

The growing of hybrid orchids is of comparatively recent date. It was only in 1852 that the late Mr. Dominy, of the Veitchian establishment, acting on a suggestion of John Harris, a surgeon of Exeter, began to make experiments. He is said to have begun with the genus cattleya, but the first hybrid to reach flowering stage was Calanthe Domini. This flowered in 1855 and it was justly considered a remarkable event. About three years later a second hybrid was flowered by him, this time a cattleya, and it is said to have been a cross between Cattleya guttata and Cattleya Loddigesii and was named Cattleya hybrida. From year to year he continued to flower new hybrid orchids and for about fifteen years held the record of being the only one flowering hybrids. His success attracted others and the most wonderful progress has been made in the intervening years in all parts of the world, but notably in England.

Specialize on One Variety.

My entry into the culture of orchids resulted from an attendance at an auction sale of orchids held in 1894. Upon inquiring if they were difficult to grow, I was told the culture was much easier than most people imagined and the suggestion was made that I try a few. Whereupon, without the slightest knowledge of orchids or their culture, I made a small purchase and began growing orchids.

Orchids, like human beings, can at times stand a great deal of rough usage and my first plants had a hard time while I was learning how to grow them. Naturally, I started out with a large variety, but I soon discovered the advisability of growing only such plants as would do well in an intermediate house. Since the cattleya is such a glorious flower, I was partial to it from the beginning. On account of the great individuality among the plants of this species, I gradually came to specialize in its cultivation and, as I flowered my plants, I observed a great variation in beauty of color and form between plants of the same variety. When examined closely no two plants appear to be exactly alike. I might compare them to a family of people, each member having his own individuality, but all having the same family resemblance.

My next step was to eliminate inferior varieties and to acquire plants of exceptional color and shape. Fortunately, during this period there were large importations and but few buyers who ful progress. Frequent meetings are held by the Royal Horticultural Society, when orchids of special merit may be exhibited before a competent orchid committee and, if deserving, given a first-class certificate, award of merit, or other cultural commendation. In 1915 the Royal Horticultural Society published a full record of all orchid awards since 1859. Such awards, it is needless to say, enhance greatly the value of the plants receiving this distinction.

In view of the increased cultivation and hybridization of orchids in the United States and the appreciation of the finer varieties, there would appear to be need of a society before which orchidists could exhibit choice varieties and new hybrids and have awards made if found worthy, and where all interested in orchids could meet for discussion and information. The need is now all the greater in view of the unfortunate and, as it appears to me, unwarranted embargo on the importation of orchids by the Federal Horticultural Board.

ORCHIDS IN AMERICA

HISTORY OF ORCHID CULTURE.

In the United States.

While dwelling on the history and development of the culture of the first orchids in America we should not forget that long before the discovery and conquest of this continent the progressive rulers of Mexico appreciated orchids to a great extent. As the early historians relate, choice flowers, and especially orchids, were the daily tributes to the rulers of Mexico, even some of the names being mentioned, such as the fragrant Stanhopea tigrina. It is also stated by the same historians that no one was allowed in the presence of Montezuma or other high personages without profuse gifts of choice flowers, which were used for every public or religious ceremony.

With the settlement of this country, the growth of horticulture and its development, orchid culture began in the early eighties. We find a record that some orchids were grown in the Harvard Botanical Gardens, but it was not until after the Civil war that orchids began to be appreciated and grown in large quantities like other plants. Orchids were grown mostly in collections, as it was the ambition of every orchid grower, whether private or commercial, to get as many varieties as possible, making a representative collection of these as well as other plants, while the present trend is more to grow the showy kinds in larger quantity.

Many Pioneers.

Among the pioneers in this country we can note such names as Louis Menand, of Albany, N. Y., a grand old Frenchman, who loved his orchids as much as his cacti; George Such, of Perth Amboy, N. J.; Henry A. Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Mr. Bush, of Tremont, N. Y., and Mr. Matthews, of Utica, N. Y., who were growing orchids commercially. Among the private growers we find in the early days such names, well known to the horticultural world, as Erastus Corning, of Albany, N. Y., who had at one time the largest and finest collection of orchids in cultivation, especially rich in Phalaenopsis, including the unique Phalaenopsis Corningii, besides a fine collection of odontoglossums, which were grown quite successfully. F. L. Ames, of North Easton, Mass., had an unsurpassed collection of orchids, growing odontoglossums and masdevallias to perfection. This collection contained a good many rare and unique specimens, which were always seen at the flower shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. H. H. Hunnewell, of Wellesley, Mass., had a good representative collection of orchids among his remarkable collection of plants. D. S. Brown, of St. Louis, Mo., during his life gathered one of the finest collections of cyripediums, as well as other orchids, later donated to the Missouri Botanical Garden.

Other amateurs in the early days were Mrs. John Gardener, of Brookline, Mass.; Robert C. Pratt, of Watertown, Mass.; Mr. Payson, of Watertown, Mass., and Mr. Gilmore, of North Easton, Mass. The growers of these establishments, William Robinson, F. L. Harris, David Allen, Robert Bottomley and Thomas Greaves, were keen competitors at all the shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, although the prizes then offered were not larger than those offered for a head of lettuce or an apple. Many of the specimens then shown have never been excelled.

Amateurs' Varieties Excellent.

Other amateurs were De Witt Smith, of Lee, Mass., who gathered a wonderful collection of cyripediums; Miss Morgan, of New York city; Mr. Smith, of Troy, N. Y., who has grown some wonderful cymbidiums and cologynes outdoors during summer; Dr. Brigham, of San Francisco, Cal; Mr. Dinsmore, of Staatsburg, N. Y., and other collections of more or less magnitude.

Miss Baldwin, of Philadelphia, Pa., grew, for a number of years, a choice collection of orchids in her greenhouses and when in bloom displayed them in a special conservatory facing Chestnut street, where thousands of passers enjoyed the beauty of them. Mrs. George Wilson, of Philadelphia, Pa., had a fine collection of cyripediums, while the late Mr. Roebing, of Trenton, N. J., had a representative collection, which included many choice varieties and hybrids.

Henry Graves, of Orange, N. J., had a large collection of cyripediums and other orchids. Other New Jersey collections were those of J. W. James and H. McKay Twombly, both of Madison, N. J.

In the years 1880 to 1890, orchids had a big impetus. Mr. De Forest, of Summit, N. J., imported large quantities of orchids for cut flowers and was really the pioneer in growing them for this purpose. Pitcher & Manda, of Short Hills, N. J., had at that time the largest collection of orchids in the world, with a unique collection of cyripediums and all the leading varieties of orchids by the thousands, while every botanical orchid procurable was represented by some specimens.

Making Orchids a Specialty.

Since the dispersion of this enormous quantity of orchids, a number of establishments have been opened which either made orchids their specialty or grew them along with other plants, so that at present we have a large number of establishments where orchids are grown in large quantities. Commercially, the largest quantity of orchids, numbering over 100,000 plants, is grown now by Thomas Young, Boundbrook, N. J., who grows them especially for cut flower purposes. In this establishment a large number of seedlings are being raised, both of natural species and hybrids, mostly, however, of cattleyas and allied genera, such as laelia and brassavola.

Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J.; George Baldwin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and L. Carrillo, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., are orchid specialists and do not grow any other plants. Other firms growing orchids for sale either as plants or cut flowers are T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, Mass.; Frank Dolansky, of Lynn, Mass.; Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass.; Joseph Manda Co., of West Orange, N. J.; Thomas Jones, of Short Hills, N. J.; Herman Komische, of Secaucus, N. J.; Fred Burki, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Joseph Heacock, of Philadelphia; Alphonse Pericat, of Collingdale, Pa.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; J. A. Carbone, of Berkeley, Cal.; Ferrari Bros., of San Francisco, Cal., and in Canada, the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., is the chief orchid grower. Besides these establishments, there are thousands of commercial growers who grow anywhere from 100 to 1,000 orchids in their establishments.

The present-day private collections are numerous, as there is hardly a private establishment where a fair representation of the orchid family is not cultivated in small or large quantities, especially those that are useful for cut flower purposes.

Modern Growers Popularizing It.

The most representative collection of today is that of A. C. Burrage, Beverley Farms, Mass., which, although one of the youngest, is the largest, especially in the number of plants. The monthly display of orchids by this gentleman has done wonders to popularize this beautiful class of plants. E. B. Dane, of Brookline, Mass., has an extensive collection of orchids and an unrivaled collection of cyripediums. Oaks Ames, of North Easton, Mass., and Walter Hunnewell, of Wellesley, Mass.,

The address of W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., at the conference of orchid growers at Boston, March 26, on "The History of Orchid Culture in the United States."

also have good, representative collections.

Arthur Cooley, of Pittsfield, Mass., has a choice collection, especially in varieties of cattleyas, lœlias and their hybrids. Several other Massachusetts families, the Whitins, of Whitinsville, and the Thayers, of South Lancaster, have good collections of orchids. E. O. Moore, of Hackensack, N. J., specializes in cattleyas, lœlias and their hybrids and is noted as a grower of choice hybrids. George Schlegell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has an extensive general collection of orchids, which has been his hobby for over thirty-five years. Mrs. Hicks Arnold still keeps intact the collection grown by her late husband in New York city. Miss De Lamar, of Glen Cove, N. Y., has a collection of orchids among her large variety of horticultural treasures.

In Pennsylvania there are numerous collections, such as that of Louis Burk, Joseph E. Widener, Mrs. Dickson, who purchased the entire collection of the late Mr. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J.; John Wanamaker and numerous other patrons of horticulture.

All the botanical gardens and public parks in America have a fair collection of orchids in their greenhouses that interest the visiting public.

Beginning of Hybridization.

Orchid hybridization began about 1885 and the first hybrid orchid of American origin, Cypripedium Arnoldianum, from Cypripedium concolor and Cypripedium superbiens, was exhibited by Pitcher & Manda before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1890, followed by other hybrids.

The cultural method has changed from the mystery in which orchid culture was shrouded in the early stages of orchid culture in this country, as well as in Europe. By liberal methods the culture was simplified and it was found that there was no necessity of building special orchid houses and that the orchids delighted in plenty of light, air and sunshine.

The orchid material, especially peat, was all imported from Europe, while now thousands of barrels are exported to England, France and Belgium. In the early days of orchid culture the American growers depended on Europe, especially England, for their supply of plants, but since the eighties direct importations were made to the United States from different parts of the tropics in such quantities that at times orchids were exported to Europe.

Several orchid collectors left the United States for the tropics and have successfully shipped large quantities of orchids into the United States. John E. Lager, Livingston, De Buck, Sachse, Massmann, Carrillo and others are pioneers in that line, which has now been brought to a standstill on account of the unreasonable Quarantine No. 37.

tropical America grow the odontoglossums, another group similar in general aspect to the oncidium, but difficult to cultivate in North America. Another favorite tropical American group is masdevallia, in which the blooms assume most extraordinary shapes, often imitating beetles, spiders and other forms of small animals.

Malaysia Boasts of Many.

In the Philippines and parts of Malaysia grow the lovely phalænopsis, the moth orchids. These, with their leathery, strap-shaped, often mottled, leaves and large, butterfly-like, white and rose-colored blooms arranged on long, arching racemes, are the princesses of orchidom. Somewhat similar to the moth orchids are the ærides and vandas, also natives of Malaysia, which have fleshy, curiously shaped, highly fragrant blooms. One of them, Vanda cœrulea, has blue blooms and is among the wonders of the orchid world. Some have narrow, flat, strap-shaped leaves; others, like Vanda teres, have fleshy, cylindrical leaves and, when not in bloom, might be mistaken for the cactus. In Malaysia grow other orchids, including the dendrobiums, with their stick-like branches and brilliantly colored blooms, and cypripediums, the ladyslipper orchids, of which the variety is great.

A Few in Africa.

In tropical Africa but a few showy species of orchids are known, but in Madagascar grows Angræcum sesquipedale, which has white, or greenish-white, waxy flowers, each with an enormous spur, some twelve to fourteen inches long, at the bottom of which honey is secreted. In orchids, generally, the curious, often extraordinary shape of the bloom is a device on the part of nature to insure cross pollination. In the case of this Madagascar orchid, with its remarkable spur, there is a correspondingly large moth with an enormously long tongue capable of sucking the honey from the spur and, on its departure, carrying away the pollen masses to another flower. This moth and orchid afford an interesting example of mutual adaptation. On Table mountain and elsewhere in Africa grow the interesting terrestrial orchids known as disa, which have curiously hood-shaped blooms, with a small lip and long spur at the back. Within the tropics there are many other groups of orchids, but the foregoing, all of which are familiar greenhouse plants, may serve as types of the wonderful variety in form and appearance among the members of orchidom.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Rose Registration.

The following rose has been accepted by the rose registration committee of the American Rose Society and unless objections are received in the secretary's office within three weeks of this publication the registration will become permanent. From the Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.:

Name, Red Columbia; class, hybrid tea; parentage, sport of Columbia. Description—General characteristics of this variety are identical with Columbia, except that the color is a brilliant scarlet and the petalage is not so full as Columbia. The color is similar to Hoosier Beauty.

NATIVE HAUNTS

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.

Of Orchid Varieties.

In their struggle to obtain the light and air necessary for their existence, plants adopt various and curious devices. Leaving aside the familiar trees, bushes and herbs which are the types common in northern lands, we find there also a group of plants which, by means of specialized organs of their own and by the aid of other plants, climb or scramble until they get well above their neighbors. In polar regions there are no climbers, but, as the warmer regions are reached, they increase rapidly in number until within the tropics almost every tree and bush is burdened with these plants. In the equatorial regions, where the atmosphere is saturated with moisture and the heat is intense, vegetation is thickest and every bit of available land is covered with a jungle growth. Here we find vast numbers of plants growing upon others, especially upon trees. These plants, known as epiphytes, obtain their food from the atmosphere and from the humus which collects in and about them on the branches and trunks of trees. In other words, the trees afford them a home, but do not supply them with food.

Many Types.

The great family of orchids, in a measure, is represented by many different types of vegetation; that is to say, there are orchids which have their roots in the ground; there are others which climb trees; there are others, and these by far the greater number, which live upon the branches of trees. The terrestrial orchids—that is, those which have their roots in the ground—are usually found in northern latitudes and, with few exceptions, such as the moccasin flower, have inconspicuous blooms.

Climbing orchids are not numerous and are found only in the tropics. Epiphytic orchids, and it is these that are usually understood when we speak of orchids, are a feature of the equatorial and subequatorial regions of both hemispheres. It is these tropical epiphytic orchids which make the wondrous display which may be seen in the hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The epiphytic orchids of the tropical regions of the old and the new world are quite dissimilar, not one kind being common to the two regions. Most spectacularly beautiful are the cattleyas and lœlias of tropical America. These, with their highly colored blooms, with pink or rose-colored floral segments and highly colored red or crimson lip, more or less mottled with other colors, are the princes of orchidom. They grow not only upon trees, but also upon rocks fully exposed to the sun. Another group of tropical American orchids is oncidiums, which have their variously spotted, butterfly-like blooms arranged in long racemes. On the mountains of

ORCHIDS IN ENGLAND.

Past and Present.

There is no branch of plant cultivation that has made more rapid progress during the last fifty years than the cultivation of orchids. The first orchid grown in England in 1738 was Bletia verecunda, imported from the Bahama islands, and, soon after, several species were imported from the West Indies. It was in 1812 that Conrad Loddiges, of Hackney, London, started importing and growing orchids on a commercial scale and continued until about 1852. During this period Dr. Roxburgh sent several species from northern India, including Vanda Roxburghii, Eterides odoratum and species of dendrobiums.

Dr. Lindley and Mr. Bateman come next as botanists and cultivators. They made great strides in growing plants under more favorable conditions, with a fair amount of success. The most practical cultivator at that time was Joseph Paxton, gardener for the Duke of Devonshire, at Chatsworth house, who began collecting about 1833; the collection consisting of plants from the East Indies, aërides, vandas, saccalabiums and dendrobiums. Some of the original Vanda suavis and Vanda tricolor in 1873 were fine specimens, with seven and eight growths eight to ten feet in height, with leaves to the base. The finest specimens in the trade were in the nurseries of B. L. Williams, Upper Holloway, London, who devoted two houses to vandas and aërides. John Day, of Tottenham, London, also devoted several houses to East Indian varieties. His collection of orchids in 1878 was the largest and most valuable in Europe.

Importing Cool House Plants.

It was not until 1862 that cool house plants began to be imported with success by Hugh Low & Co., through their collector, Mr. Blunt, who sent home the first Odontoglossum crispum, or Alexandra, the name it is still known by in some collections. It flowered for the first time in the collection of John Day. It was not until 1870 that odontoglossum cultivation began to be carried out successfully, but afterwards it went ahead rapidly. Many amateurs started collecting cool house orchids in preference to the warm species, since they are easy and less expensive to grow. Good imported plants could be bought for 36 cents and upwards. About 1886 collecting spotted crispum started, the late Sir H. Schroder buying Odontoglossum crispum apiatum for $750, at that time considered a fabulous price. It was then the best spotted variety known. About 1897 came O. crispum Luciana, without a doubt the finest spotted variety in cultivation. Small plants used to sell for $2,500. O. crispum Pittianum came next. O. crispum Cooksonæ sold for $6,000, O. C. Britannia for $5,000 and many other good spotted varieties for from $500 upwards. By the hybridizing and the raising of odontoglossums from seed many fine varieties have been turned out and the prices have been considerably reduced.

From Northern India.

Dendrobiums had been grown for a number of years, having been sent by botanists from northern India. Dendrobium nobile flowered for the first time about 1837. It was not until 1875 that collections of this species began with the introduction of the Burmese varieties, D. Wardianum, crassinode, Devonianum, Falconerii, thyrsiflorum and many other showy varieties. Fine collections used to be shown at the principal spring shows in the botanical gardens, Manchester, and keen competition was seen, especially in the northern sec-of C. Leeannum and its many varieties, aureum, Euryades, Hera and many other fine varieties. The Assam type is the best, having longer stems and darker colored flowers. The Burmese type has been of more robust growth, with shorter stems and flowers of a lighter color.

Insigne, Montana Varieties.

Next come C. insigne, Montana varieties, imported about 1890. From this type came C. insigne Sanderæ and Sanderiana, these two being the best yellow varieties in cultivation. C. insigne Harefield Hall, the largest-flowered one in the section, also came at this time. C. bellatulum, niveum, Lawrenceanum and Rothschildianum came about the same time. With the reintroduction of C. Fairieanum, which caused quite a sensation at the time, there being only two plants in Europe left in the collections of Baron Schroder and Sir Trevor Lawrence, it was eagerly bought for hybridizing purposes, but with no great satisfaction over former Fairieanum hybrids, like Arthurianum, Baron Schroder, vexillarium, Juno. It is without doubt the most unique cypripedium in cultivation, but does not lend itself to easy cultivation.

Cypripediums seem to keep in favor over a long period. Several amateur collectors make a specialty of their cultivation, including Sir G. Hotford, Mrs. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Gratrix, who devote houses to them alone.

Hybridizing Started in 1853.

Hybridizing was started by Mr. Dominy for James Veitch in 1853, in the Exeter nurseries. He afterwards moved to Chelsea, London, where he took up the work in earnest, Mr. Leden following about 1864. The orchid conference held by the Royal Horticultural Society at South Kensington, London, gave the greatest stimulus to hybridizing at that time, Mr. Veitch showing Læliocattleya exoniensis, bella, callistoglossa and several other varieties. About that time Mr. Charlesworth took up the work with marked success, introducing many fine hybrids from L. cinnabarina and flora; also several from Lælia tenebrosa, including L. C. Baden Powell, Haroldiana and Martinetti, and Brassocattleya Bradshawii, Queen Alexandra, Cliftonii and many secondary crosses, Cattleya aurea and Dowiana having been used more than any other species, with the best results in producing the most showy varieties.

Sander & Sons came next, having sent out many fine varieties of cattleyas, læliocattleyas, cypripediums and odontoglossums. Messrs. McBean, Cooksbridge, Sussex, take the lead with hybrid cymbidiums, introducing some of the best yet sent out. Without doubt, they are the most useful introduction of later years for show and decorative uses. Some amateurs are Sir G. Hotford and Sir J. Colman, who have sent out several high-class hybrids.

tion, by G. Hardy, Mr. Swan, Mr. Wrigley and Mr. Percivall, but of late years they have gone out of favor, a fact much to be regretted.

Many fine hybrids have been introduced in the varieties D. splendissimum, Ainsworthii, Leechianum, Schneiderianum, Venus. Dendrobium Phalaenopsis from New Guinea remained rare until Mr. Sander imported large quantities in 1892. It still holds favor on account of its free flowering and range of color and is one of the best for cut flower use.

Cypripediums have been known for many years. The first flowers were C. venustum and C. insigne, introduced in 1820, and these remained the only species of their section known to cultivation for twenty years from their introduction. Forming collections started about 1880, when many showy species were introduced. C. Spicerianum was the foremost, having been imported in 1878, but remained rare until Hugh Low & Co. and Mr. Sander found its habitat about 1882, when large importations came home. It has been the parent of the finest hybrids in cultivation in the way with the best means at their disposal. The absence of the fine specimen plants which used to be shown at the principal shows is much to be regretted; large groups have taken their places, with masses of flowers, and the small collector is not given a chance to show his skill as a cultivator.

SPECIAL SALES CLEAR STOCK.

I should like to make a few remarks in regard to the paragraph headed "Putting It to the Test" in the Chicago letter in The Review of March 25.

If florists in all cities would take up this matter of special sales in a manner similar to that suggested by W. J. Smyth, whenever there is a glut, it would certainly take up a great deal of stock which usually finds its way to the dump. Not only that; such sales would get many a person into the habit of buying flowers who otherwise would buy none at all. It would also be a big help to the wholesaler, since he would be able to dispose of his stock at a reasonable price.

For instance, two years ago I was at Cincinnati a week after Easter. The retailers were buying carnations at $1 per hundred and selling them at $1 per dozen. Sweet peas were bringing 50 cents per hundred wholesale and the retailers were selling them at 75 cents per bunch. This lasted for two weeks.

I spoke to several retailers and told them outright that the prices which the growers and wholesalers were getting for stock were out of reason, compared with the prices they were getting.

They would say: "Just look at the expenses we have. For instance, a woman comes into the store and buys a dozen carnations, which she has sent to a hospital. It costs us a box, a card and 25 cents for delivery expenses."

But they seem to think that 12 cents for a dozen carnations leaves the grower all the profit that he needs.

If the retailers, however, would put their prices down to 50 cents per dozen as soon as they are able to buy the flowers at $2 per hundred, and even advertise them at that, the wholesaler would then be able to get $2 per hundred for all his stock; it would help him a great deal in keeping his expenses paid during the summer months and would do away with much discouragement.

Many of our retail florists with small greenhouses are to blame in the same manner. During the winter months they will beg for stock when they are not getting enough of their own. But just as soon as they get enough of their own they will sell it at a big price and not think of buying from the wholesaler or of trying to put the price down and helping the wholesaler to dispose of his stock also.

I am sure that if this matter were taken up by retailers throughout the United States it would make the wholesale business a much more pleasant business to run, especially now, when we are obliged to pay from $4 to $5 per day for help and to buy coal at the same price per ton in carload lots as for single tons.

An endeavor should be made to follow this out. Of course, while I mentioned carnations, I meant that all flowers which are selling at low prices should be treated in the same way.

I certainly endorse Mr. Smyth's plans and hope to see this matter taken up and pushed through. It is certainly the duty of every wholesaler to do his bit to put it through.

Peter Weiland.

BIRTHDAY BUSINESS.

Since the national publicity committee pointed out that there are over 100,000,000 birthdays every year in this country, florists have been stirred to increased efforts to make flowers for birthdays a more general custom. This has been a feature of the national advertising in the monthly magazines on several occasions. Now the local coöperative campaigns are using the subject for their advertising.

In Chicago the advertisement reproduced on this page, "Whose Birthday Today?" appeared in the Daily News March 25 and in the Herald-Examiner March 26. Since the latest census figures give Chicago 2,884,827 population, the birthdays of its inhabitants number over 7,900 each day on the average.

St. Louis has used the same idea and placed it prominently in view in the Easter page advertisement which appeared in the Globe-Democrat March 28, one week before Easter. This advertisement is shown on the opposite page. For this page and the one which appeared March 31 in the Star the St. Louis florists paid $1,100.

BEWARE OF THIS SWINDLER.

Be on the watch for a swindler who is about five feet nine inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds, is of medium build with a slightly florid complexion, wearing a brown fedora hat and brown suit, but with untidy linen, speaking with a German accent. He is reported by the State Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo., as working in a novel method all his own and carrying out his game so smoothly that he can convince almost anyone of his sincerity.

He calls on a florist and advises him that he is arranging a wedding party and proposes to buy wedding flowers, getting the probable cost of bouquets, etc. He then goes out and forges a sight draft, returning with about $20 or $25 in excess of his purchase. He calls the minister from the florist's shop and makes arrangements for limousines and the church and leads one to be-

CANADIAN EXECUTIVE TO MEET.

To Prepare for Coming Convention.

The executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association will meet in the I. O. O. F. hall, Main street, East Hamilton, Canada, April 12 and 13.

As this is expected to be one of the most important executive sessions in the history of the association, the president and other officers urge that all executive members, past presidents and chairmen of standing committees make a special effort to attend.

The Program.

The program is as follows:

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 2 P. M.

C. H. A. executive meeting. Association business and reports of standing committees.

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 8 P. M.

Conference between the Hamilton convention committee and the C. H. A. as to the arrangement of the program for the coming convention, April 10 to 13.

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 9 P. M.

Address by Prof. H. B. Dörner, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., on "Educational and Experimental Work."

TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 10 A. M.

Conference in regard to the establishment of college training and a Dominion council of horticulture.

TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 2 P. M.

Meeting of the C. H. A. executive committee to further plant registration and to transact new and unfinished business.

SHORTAGE STIRS GLASS MEN.

The shortage of glass has become so pronounced that the manufacturers are themselves seeking to find means of remedying the situation. The pronounced scarcity was given as the cause of a special meeting of the American Window Glass Manufacturers' Association at Pittsburgh March 23 for the purpose of deciding whether factories operating in the first period should extend the time of their fire and whether it would be advisable to advance the time of factories operating in the second period.

Owing to the scarcity of labor, the association several years ago decided to operate one group of factories until some convenient date in May while the other group was idle, and to start the second group in September, allowing the first to be shut down. This proved satisfactory until demands for glass became so great that some plan for increased production became necessary.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

Roses and carnations of splendid quality are in good supply. Sweet peas are plentiful. There are few violets, orchids or lilies of the valley in the market. Among the other offerings in cut flowers are calendulas, mignonette, jonquils, daffodils, pansies and tulips.

The supply of plants is large and of high quality. Lilies this year are of exceptional quality, with more than enough to go around. Beauties, ramblers, Tausendschoen and Lady Gay roses are fine plants, well flowered. Otaksa and French hydrangeas are also well flowered and are beautifully colored. Good genistas are to be had. No rhododendrons are available this year and azaleas are exceedingly scarce. Callas are in good supply. Hyacinths, tulips, jonquils and daffodils are plentiful and of fine quality.

PROPAGATING EPIPHYLLUM.

I should like to know the botanical and the common name of the enclosed plant. I should also like to know how to propagate it. Is there any seed? I tried cuttings in sand last August and only about five per cent stood. These are rooting now, but the plants have not grown a bit. I am sending two geraniums also, of which I should like to know the name.

E. B.—Ind.

The name of the plant is Epiphyllum truncatum, commonly called Christmas cactus. It is not seen often in commercial establishments, but it is grown largely in the greenhouses of private estates and public parks, where it will be found growing in hanging baskets or mixed with other plants to cover an unsightly side wall of the conservatory. It is sometimes trained into large specimens of various shapes for special purposes. The gardeners of European countries take greater care of these plants than the gardeners of America do; consequently, in some of the noted places there, fine specimens grown in standard and other forms are frequently seen.

The method of increasing the plants is either by propagating from cuttings or grafting, but the first method is the one most generally used. When given fresh sand with a strong bottom heat and not overwatered they root easily. Another plan used is to insert the cuttings in small pots filled with light sandy loam and set on a shelf in a light, warm house and water sparingly until root action commences. These plants are succulent. So do not take the most tender shoots for cuttings and, whenever possible, remove the cuttings from the joint with a heel attached.

The geraniums arrived badly crushed, but, so far as I can make them out, the semi-double salmon is Beaute Poitevine and the single variety is Alice of Vincennes.

M. P.

Republic, Mo.—Mrs. Annie E. Howard, of the Howard Gladiolus Gardens, is increasing the planting of gladioli from 50,000 to 75,000 bulbs for the coming season. She will also plant 3,000 dahlias for cut flowers. The prospect for an early cut of gladioli looks good, as 10,000 are already planted.

AND YOUR EASTER MESSAGE WILL LIVE!

Easter and flowers—how inseparable! Through countless ages, the unfolding of bud and blossom has symbolized the life re-born.

Lilies of immaculate loveliness, roses in the glory of their beauty, flowering plants that perpetuate their joyous message—all are most appropriate tokens of Easter-tide.

Let flowers convey your Easter greetings. Nothing more sweetly significant, more subtly welcome, more universally convenient, than flowers.

WHOSE BIRTHDAY COMES IN

The florists displaying the "Say It with Flowers" emblem are members of the Society of American Florists and can serve you best in your purchase of flowers.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

HEADS are harder to hire than hands these days and are more in need.

HIGH prices have cloaked many business sins, which shrinking values will uncover.

AFTER Easter only a month to Mothers' day and then only three weeks to Memorial day.

CARNATION cuttings are cleaning up rapidly. The propagators will have little surplus to plant in the field.

ONCE 1,000 members was the dream of the F. T. D. Now it has nearly 1,500 and will try to get 2,500 by January 1, 1921.

SAYS a Chinese proverb: "A man without a smiling face must not open a shop." And certainly not a flower shop.

THERE will be more bedding stock than last year, but also better demand. People have become accustomed to the higher prices.

By turning profits in time of plenty into actual money, wise florists are providing a reserve to cover depreciation in the day of falling prices.

It has developed that there are more lilies for Easter than anyone thought, but the probability is the public will take them all at good prices.

THE grower of young stock who never sends out anything but plants of a quality he would be glad to receive if he were buying will not lack for orders.

WISCONSIN streams and swamps are flooded, making it difficult for the woodsmen to procure ferns or sphagnum moss, both of which are in short supply at most centers.

BANKS already are calling loans. It looks as though the autumn may bring conditions quite uncomfortable for the florist who has neglected collections and allowed his liabilities to accumulate.

EVERY week several advertisements miss getting into The Review because they do not reach this office until after the paper is on the press. Realizing the needs of the trade, The Review holds its forms open as late as possible, but asks advertisers, for their own benefit under existing mail conditions, to send orders and copy early. Sometimes it is cheaper to telegraph repeat instructions than to send them by special delivery mail.

WHAT the trade needs most of all to cultivate is quality, exactness, dependability.

APRIL and May should make a new record for the spring activities of the cut flower end of the business.

THE British trade has been compelled to abandon its coöperative advertising scheme for lack of sufficient support.

THE greatest weakness of the American people as a whole, and of florists in particular, is to say "It is good enough," rather than "How can I do it better?"

SUNDAY closing is to begin in Washington, D. C., the week following Easter. The list of florists who can do a week's business in six days is growing rapidly.

"WHEN east meets west"—they not only meet but so constantly intermingle in the columns of a trade paper with national circulation that distinction is out-of-date.

UNQUESTIONABLY the small-town florist has difficulty selling flowers at metropolitan prices, but he does not have metropolitan expenses and is the most comfortably situated member of the trade in these unusual times.

OPINION is expressed that the extravagant buying of the public is on the wane and lower prices are coming. The florist who has kept down his overhead cost as much as possible and maintained a firm hand in collections will not see danger in the change.

"CONSIDER the lilies, how they bloom." It develops that the giganteums forced for Easter are more heavily flowered than for many years. Apparently the lack of shipping facilities in 1918 resulted in better bulbs coming in 1919. Increases in floriferousness of anywhere from twenty-five to nearly 100 per cent are reported.

GETTING PROMPT ACTION.

Third class mail, such as advertising literature and other material carrying a 1-cent stamp, has been added to the list of indefinitely delayed mail in the local postoffice.—Newspaper Item.

Once again demonstrating the superior advertising facilities afforded by The Review.

The mailing-list of The Review, instead of being alphabetical by states and towns, is arranged by mail train routes. The papers thus go into mail sacks in such shape that the sacks can go directly to the trains without being sorted by postoffice clerks; the sacks are carted directly to the depots and do not go to the postoffice at all.

In these days of congested mails the system insures the dispatch of The Review practically at the same hour each week, whereas catalogues, circular matter and other forms of advertising may lie for many days before they even start on their journey.

THE NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

The report of the national publicity committee's meeting in January, published on page 71 of this issue, will give the trade a view of this work hitherto appreciated only by a few individuals closely connected with it.

First, one is struck by the lagging interest in the campaign, which has gone ahead at a pace with which the contributions have not kept up. The financial report of Secretary Young shows a deficit of nearly $14,000. Moreover, cancellations of subscriptions amount to the sum of $1,751, or more than three per cent of the total money so far subscribed. It was found necessary at the Cleveland meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F. to lend the publicity committee $10,000 in order that its work should not be held up.

Of the $61,045.94 received by the committee $44,716.08 has been expended for advertising in magazines, for which the publicity campaign was undertaken. The other items which consume the money subscribed may be seen from the statement of the disbursements.

To meet the problems of the publicity campaign, a great share of the time was devoted to the subject at the Cleveland meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F., January 23 and 24, account of which is given at length in the S. A. F. Journal for February-March, just being sent out. Ex-president J. F. Ammann's plan to organize the growers was presented and so favorably impressed the board that it was voted to pay his expenses in carrying out this project. Members of the S. A. F. will read the account of this meeting in The Journal with great interest, bearing so much as it does on the problem confronting the men who have carried on the national publicity campaign if they wish to proceed farther in the work.

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION.

At the meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F. at Cleveland, January 23 and 24, report of which is just being given to members of the society, it was decided to rent for the convention hall a large garage building now being built, since it was believed that it would house the display better than the new Masonic Temple, on Euclid avenue, which was the alternative. One floor of the building, providing 50,000 square feet of space, can be leased for eight days for $1,500. The location is one block from the Hotel Hollenden. The business sessions will be held in another room, away from the noise of the exhibition hall. It was voted to raise the price of space on the exhibition floor to 60 cents per square foot, with a minimum contract at $35.

At this meeting a new committee was appointed, the finance committee, on which H. P. Knoble was named for three years, C. C. Pollworth for two years and Joseph A. Manda for one year.

Since the board at present can only vote an expenditure of $100, a larger sum requiring the vote of the S. A. F. convention, an amendment was recommended for presentation next August raising the disbursing limit of the board to $1,000.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

It is not where a publication is printed, but where it is read, that counts:

We are receiving more orders than we can fill; it surely pays to advertise in The Review.—Thurwanger & Son, the Lake Street Floral Co., Kewanee, Ill., March 27, 1920.

Our ad in The Review sold us out for the time being.—A. C. Howell, Howell's Ornamental Nursery, Bloomington, Cal., March 23, 1920.

Please stop the ad, as we are flooded with orders.—J. F. Timler, the Northern Fern Co., Schofield, Wis., March 29, 1920.

The Northern Fern Co. had ordered its ad printed eight weeks, but was "flooded with orders" after two insertions.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Ernest M. Kreiger.

Ernest M. Kreiger, formerly superintendent of Wheeling park and an old member of the trade, died March 20, at the Ohio Valley hospital, at Wheeling, W. Va., following an operation for appendicitis. He was 58 years of age.

Mr. Kreiger was stricken a few days before his death, the operation being thought the only chance for his recovery. Besides his wife, he is survived by three children, two boys and a girl, also four brothers and two sisters.

The Market.

With a market well supplied with flowers and a demand which seems to absorb the arrivals, there is little change to be noted in general conditions. The supply of bulbous flowers continues to be heavy, but little except inferior stock is left over each day. Among the tulips, large quantities of the Murillo variety fail to find purchasers, due to noticeable inferiority; in fact, few good flowers of this once popular tulip have been seen this year. A few Darwins are seen, which help to swell the range of colors.

There are plenty of daffodils, mostly of the trumpet varieties. The old double daffodil does not appear to have been grown in the usual quantity this season. Just before Easter there appears to be a slight shortening in supply, growers evidently being desirous of holding for Easter all that they can. Plantsmen, generally, are nearly all sold out, so that there is not likely to be much surplus stock and retailers are looking for a better demand for cut flowers than is usually experienced at this festival time.

Roses are plentiful and, on the whole, move well, with prices practically unchanged. Hybrid tea roses are of good quality, much long-stemmed stock being of the exhibition grade.

Carnations have been in larger supply and improvement is noted in the quality. Some of the best stock reached the 8-cent mark last week.

Cattleyas are not in good supply. The variety Trianae has about finished its season and Mossiae is two or three weeks late this season. Again, without a doubt, the growers are conserving their cuts for Easter. Gardenias are still plentiful and any surplus finds an outlet through the street men, who are handling them in company with violets and sweet peas.

Lily of the valley is not quite so plentiful, although the supply is more than sufficient. Prices for the best stock advanced to $6 per hundred last week. Longiflorum lilies are plentiful at 15 to 25 cents per flower and bud.

There is a great abundance of sweet peas, with a large quantity of inferior stock, showing signs of an ending of the winter crops. On the other hand, some arrivals embrace the finest flowers ever seen in this market, with large florets and stems fully sixteen to eighteen inches long, many evidently new varieties.

Supplies of lilac and acacia are somewhat limited and meet a good demand in consequence. A few blue lupines also command ready sale at $1.50 to $2 per bunch.

Miscellaneous flowers combine in heavy supply. The trailing arbutus is the latest arrival in this section and is taken freely by the street men. Calendulas, mignonette, snapdragons, ludleias, daisies, pansies, wallflowers and larkspurs are among the daily offerings.

Various Notes.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., was a visitor at the Boston show last week. He says that the exhibit of new Japanese azaleas, staged by the Arnold Arboretum, would alone have been well worth the trip. He describes them as embracing almost every shade of color found among the sweet peas, a most magnificent collection and presenting a splendid commercial proposition.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., was a guest at the banquet of the Canadian Club March 18, on which occasion he exhibited a handsome vase of the new Canadian rose, Frank W. Dunlop.

Everyone connected with the recent flower show in New York is greatly pleased with its success and it is understood that when all matters in connection with it are settled, there will be room for satisfaction over the financial outcome.

C. H. Peters & Sons, the well known carnation growers, of Hempstead, L. I., have set apart some of their glass for the production of roses and have already planted benches.

L. J. Reuter, of Boston, who had a trade exhibit at the New York show, was greatly concerned for a few days over the loss of one of his order books, but happily it was eventually found at his hotel. Prof. E. A. White, however, still mourns the loss of his overcoat. No other casualties were reported in connection with the event.

The greenhouses of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I., are being dismantled.

Marius Matheron, of Baldwin, L. I., is planning to erect a large work shed in connection with his establishment. He is cutting some of the finest sweet peas coming to the New York market and is in crop with some fine Aviator carnations, which displace Beacon. He also has some Nassau, a new light red carnation, a most floriferous variety of unusually sturdy growth.

The American Dahlia Society is planning to rent space to commercial exhibitors at its annual exhibition, which is to be held this year on the conservatory floor of the Hotel Pennsylvania, September 27 to 29.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

Ideal weather last week brought the people out in large numbers and, as a result, the demand for flowers for the home has been on the increase. The wholesalers found business good last week and roses have gone up in price the last few days. In carnations Laddie is best now and holds up well. All other varieties, with the exception of Enchantress and Enchantress Supreme, arrive in good condition. The latter at this time of the year ought to be cut before maturing. Prices on all items except roses have remained about the same, with the prospect that Easter will bring about a fifty per cent increase.

Violets are at an end in this section, the warm weather having put on the finishing touches. Some fair quality stock is being shipped in. Contrary to expectations, those coming from the coast are arriving in good condition.

Greens are not quite equal to the demand. Careful use has been necessary by the retailers to make the stock last until the next shipment from the south arrives.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has returned from the east. Mr. Critchell says the Frank W. Dunlop rose is the rose of the future and that those displayed at the New York show were wonderful.

Julius Baer is rushed with funeral work these days.

Robert Kelly's windows are always pleasing to behold. Last week displays of spring flowers were arranged with rare judgment.

H. W. Sheppard has booked another large wedding for April 10. Some large floral pieces ordered by Cincinnati and Cleveland newspapers were arranged here last week.

Visitors last week were C. P. Brunner, Springfield, O.; Wm. Gerlach, Piqua, O.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Bloy, Detroit; W. H. Hanson, of the E. C. Ameling Co., Chicago; S. B. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago; Mr. Fletcher, of the Rolf Zetlitz Co., Lima, O.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market has been experiencing the proverbial lull before the storm, but this must not be taken as saying that business has been poor. Quite the contrary, business has been excellent for the season of the year. The resumption of express service has proved all that was needed to bring a large number of out-of-town buyers back into the market. Their purchases have not been so heavy as earlier in the season, because the penultimate week of Lent never is a big flower time, but the number of orders going out each day has been greater than ever before at this time of year and prices on most flowers have been fairly good. There are reports that carnations have averaged the growers only a little more, and sometimes a little less, than last year, but nearly all other flowers have been producing higher averages than a year ago.

It does not do much good to say anything about the condition of the supply in such a week as that ended March 27. The market closed in a well cleaned up condition, but it was in many cases due to flowers being held at the greenhouses in anticipation of the big extra demand this week. There was no shortage of anything in cut flowers last week; indeed, if a wholesaler ran short he could get as much as he wanted by telephoning to the greenhouses and intimating that the flowers would bring as much that day as those same flowers would at a later date.

This report is written on the eve of the great Easter rush. During the last days of last week and during the first part of the present week orders have been pouring into the market in tremendous volume. It is impossible March 30 to say how the total compares with other years or with the available supply of stock, but it looks as though there will be as much business as can conveniently be handled. One of the best indications of this is that the city buyers have become anxious to place orders, for everything except lilies. In a general way the situation may be sized up like this: There have proved to be more lilies than were expected and the buyers have taken hold less freely than it was thought they would, the price appearing to have been a deterrent. The result is that there is no longer any thought of a shortage of lilies. There will be enough to go around. How closely they will clean up at the quoted prices depends on how the rest of the market acts. If there proves to be a shortage of other flowers the lilies will sell, and sell well. Otherwise, something unpleasant may happen. There seems little probability of an oversupply of roses; these look to be the shortest item in the list, especially by comparison with the demand. Carnations are in heavy crop and of fine quality, but not being ordered in sufficient quantities to indicate a shortage; it looks as though the carnation orders will be filled in full. There are oceans of sweet peas and the salability depends on the quality. Bulbous stock is not plentiful. There are moderate supplies of jonquils of the better varieties. Early tulips are nearly gone and only a few growers are shipping Darwins. There is little interest in violets, as their season is nearing its end.

Greens of nearly all kinds are scarce, shipments having come only slowly.

The express service, outgoing, has become normal. After giving pick-up service only until 2 p. m., for several days, the company restored full service until nightfall for the Easter rush. Most of the wholesalers are making preparations for maintaining the flow of outgoing shipments up to the late trains Saturday night.

Our Good Luck.

Numerous inquiries having come as the result of scare heads in the daily newspapers, it can be said that there is no news regarding storm damage to the local florists. The tornado which visited the northwest section of Chicago on Palm Sunday hit no greenhouses. Sensational reports seem to have been current at other places regarding the damage here, but the losses to growers were comparatively slight.

The storm, which was one of the hardest blows ever experienced in this section, followed a curved path which carried it within a few hundred yards of some of the big greenhouse sections, but, by a miracle, it missed them all. Striking at Elgin, the storm moved southward as it traveled east and skirted Elmhurst and Maywood. Turning north after passing Maywood, it missed the establishment of Sam Pearce by little more than a block and went out onto the lake at Wilmette only a few hundred yards south and east of the greenhouse colony there. The Wittbold establishment at Edgebrook was only a short distance out of the path of the storm and the Poehlmann ranges, at Morton Grove, were near enough so that the hail which followed broke about 1,000 panes. It constituted the trade's heaviest loss, thus far reported. Kirscht Bros. and other Morton Grove growers also lost a little glass by hail.

The gable ends of two houses of Wietor Bros., in Rogers Park, were blown in. One house was empty, just being made ready for replanting.

At Batavia, the Batavia Greenhouse Co. lost a gable and a little broken glass.

A. T. Pyfer is again on the job after having had a week's tussle with neuralgia.

Frank Schramm and George Ball expect to have their new Moline 6-cylinder cars for Easter.

L. R. Bohannon says he does not believe in bargain sales any more. In his experience the public is willing to pay the price for flowers and looks with some suspicion on anything offered below the recognized market price.

The A. L. Randall Co. has been receiving considerable quantities of Philadelphia Beauties in fine condition. They have sold readily.

O. P. Bassett, at his home at Pasadena, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday anniversary March 31.

The class in floriculture at the Illinois State Agricultural College spent March 27 at Chicago. There were twenty-five students piloted by Professor Howard and Walter Poehlmann, son of Adolph Poehlmann. After visiting the wholesale section in the morning to see how flowers are sold, the afternoon was spent in inspecting several of the prominent greenhouse establishments to see how flowers are grown.

In last Sunday's big wind A. Miller and some companions were driving in a Ford in the vicinity of Dunning. The storm tipped their car on its side, but they remained in its shelter until the rain had passed.

Mike Fink invested $1,600 in lily bulbs and says he will be fortunate if he gets the $600 back, so it seems not all the lilies proved bonanzas.

Tim Matchen was in from Indiana Harbor March 29. He says business is so good he gets to town much less frequently than in other seasons.

After having been at home only a few weeks Ernst C. Amling and his wife are found to have contracted severe cases of the California fever. As there is only one remedy, Mr. Amling has decided to offer his Maywood greenhouse establishment for sale. The place has paid him handsomely. When a purchaser is found who has the necessary capital, removal to California will follow.

Joseph Steiskal, formerly with the E. C. Amling Co., has joined the force of Wehrman & Wehrman, successors to Mrs. Fred Weber. The roses now reach market so perfectly graded they need no rehandling.

Azaleas no longer are among the regular items of Easter stock; indeed, a good azalea is quite a novelty, because of the war and then the quarantine. But the Fleischman Floral Co. has a large and finely flowered if not perfectly shaped plant of the old favorite, Vervaeneana, as the central feature of one of its windows. It is a plant grown on at Eureka, Cal., and flowered by Frank Lechslin.

It is about a year since Amling Bros., Ernst and Paul, took over the greenhouses of Hoerber Bros. Co., at Desplaines. It has been a busy year, as the place has been almost completely replanted with newer varieties of roses, but in spite of the extra cost and reduced production there has been a good profit on the original cash investment of $90,000, with the range now approaching tip top shape. Another good season should make the place a big winner for these energetic young men.

A. Lange, in addition to pre-Easter advertising in the newspapers, used a #### Rock Flower Gardens.

William L. Rock, president of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., has bought from Marvin H. Gates, trustee for the Gates estate, 133 acres of land south of Independence for $60,000.

Mr. Rock bought the land for the Rock Flower Gardens, Inc., capitalized for $100,000. The corporation is entirely separate from the W. L. Rock Flower Co. William L. Rock is chairman of the board, W. Lawrence Rock is president and Wiley Pendleton, of Independence, Mo., is secretary and treasurer.

The corporation will not grow flowers for seeds and there will be no greenhouses, except one or two for the propagation of young stock, but there will be in time immense fields of everything in the flower line that will grow in this climate. Mr. Rock says the soil is the best that this country affords and for the last fifteen years the ground has been used only for stock purposes.

W. Lawrence Rock, who recently finished school and was for a time in the retail store with his father, is now devoting his entire time to the new venture under his father's direction. Buildings are being torn down and the ground is being plowed by a Sampson tractor, which the corporation has bought. In order to make the venture pay for itself at least in part, the land will be farmed for a few years. One hundred acres will be put in corn, oats and wheat under the direction of a practical farmer. For Easter lilies he will charge $7.50 per dozen cut and 75 cents per bloom on plants.

P. A. Manson, manager of the greenhouses of the Pinehurst Floral Co., at Pleasant Hill, Mo., was in the city Wednesday, March 24. Mr. Manson has bought a 5-passenger Paige car. This company will have a few American Beauties for Easter, as well as an abundance of spring plants and cut flowers. Its Kaiserin and Richmond roses are now in good crop. It has bought a new Gary truck, which is making two trips a day from the range at Pleasant Hill this week, bringing stock for Easter.

Ed A. Humfeld has a great many orders for church decorations for Easter Sunday. He has had some of these churches every Easter and Christmas for twenty-five years.

R. S. Brown & Son expect a heavy season as soon as the weather will permit outdoor planting. They will supply some of the retail florists with Easter stock and will take care of their own trade.

Mrs. Ida Hudspeth is starting in business in Pittsburg, Kan. She was in the city last week buying from the wholesalers and preparing to open the Post Shop, as she will call her store.

C. E. Thomas, of the Rosery, and William Wade, local manager of the Pinehurst Floral Co., motored to Pleasant Hill Sunday, March 21. Henry Kusik also went down in his car Sunday.

Miss Katherine Dix, of Leavenworth, Kan., was a recent visitor in the city.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

Business has been brisk during the last week. There has been a better supply of flowers and the outlook is that there will be plenty of flowers for Easter. These will cost more. Lilies are 18 to 25 cents per bloom wholesale. All the greenhouses are well stocked and there are some exceptionally fine lilies, roses and carnations.

The demand has been keeping up and the retailers generally have been busy. There have been some big orders for designs, the more expensive ones being in demand. Many of the orders are for shipment by express.

Various Notes.

F. K. Prouse, Brampton, Ont., dealer in florists' supplies, has opened an office in the Yonge street arcade, Toronto.

Visitors recently include Charles Scrim, of Ottawa, Ont., E. B. Hamilton, of the West Floral Co., London, Ont., and T. G. Davis, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont.

T. Duggan, manager of the Dale Estate, Brampton, who was ill in the hospital at Toronto, has returned to his home.

Many of the florists are making special displays of Dunlop roses this week. J. H. Dunlop has received the congratulations of hosts of friends as a result of the winnings of the Frank W. Dunlop rose at the New York show.

James Canning is now with J. J. Higgins, at his Yonge street store.

Ernest Schwartzsharp, a grower at Miller & Sons' greenhouses, has gone to Detroit, where he will be with John M. Carey.

Some time ago the Retail Florists' Association planned to invite the growers to meet with them, but the meeting was postponed on account of so much illness. The meeting will be held April

Roses of the Better Kind

We find so far this season the demand is mostly for Roses of the better kind.

Your trade wants the better variety of Roses, and is willing to pay you a good price for them.

For the balance of the season we will be very strong on good Roses.

We will have Russell in quantity. The best of all the pink on the market today.

It is a variety that will ship most any distance at any time of the year.

Premier Columbia Shawyer
Sunburst Ophelia

are other varieties that we recommend to you. These varieties are called for more than any other.

BEAUTIES

The Supply will be sufficient from now on to take care of all orders. You will find the quality of our Beauties somewhat better than usual at this time of the season.

Most of the stores carry a regular supply of Beauties, and we are in a position to arrange with any of our customers for a regular supply of Beauties for the balance of the season.

We are headquarters for Beauties in this market, and you will find our stock equal to, if not better than any other here.

19 and it is hoped that it will be productive of much good. It is realized that if retailers and growers pull together, much can be done for the betterment of the industry. It is hoped that there will be a big turnout April 19 and that the friendliest relationship will exist between them. J. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been more than usually unsteady for the week before Easter. Sometimes this has been a good week; this time it has been a bad week. The weather has changed to spring. The crocuses are in bloom outdoors, but there is no spring weather in the cut flower market. It is heavy and dull and listless, closing a little stronger at the end of the week than it was at the opening or during the middle of the week.

Sweet peas were the leading flower. They were so exceedingly plentiful that they depressed the other members of the group. The effect of the deluge of fragrant loveliness has been to lower the Easter quotations. Everybody feels that the sweet pea crop will last until Easter at least. This city has never seen such a crop of peas before; many of them are wonderfully fine.

Easter lilies are the next most important flower today after sweet peas. They have not been in oversupply this week. Only the scouts of the big army are here, but everybody knows that we shall have lilies this year, in distinct contrast to last season. It is also generally known that they will be good and so abundant that the market is almost certain to break at the close of the shipping April 2. Enough lilies have been grown here this season to supply the entire eastern seaboard and the success of the lilies depends on whether the eastern seaboard wants them. Anybody who could see them would want them. They are extremely fine. Four of the six leading lily growers have confessed that their lilies are the best they ever grew. The other two would probably do so were they asked.

Outside of sweet peas and lilies, there is no heavy crop of anything at present. There is likewise no business, which makes a moderate supply of flowers seem excessive.

Indications point to a good Easter, but it will not commence in the cut flower market until Lamb's day has passed.

The Effect of 43.

Quarantine No. 43, which went into operation March 29, provides that in this state and in three others certain cut flowers and plants shall not be sent out, except by special permit, from districts infested by the corn borer. These cut flowers and plants include chrysanthemums, dahlias, gladioli, asters and cosmos.

The Making of the Market.

When a florist has something to sell, either to other florists or at retail, the market price is first ascertained, then a price is set on the plants or flowers to be sold. How is the market price de-terminated? The correct answer is, of course, by the laws of supply and demand. That is merely a general answer. The details are rather interesting. Take, for example, the Easter prices of cut flowers. Each of the leading wholesalers, separately and without consulting any of the others, issues a price list of his flowers that he expects to have to sell. This price list is made after getting reports from all their growers of what they expect to have for Easter and after examining all the statistics of past Easters. Usually these prices agree pretty much on the principal flowers. Sometimes they vary as much as twenty-five per cent. When all the wholesalers and independent growers decide on the asking prices they are submitted to the retailers. If the retailers consider the asking prices too high, they bargain. Here is where judgment counts. Bargaining at such a time may save money; it may also lose the stock and force the use of inferior quality or the cancellation of orders.

The asking price is based on securing the largest total receipts for the crop. The points considered are the size of the crop, its probable popularity and what amount the buyers can afford to pay and make a fair profit. It is considered important to clean up all good stock on the last shipping day, Good Friday. The object of the buyer is to secure all the stock required at a fair price and, above all, in good condition. To do this, various methods are employed. Some buyers encourage competition among the sellers, others put their whole order in one place, still others order certain things in certain places.

A "hot wave," a "cold snap," an unexpectedly heavy cut, an oversanguine count—all these things affect the market prices. Most of all they are affected by the condition of the stock itself when it reaches the market. Given good stock, the seller is encouraged to ask and the buyer to pay good prices for it.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Market.

The local wholesale cut flower market was in a splendid condition every day last week. At the six wholesale markets all seasonable stock was quite plentiful and prices were according to quotations in small lots, but cheaper prices prevailed for lots of 1,000. The approach of Easter has raised quotations considerably.

During the early part of last week it rained daily, but in the latter part the sun shone and the weather was quite warm. The indications at the beginning of this week were that stock would be plentiful for every Easter demand and, judging from the appearance of the leading retail stores, the supply of blooming plants will be large. A record-breaking business is expected by all.

The growers all seem to be on crop in cut stock, especially in roses, carnations, sweet peas and bulbous stock, and all will be of exceptionally fine quality.

Last week the retail business was not rushing; this was shown at the wholesale markets, as none cared to load up much. This week is showing a difference; at the beginning of the week the wholesalers said that they had plenty of orders ahead from outside points.

Easter lilies are arriving and all markets will have an abundance of cut stock in these at 30 cents per bloom and bud. Callas will be plentiful, at about the same price.

Extra fancy sweet peas will be abundant and not high in price; $3 per hundred is quoted for the extra choice. Carnations should not be over $12 per hundred for choice and down to $6 per hundred for the inferior grades. Roses are fine and prime stock will hold up at high prices; there will be plenty in all grades. All other seasonable stock will be sufficient for all demands.

All kinds of greens have been scarce of late, but the supply is increasing.

Wind Storm Wreckage.

The wind storm Sunday, March 28, did much damage to property of members of the trade.

A large plate glass window, valued at $700, in Grimm & Gorly's new store was blown in, somewhat spoiling the effect of their opening Monday, March 29. It was midday before the damage could be repaired.

The firebrick wall of the William J. Patton Floral Co., 1300 Pine street, was blown down, interfering greatly with business Monday.

Out in the county, also, considerable damage was done, many of the growers suffering loss in glass.

F. J. Foster reports a heavy loss at his Marcus avenue greenhouses, as several dozen sashes were blown away.

The public parks lost many fine trees, especially in Forest park and Tower Grove park.

Bowling League Meets.

The "Say It with Flowers" Bowling League had a great time Wednesday night, March 24, when the four teams met, the Roses and Carnations fighting for first place and the Sweet Peas and Daisies struggling to keep out of last place. The contest ended in the Carnations winning the odd game from the Roses and the Sweet Peas doing the same with the Daisies.

The scores were as follows:

Carnations.		Roses.
F. Hermann.....	480	J. J. Beneke.....	387
Albert Gums.....	484	O. Hahn.....	422
J. Krager.....	477	George Berner.....	389

The Roses are still leading and the Daisies are still in last place. There was no bowling this week, because of the Easter rush.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its next meeting April 8 in Vandervoort's new music hall. The meeting will be featured by prominent speakers on the bond issue and a musical program. Easter business will be discussed and the meeting will close with refreshments in the tea room. The largest attendance of the year is expected.

Flower Shop, has returned home after a ten days' visit to her old home in Jackson, Tenn.

The board walk charity entertainment at the Coliseum, beginning April 15 and continuing for one week, will have daily contributions from the trade for the floral booth, and the publicity committee will erect a large sign showing the slogan, "Say It with Flowers."

The big plant stands in Union market are doing fast business and are ablaze with blooming plants. Carr & Richardson report that they expect a banner season in plants, seeds and nursery stock.

The florists' publicity committee held a meeting March 23, but, owing to the small attendance of members, little business of interest was taken up. The advertising committee had completed its work and submitted proofs of the page advertisements for Sunday's Globe-Democrat and for the issue of the St. Louis Star for March 31, which were approved. The total cost for both will be $1,100. The next meeting of this committee will be held at headquarters, 1316 Pine street, April 13, when all members are requested to be present.

Joseph Frank, of Kresge's floral department, greatly relieved the market last week by buying up the surplus stock after the morning's sales, and he reports big bargain sales daily on carnations, sweet peas and roses.

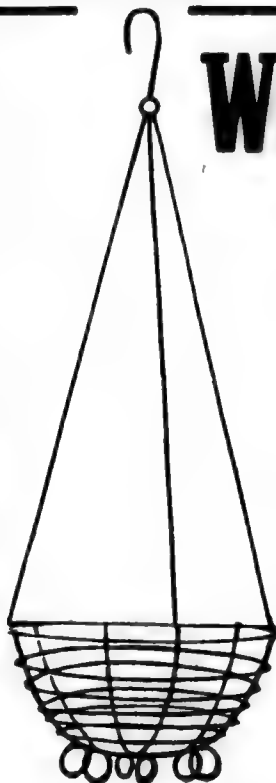

George Angermueller reports large shipping orders last week in florists' Easter supplies for western points.

W. A. Rowe, president of the W. A. Rowe Floral Co., spent a few days in Chicago last week attending to details relative to the building of his big range of houses this summer. Roses will be grown in this range.

The new store of Grimm & Gorly, at 712 Washington street, had its opening Monday, March 29. The first and second floors are now completed; the equipment is ample and up-to-date. The force now numbers forty.

The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards, mother of W. J. Edwards, Kirkwood, March 23, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

ers will hold an important meeting April 7 at the Forest park greenhouses. L. Baumann and Hugo Schaff will lead interesting discussions. Arrangements will be completed for meeting the expenses of entertaining the National Association of Gardeners.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will meet April 7. The place of meeting will be announced by Joseph Deutschmann, the secretary, in his regular notices. Much important business will come up for discussion. J. J. B.

William C. Stuckmeyer, grower for Charles Beyer, is going to start in the wholesale business early in April.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Spring is in the air, snow and ice are fast disappearing, early bulbous plants are blooming and it looks as though our long, hard winter was about over. If the weather man will spare us another Easter snow storm we shall be most devoutly thankful. Good weather is what we need now to make the Easter plant and cut flower trade break all records.

A slight hardening in prices is noted. In the case of violets it is most pronounced and these are now quoted at $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred, with a further advance likely later in the week. Roses have not changed materially and sell all the way from $3 to $20, except some fancy Hadley and other special varieties. Carnations show little advance as yet, the general run going at $4 to $6. Sweet peas are abundant and sell from 50 cents to $3 per hundred. There is a large supply of bulbous material and this is a little lower in price.

Snapdragons arrive freely. While some select spikes make $2 a dozen, there are others which are hardly salable. Marguerites, calendulas, polyanthus, pansies and mignonette are all plentiful. Some nice long-stemmed ranunculuses and anemones are seen. Callas are abundant; so are lilies. There is a complete change in quotations for lilies. They are offered as low as $15 per hundred and at the present time $20 seems to be the general quotation. The warm weather last week hustled laggards along and a large supply is now available.

There are enough orchids for all calls and prices remain reasonable. Gardenias are more abundant. Of pot flowering plants a splendid assortment is offered, including lilies, rambler and hybrid perpetual roses, genistas, ericas, acacias, Dutch bulbous stock, pelargoniums, hydrangeas, calceolarias and many other varieties.

National Growers' Association

A meeting in the interests of the National Flower Growers' Association was held at the New American House March 23 and some seventy-five of the leading local growers were present. William C. Stickel presided and introduced J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., as the first speaker of the evening. Mr. Ammann said that the National Flower Growers' Association hoped to get as many as twenty local branches organized before the Cleveland convention. He asked how unorganized growers could deal with organized labor. It was regrettable that so few young men were now following the business and we should do something to remedy this. An organization was needed, especially in time of gluts, to regulate prices. A milk producer knows ahead what he will get; there was no good reason why a florist or plant grower should not also know. An organization of this kind was just as possible in Boston as in Chicago and New York. Retailers support the new association. Growers, it was evident, must pay as much as mills and factories if they were to retain their men. To do this successfully, they must organize.

W. R. Pierson said that he had branches in mind for New York, Boston, the Connecticut valley and Albany, the latter to take in members as far away as Poughkeepsie and Utica, N. Y. He made an effective plea for the new association. Both he and Mr. Ammann were heartily applauded.

It was unanimously voted to appoint temporary officers and later to perfect a permanent organization in Boston. W. C. Stickel was appointed temporary and J. Frank Edgar, treasurer. Delegates were selected to attend the Cleveland convention, as follows: George T. Elliott, Arthur S. Parker, Thomas Roland, Herman H. Bartsch and S. J. Goddard. About fifty of the growers present joined the association and, with more recent accessions, a strong local branch is assured.

Various Notes.

All the growers, retailers and wholesalers anticipate a record Easter business and the fine weather we have lately enjoyed insures a much larger supply of plants and flowers than at one time seemed possible.

W. Dunlop attracted much attention last week. Business has been good of late and everything points to a bumper Easter business.

The W. W. Edgar Co. has 10,000 pots of lilies in the pink of condition for Easter, also a splendid lot of roses, hydrangeas, bulbous flowers and genistas. Darwin tulips are particularly well done here.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, has the finest lot of French hydrangeas I have seen this season. He also has an excellent batch of herbaceous calceolarias in bloom.

The Boston Florists' Association will hold its next meeting at the Parker House April 6. Professor De Chant will speak on "Coöperation."

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held April 20. W. N. Craig will speak on "Some Seasonable Thoughts and Suggestions."

Two big consignments of palms to be used in the local churches for Palm Sunday were held up by a longshoremen's strike and it looked at one time as if they would not be available. Finally, however, the strikers reluctantly agreed to move these Easter supplies and all churches had an ample supply.

Professor Charles S. Sargent, director of the Arnold Arboretum, threw open his private greenhouses to the public March 18, to allow an opportunity to see the new Kurume Japanese azaleas for the first time in bloom. There were 130 plants in full flower. The exhibition remained opened until Monday, March 22, when the plants were taken to the flower show.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has received the contract for a fine range of greenhouses for the private estate of L. D. Towle, Newton. The main range will be 200 feet long, with a palm house in the center; there will be three wings, each 100 feet long. Considerable space will be devoted to choice orchids, on which Mr. Towle is a specialist.

Seed stores have had a busy time of late. During the last week the flower show drew crowds of visiting florists and gardeners and they brought a big volume of business. Local nurseries are just starting to dig trees and shrubs. The late beginning will make the shipping season a comparatively brief one.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

"There's many a dark and stormy morning that turns into a bright day," said Herman Bartsch, of the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass., adding, as he pointed to a pile of new order books, "we are prepared, not only for the Easter rush, but for a continuous rush afterwards." Frank Edgar has plans for a large increase of glass area. The business warrants expansion, but the high cost of material calls for cautious progress.

Prof. David Lumsden, of the department of floriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., has a class of sixty embryo florists, girls and boys, and hopes to send out some first-class material at an early date.

Commenting in tones of highest admiration of our botanical gardens, Alexander Simpson, superintendent of the department of botany at Toronto University, observed that it is the aim of the Canadian authorities to create a garden patterned on the lines of those at Kew and Harvard, combining the two and endeavoring to improve upon both. He is much pleased with the reception given him during his visit to the American gardens.

Amid the magnificent collection of plants exhibited at the Boston flower show was a unique group of hybrid calceolarias, grown by F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, Mass. They were something out of the ordinary and catchy.

H. Suzuki, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., Japan, was caught on the fly, so to speak, en route to Europe in the interests of his firm. Commenting upon the lily prospects, Mr. Suzuki predicted high prices for another season at least and said that we are partly to blame for it through our eagerness to secure stocks at first hand, which has aroused suspicion among the Japanese farmers that the call for bulbs here is abnormal. He said that until more cautious steps are taken, we shall continue to foot the bill of inflated prices.

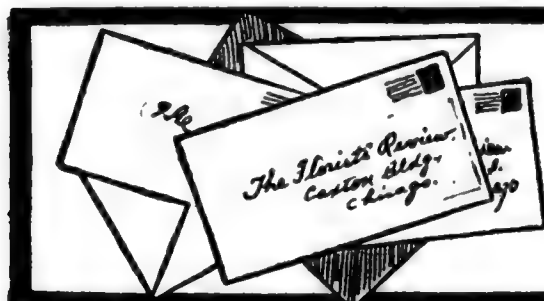

C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is working up a fine stock of Japanese cherries and the like, at his farm on the Hudson, where the trees are found to be perfectly hardy.

First impressions are the strongest and the guests who heard Frank W. Dunlop, of Toronto, Ont., respond to the toast of Canadian florists at the banquet given by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society during the flower show at Boston agree that this honored sire possesses a worthy scion.

W. E. Cahill, of Roman J. Irwin's traveling force, observed, while speeding a party of visitors attending the Boston flower show around to his various sources of supplies, that "the mileage cost is about even, but with my Buick I can cover almost one-half more territory in a given time; prestige and publicity," added the wide-awake Billy, "beyond computation."

Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., suffered a loss when a part of a house was crushed in by an avalanche of snow from a roof. Much stock was lost, but some compensation is seen in an exceptionally large amount of stock, which will sell at Easter, according to Henry Schrade, an interested visitor at the shows and recently returned from Europe. W. M.

Flint, Mich.—In The Review of March 25, page 136, it was stated that the Hasselbring brothers, who trade as Hasselbring, Florist, "have retailed only at the greenhouses." This was in error, as the firm owns a store building in the heart of the business district and has had a retail establishment in the center of the city for many years. The new store in the Durant Hotel building is their second store. The firm is building up a large telegraph delivery business, in and out.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The season is proving a most trying one for the wholesaler who ships most of his stock, since the frequently recurring rains, followed by wind, destroy or injure a great deal of stock. While carnations grown under such conditions may be all right for funeral work locally, if packed they are useless by the time they reach customers a few hundred miles away. The greenhouse carnations do not begin to fill the demand and altogether the shipper's lot is not a happy one.

The retailers have had an exceptionally good week, in both funeral work and box trade, and the general feeling is that the Easter business is going to be particularly good. Easter lilies have come along in fine shape and a great majority will make the holiday. Cut lilies will no doubt be scarce. Roses are good and the growers promise a good crop. Provided the week before Easter has fine weather, there will be plenty of tulips, Spanish irises and other late bulbous stock. A large proportion of the rhododendrons are coming too early and a shortage of really good plants seems almost inevitable, though there are some small plants. Valley and orchids are a little more plentiful, but still far below the demand. With the lengthening days small flowers of the hardier spring kinds are improving in quantity and quality. The scarcity of plumosus continues, much of the cut which arrives being of poor quality. Other greens are about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

After a buying trip to San Francisco, Arthur Gleave, proprietor of Gleave's Flower Shop, Santa Barbara, paid a visit to this city to complete his Easter buying. He reports business as extra good for the season, with excellent Easter prospects. Mr. Gleave has purchased the greenhouses which were formerly the property of J. Whipple, with whom Mr. Gleave was associated before opening his present store.

The case of Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo against S. Murata & Co. in the Superior court was decided in favor of the defendant, as reported on page 98 of this issue.

A visit to Tony Tassano's new establishment between Burbank and Glendale, in the San Fernando valley, makes it evident that he has made no mistake as to soil or location. Something over ten acres was purchased and Mr. Tassano has already built a lath house covering nearly two acres and planted it to plumosus and Sprengerii. At the lower end, adjoining the boulevard, asters, dahlias and other showy flowers for cutting will be grown and, with the hundreds of automobiles passing daily, this will be an excellent advertisement.

F. Burki and his son occasionally visit the market and stores. Mr. Burki is delighted with his new home and is greatly interested in the progress of horticulture hereabouts.

Considerable alterations have been going on at the store of F. Lichtenberg in preparation for Easter. These will give a larger workroom and a large dark room in the rear for the conservation of stock.

Two palls were among the funeral orders at the store of Purdie & Co. one day last week. This firm is putting a fine new delivery car on the road. Mr. Purdie, in connection with the publicity committee of the Florists' Club, is preparing large banners suitably inscribed for use on the retailers' delivery cars between now and Easter.

Mrs. Patterson has returned from the east, having spent about a year in New York. She is helping out for the Easter season at Darling's Shop, but intends to return east later.

H. C. Morgan, recently of the staff of F. Lichtenberg's store, is now with the Dostal-Wolters Flower Shop.

The Alexandria Florist is making a fine display of orchids.

A grand cut of roses is coming from the greenhouses to Wright's Flower Shop. The Easter lilies are looking fine and will be quite on time for the holiday.

H. B. Richards.

The Market.

Last week found the local market lower in cut stock than heretofore. Roses have dropped off about twenty-five per cent recently. Violets are holding up extremely well and the blooms are unusually good for this late in the season. However, the end is in sight. The pickers report that the foliage is beginning to get thick, which makes the picking difficult and indicates the end of the season.

Lilies of the valley are scarce and higher; in fact, these desirable flowers have increased in price over 200 per cent in the last week. The supply of roses, carnations, Easter lilies and most other seasonable stock is generally satisfacdils are concerned, but rather an unusually heavy demand.

After being used extensively in decorating work for several weeks, acacia blooms are about gone and fruit blossoms are scarce. Lilacs made their appearance in the shops last week and were well received. Camellias are in evidence, but the supply is rather light and the prices are comparatively high. A strong demand is reported for the rose camellia in this section.

Orchids are scarce and, under the pressure of a strong demand, prices are on the rise. The sweet pea crop of California, which has been so greatly handicapped because of the dry weather, shows improvement since the recent rains. Dahlia bulbs are having an active shipping season. As Easter approaches, the outlook continues favorable for a fine supply of flowers and a banner business.

Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., who takes an active interest in all matters of general concern to the city, has been honored by being elected president of the newly formed central bureau of San Francisco organizations, the purpose of which is to foster the advertising of San Francisco in the eastern cities. Mr. Rossi has been doing effective work as president of the Downtown Association.

Mr. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, has been riding around lately in a new Pierce-Arrow car. Business at their establishment is reported exceptionally good for this time of the year.

Business has been about normal. There is a good demand for stock, but there appears to be an oversupply at present, almost a glut on the market. Everyone is expecting record business this week. The growers in this locality are showing some fine Easter lilies and it is safe to predict that they will clean up in good shape. Weather conditions have been ideal for growing and blooming. Some fine Darwin tulips are now on the market and will be more plentiful from now on.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Stock in seasonable flowers is plentiful and the demand is good. Roses of good quality are arriving and carnations are improving after the long period of cloudy weather. Sweet peas are of excellent quality and find a ready sale. Snapdragons are again obtainable and prove as popular as ever. Daffodils are being shipped from the coast, as most of the local supply is ended. The demand for pot plants has shown an increase over last year.

Easter lilies are going to be scarce; a number of the growers will be able to bring only about fifty per cent into bloom in time for Easter.

Funeral work is about normal, since the flu is almost over.

Various Notes.

Frank Spoerhase, who until his service in the army was with the Spokane Florist, is now employed by A. J. Burt.

Mr. Moeller, of Astoria, Ore., has accepted a position with Donart's House of Flowers. This firm has bought a new Maxwell delivery car.

The song, "Say It with Flowers," is being shown on the screen at the Liberty theater. Each florist has a slide, which gives a view of either the exterior or the interior of his store, appearing with the song. Recently all of the trade were there in a body and threw flowers among the people while the song was being sung.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Cheering Letter.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 24, 1920.

My dear Mr. Young: At our convention held in Lansing last week, a donation to the national publicity campaign was suggested. As this is the first year of our organization, our treasury would hardly stand a suitable donation to this worthy cause. Nevertheless, we were able to raise $127, by popular subscription, which I herewith enclose. Please credit this to the Michigan State Florists' Association. I trust that in the years to come this association will be able to support this campaign to a far greater degree. Respectfully yours, W. S. Wells, treasurer Michigan State Florists' Association.

At the recent meeting of the publicity committee in New York a number of specimen page advertisements in colors, appearing during the last few weeks in the magazines, were offered for inspection. These advertisements were inserted by different manufacturers and flowers were featured in connection with the specialties advertised, dependence on the flowers for attraction to the advertisements being most obvious. A well known hat manufacturer, whose issue of handsome poster cards drawing attention to a particular make of hats has long been a feature of his advertising, is using a poster showing no pictorial design other than a basket of spring flowers. This is truly "Saying It with Flowers."

For Mothers' Day.

Plans for magazine advertising in the immediate future are now settled, meeting the appropriation made by our committee for the purpose. Mothers' day is to be featured in the big weeklies by well-designed advertisements, each occupying two columns. Several 2-column advertisements will appear in the June monthlies, with page advertisements in two leading magazines in May. A 2-column advertisement will also appear in a leading Canadian magazine. During the dull summer months a smaller double-column advertisement will appear in a selected list of weeklies and monthlies, giving practically continuous publicity for our slogan throughout these months.

Our committee was unable to take ad-

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

THE LATEST IN HEADWEAR.

Though florists depend on the old ways of the florists' craft for their steady business, something novel is of much assistance to get some publicity occasionally in the daily press without paying high advertising rates. Real flowers for trimming women's hats will never, in all likelihood, be so commonly used as to add greatly to florists' incomes generally, but the recurring fad stirs the public interest. The following appeared on the front page of the Boston Record, a place where money could not put an advertisement:

HATS TRIMMED WITH REAL LIVE FLOWERS.
AND BY A FLORIST.

Women! Women!
Hats trimmed with cut flowers—while you wait.

It's the latest fad in Paris—and in Boston.
Imagine it! Live flowers on spring millinery creations!

Penn the Florist was first to take up the idea in Boston. His store on Tremont street, opposite Park, was visited by many women wishing to have the latest in headwear.

WAR TAUGHT PRICE LESSON.

Changed Retailers' View.

Undoubtedly at some time in his career every florist has given some thought to the matter of gathering business through prices alone. That so few have gone further than mere passing thought speaks well for the intelligence and business acumen of the trade at large, but for those times in the future when the idea of price appeal again presents itself one should remember the lesson of the recent war period, in which it was demonstrated that retail prices had little effect in determining to which store buyers would go.

Any great movement which affects the country at large, even though temporary, necessarily brings about changes in business customs which often become permanent. The recent war did this to a degree and many radical changes occurred in the methods of conducting practically every line of business.

Before the war retailers gave considerable attention to prices asked by their competitors. In fact, some seemed to see absolute failure staring them in the face if they charged even a few cents more than their competitors.

Under Changed Conditions.

When the war came the rapidly changing market conditions made prices in general quite unstable.

During this time the government was giving much time to thrift propaganda, as well as openly urging the people to save in every possible manner. Logically this should have inspired the public to shop around and diligently seek out the least expensive place to trade.

What actually did happen was that the public kept right on buying where it had been in the habit of buying, and if the price of an article was 5 cents more than that asked at a store a block away, the customer paid the 5 cents.

This demonstrated to retailers who had not realized it before that their reputations were not built solely on price comparison, but that quality of service was an extremely important item.

Customers Pay for Service.

People who want service are not only willing, but expect to pay for it. The woman who takes her string bag and goes out to the cut-price market to buy her Sunday dinner does not expect the same service she would get from high-grade establishments located in a more convenient and better neighborhood. Thus the chaotic conditions brought about by the war awakened retailers to the fact that a store gets the class of trade it endeavors to attract, and if it makes its reputation on superior quality and service it will attract the class which desires quality and service. If its reputation is based on low prices, it will attract the class of people who consider themselves shrewd buyers.

"Comparison is the mother of value." Practically everything we say implies comparison, but only on a basis of equal class. When we speak of a fast horse we compare his speed with that of other horses, not with an express train, which would probably travel much faster. Thus people, in judging competitors' stores, do not compare quality of service and low prices with the same relative value in mind.

What the retail florist of today has to consider in competition is not so much whether his competitor is charging a few cents above or below his price, but whether he is getting his share of the class of trade he aims to attract.

TATE'S TIPS

SPRING'S OPPORTUNITIES.

Start with the Season.

Soon after this reaches the reader another Easter will have passed into history; the big and trying day for the florists will be over. No doubt you have done well not only with your Easter business, but with business in general throughout the winter. You have been handicapped with scarcity of stock and high prices, but you have met these conditions successfully. There is not a retailer of my acquaintance who is not doing business at the old stand and in every case he seems happier. But let us remember that the season is not over yet. When I was a boy my mother insisted each spring that each one of the children should take sulphur and molasses to clear the blood of impurities that had accumulated during the winter; so a little heart-to-heart business talk in these columns may have much the same effect on the retail florist.

A Spring Chat.

Spring is with us. There is not a woman in the country who has not her mind set upon a new outfit and, if we could read the minds of men, we might be surprised to know that this same germ is mixed with interest, contracts, bonds, stocks and the money market. What is the reason for this? They have just become tired of looking at old wardrobes and crave something different. The eye becomes tired of looking too long at the same thing and registers a protest to the brain; with what result? A physician will tell you that the cause must be removed.

This brings me to the point where I want to prescribe for the retail store owner. The first thing I am going to ask is that you go out on your pavement and study your window for a time. I will admit it has been pretty and much admired all through the winter, but has not the general plan been much the same? Be honest with yourself. Has the past admiration not been for some extra fine flowers of some sort that have often been slipped into the same place that had held the previous day's leader or drawing card and not for the general scheme of decoration? Be frank, aren't you just a bit tired of it yourself?

Housecleaning Time.

Spring is here. Let's have a general housecleaning. Let's get the window ready for the spring season. First give it a thorough cleaning. By this I mean a general scrubbing all over. Perhaps the paint has become dingy, but it will only take a few days to put one coat of white on it, both inside and out.

While you are at this, did you ever think of the lighting system? Study this out and have an expert go over this matter with you; it will only require the changing of a few wires. Remember to have your bulbs arranged so they will not be seen and to use reflectors so that the light will be thrown into the window itself. Have everything outside the window itself as dark as possible, but let the window be brilliant.

To illustrate that, how often have we passed some home, perhaps on a wintry night, where a window shade, left a trifle up, disclosed a living room occupied by a happy family, some reading, others playing some game! Did we stop and take a second peep and think what a cozy sight it was? That is the idea I am trying to convey about your store window; it will pay big returns to have a proper lighting system.

Many will say that they have no need for such foolishness; everyone is off the street by 8 o'clock. Stand about your store from 10:30 p. m. until 12 p. m. and see the number of people who walk home from the theater or other entertainment on these fine spring nights just to get the benefit of the air. Your window will make a lasting impression on them, for they are more than satisfied with life. In many cases some man will be with the only woman in the world for him. He has just enjoyed a good show, he is thoroughly relaxed from business and they are both ready to admire your handiwork and make a mental note of it for future reference.

Special Days Soon.

Play the game for all it is worth and work right up until vacation time comes. Remember that Mothers' day and Memorial day are just ahead of you and make your plans in advance for both of these days. Then June is about two months off and there will be June weddings and girl graduates, but space will not permit me to go into detail on these in this article. However, they will be taken up from time to time in the future, not with any idea of telling anyone what to do, but just discussed in a monologue fashion by an old-timer who has been through them oftener than he cares to admit. Perhaps he can give some suggestions that some reader of The Review may capitalize to advantage. . . Tate.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

vantage of one or two of the largest magazines, for the reason, often stated in this column, that contracts are required to be made so far ahead that the committee could not incur the necessary liability without having sufficient funds in sight.

If a greater and more reasonable support in the way of contributions to the campaign fund were forthcoming, much more could be accomplished. The fund so far available has worked wonders, not only through the publicity we have been able to buy, but through the extra publicity which it has incited, in ways entirely unconceived. Our investment—we must surely call it this, since we are getting full and satisfactory returns for our expenditures—can hardly be figured in dollars and cents when we consider it in the light of an asset. Many industrial captains have spent ten times the amount of money for publicity that the florists have spent, yet look upon our publicity with envious eyes, surprised at the tremendous results we have obtained for so little.

Can't You Be Convinced?

Still, we are only at the edge of the ocean of the possibility open to us. We

Losing a Hairpin What it Taught Me.

It happened in a street car.

Mrs. Stumpp made it happen, while, much amused, I looked on. Her hair was slipping a bit, and needed just one more hairpin to save the day.

Glancing at the hair of the woman next, she noticed a pin sticking half out. Whereupon she reached toward it, remarking in a friendly-interest-way: "You are about to lose one of your pins."

And, she did.

With it, Mrs. Stumpp casually pinned up her hair, while the other woman thanked her profusely for the courtesy.

Ever since then I have been kind of cautious of the man who tries to save me money.

The man, who with a "deep and friendly interest," points out how I am losing money enough every day to feed half of starving Poland. You know the talk those well sandpapered, nicely varnished fellows get off.

Nevertheless, I fell for one of them last week.

Sometime, I will tell you about it.

One thing certain: in saving my hairpin, so to speak, he sure did pin up his own hair in a most beautiful way.

want more money, much more, to secure our full measure of benefit. We are like the hungry boy looking into the pastry shop window, without a penny to satisfy his burning desire to taste of the good things he sees. If those florists who have not subscribed to the fund would only realize what there is before us, they would gladly dip down into their pockets and produce the necessary funds to enable us to keep our slogan daily, almost hourly, in the public mind. Just think of it; there are more than 100,000,000 birthdays observed in this country each year. There are, perhaps, one-fifth as many wedding anniversaries and just as many other occasions when a timely suggestion, "Say It with Flowers," would add to the volume of the florists' business. This is what we

A. L. Miller, president S. A. F.; John Young, secretary, New York, and J. J. Hess, treasurer, Omaha, Neb. Major P. F. O'Keefe, of the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, and Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland, were also in attendance. E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, a member of the committee, wired his inability to be present on account of sickness in his family.

The first session opened with the presentation of the secretary's report, which was quite lengthy, dealing with the finances and the distribution of dealers' helps. Before reading the report, Secretary Young reviewed the action taken at the Buffalo meeting of the committee in regard to the appropriation made for magazine advertising during 1920, action which had to be taken at that time in order to obtain contracts at the rates then existing, which were expected to materially advance at the opening of the new year. The instructions then given to the advertising agency were based upon the expectancy of a continuance of the influx of subscriptions to the publicity fund at about the same rate as before, but since the meeting subscriptions had fallen off to such an extent that it was evidently a dangerous course to build too much upon futures and reliance would have to be placed more upon the funds as pledged by those who were already supporting the campaign. Taking the matter up with the chairman of the publicity committee and the publicity finance committee, the president and treasurer of the society, it was decided to defer the matter of entering into any further advertising contracts until the January meeting of the committee. A contract which had been placed with a group of magazines, and under which the expense of plates had already been incurred for the February issues, amounting in all to about $10,000, could not be canceled, and, therefore, had to stand. That was the position the committee was found in at this meeting. The secretary also detailed the efforts which had been made and were then in progress to increase the fund.

Major O'Keefe stated that the actual obligation under contracts made was $9,334 and that although his agency had been given authority to enter into contracts for space to be used during the year amounting to $50,000, he had understood that if at any time it was ### Getting Further Funds.

A lengthy discussion ensued, mainly as to ways and means to obtain further funds, during which Mr. Ammann outlined a plan which he believed might serve to obviate much of the uncertainty which has for so long hampered the work of the committee. The plan as briefly detailed by Mr. Ammann was as follows:

There are about 150 cities in the United States with a population in excess of 40,000. I figure that if a hundred of those cities can be organized with an average membership of growers—I mean a man who has glass, whether he is a retailer exclusively or a grower—of twenty-five, you would have 2,500 members to start out with. I would make the minimum dues $25 a year and the maximum dues $100 a year, in proportion to the amount of business, with respect to glass, a man does. Such locals would first have to be organized, and then the accruing funds would have to be divided on a percentage basis. I am merely suggesting that twenty per cent of the money be retained for the expenses of the locals, such as a paid secretary to carry on this work and look after the collection of the money. The remaining eighty per cent should go to the national fund. This would give you a minimum amount of $50,000 to start with. The maximum might reach $1,000,000; you cannot tell how much. But your local organization would be tied up to your national organization and the dues would be paid in that proportion. The locals would be entitled to one delegate to the national convention for every twenty-five members. The plan would operate the same as that of the United Mine Workers' Union does, which ties up a local with the national organization—and you have just as much right to organize for your benefit as any other institution.

Major O'Keefe, being invited to express his opinion of the situation, said he believed florists lacked a definite plan for getting this money. He believed that some such plan as the one outlined by Mr. Ammann must be adopted. He did not believe that the ordinary grower, wholesaler or retailer realized that he is holding back as much as he really is.

Considerable discussion followed Major O'Keefe's remarks and finally it was decided to send out a broadside to the trade which, it was hoped, would bring florists who had not already supported the campaign to realize the importance of an energetic continuance of the publicity which had proved to be of immense benefit to the industry generally.

Treasurer Hess presented a report which showed that the balance in the treasury to the credit of the committee was only $444.95.

Financial Committee Appointed.

On motion of Mr. Ammann, the chairman was authorized and directed to appoint a finance committee and, accordingly, appointed George Asmus, J. F. Ammann and himself as such committee.

Mr. Pierson then moved that the finance committee be given power to authorize the spending of money collected for advertising purposes as fast as collections were assured. The motion was seconded by Treasurer Hess and a vote was taken on roll call by the secretary, every member voting in the affirmative. A recess was here taken for lunch.

As guests of Mr. Asmus, the members of the committee were entertained at lunch in an ante-room of the hotel.

Official Adoption of Song.

After luncheon, the first matter to be taken up was the question of official adoption of the Von Tilzer song, "Say It with Flowers," which had been successfully exploited in the larger theaters of various parts of the country. After considerable discussion, the following resolution was offered by Mr. Pierson:

Believing that the song, "Say It with Flowers," published by the Artmusic Co., written by Albert Von Tilzer and Neville Fleson, which has been introduced and popularized by the Artmusic Co., is a valuable asset to the work of the Society of American Florists' publicity committee, it is therefore moved that the publicity committee endorse the song "Say It with Flowers" as published by the Artmusic Co., Broadway Music Co. sole distributors, and hereby ratify the agreement with the Artmusic Co. by which the Society of American Florists' publicity fund receives 1 cent per copy royalty on all sales; and that the secretary of this committee be authorized to sign an agreement with the Artmusic Co. as heretofore outlined. It is specifically understood that the publicity committee in making this agreement incurs no liability to the Society of American Florists.

The motion was duly seconded, and after further discussion a vote was taken, under roll call by the secretary, and the motion carried unanimously.

Closing Contracts.

Major O'Keefe again introduced the question of the advisability of proceeding with the March advertising, suggesting that it might not be good policy to defer the closing of contracts, especially as everything was in readiness. The committee, after further discussion, decided that Major O'Keefe be authorized to close contracts for such advertising, but before the April advertising was placed he was directed to confer with the secretary, who would inform him as to whether or not funds in hand would permit proceeding further.

A proposal from the Elwood Meyers Co. for supplying, through the publicity committee, electric window signs, for the use of florists who would be able to display them, was referred to Mr. Asmus, as a committee of one, for consideration.

The secretary read the following letter from W. H. Eiss, Buffalo, N. Y., chairman of the Western New York Florists' Publicity Committee:

Buffalo, January 14, 1920.
Mr. John Young, New York, N. Y. Dear Sir: Kindly refer to your letter of November 25, in which you wrote me that your committee would waive the individual subscriptions, made by the florists of Buffalo and vicinity, to the national publicity fund, provided the western New York publicity committee set aside a certain amount for the national campaign. We have had a meeting and have appropriated $1,000 for the national fund. I enclose you herewith check for $250, the first quarterly payment on this amount. I also enclose you herewith a list of the subscribers in Buffalo and western New York who have subscribed to this fund, so to anyone who is on your list in Buffalo or western New York kindly do not send any more statements for the national publicity fund. While the amount appropriated is not as large as I would like to send, I believe in another year it will be better. Will send you check every three months, as our collections are coming in that way. Yours very truly, W. H. Eiss.

Mr. Ammann moved that the action of the western New York Florists' publicity Committee be concurred in, that the individual subscriptions be canceled as requested, and that any other community that will turn in the equivalent or more of its private subscriptions in a lump sum may have its private subscriptions canceled upon request. The motion, seconded by Mr. Pierson, was carried unanimously. It was reported by the secretary that the St. Louis florists had adopted a similar mode of settlement.

The secretary presented a list of subscribers to the campaign fund, with the amounts subscribed for 1920. He stated his belief that publication of a similar list in the trade papers last year had been a wise step and suggested that such publication be again made. After some discussion, it was decided, on motion of Mr. Ammann, that the subscription list, arranged alphabetically, under state headings, be included in the broadside which it was arranged should be sent out.

Adjournment was here taken until next day, Thursday, at 9 a. m.

Thursday Morning Session.

Thursday morning, January 22, the committee met early, and took up a number of matters pertinent to the campaign, principal among which was a proposed arrangement to hand over the dealers' helps department of the promotion bureau, which had become too much of a problem for the bureau and the staff available for its operation, to a service bureau conducted in Chicago by Hilmer V. Swenson. The proposition was strongly recommended by Messrs. Asmus, Penn and Ammann, and Mr.

Swenson assured the committee that, handled in the manner he proposed, he could turn in to the campaign a profit of not less than $1,500 per month. On motion, Secretary Young and Mr. Asmus were appointed a committee to consider the proposition and, if advisable, take action.

Major O'Keefe was given authority to make arrangements with a traveling representative to solicit subscriptions to the campaign fund in the territory traveled.

With the completion of the business of the meeting, the committee adjourned, to meet at the call of the chair.

Swenson assured the committee that, handled in the manner he proposed, he could turn in to the campaign a profit of not less than $1,500 per month. On motion, Secretary Young and Mr. Asmus were appointed a committee to consider the proposition and, if advisable, take action.

Major O'Keefe was given authority to make arrangements with a traveling representative to solicit subscriptions to the campaign fund in the territory traveled.

With the completion of the business of the meeting, the committee adjourned, to meet at the call of the chair.

N. J., and President A. L. Miller, of the S. A. F.

Selection of a city in which to hold the next national flower show was the first business of the meeting. Mr.
Knoble suggested Cleveland as a city which could house the show satisfactorily. The new municipal building in that city, he said, was expected to be completed in about a year and he had every reason to believe that advantageous arrangements could be made with the proper authorities for the use of the main hall for the show. The various horticultural interests of Cleveland were, he said, most anxious that the next show be held in their city.

Next Show in Cleveland.

On motion of Mr. Roland, seconded by Mr. Welch, it was decided that the next show be held in Cleveland in the spring of 1922, providing adequate arrangements can be made with the Cleveland interests. Mr. Knoble moved, seconded by Mr. Roland, that the show open Saturday, March 25, and close Saturday, April 1. A poll vote resulted in the unanimous adoption of these dates, which were considered most desirable,
Easter, in 1922, falling on April 16.

Mr. Roland emphasized the importance of preparing and distributing a preliminary schedule of premiums for plants at as early a date as possible, and recommended that a subcommittee be appointed to prepare such a schedule and submit the same at a later meeting of the committee, which should be held in the near future in Cleveland. The month of June was suggested as a good time for this meeting. The chairman appointed Messrs. Roland, Traendly, Knoble and Duckham as the subcommittee.

Prof. White received the assurance of the committee that the same arrangements as were made for the cooperation of the American Rose Society in the projected national flower show in St. Louis in 1918, which show was, owing to the circumstances, postponed, would be entered into for the Cleveland show. Mr. Goddard, for the American Carnation Society, was given similar assurance.

$20,000 in Prizes.

By unanimous vote the subcommittee on schedule was given authority to prepare a preliminary schedule of prizes, which should not exceed a total value of $20,000. This amount is to include all special premiums which might be offered and which, it was distinctly understood, should be applied to the reduction of the amount of the total.

Mr. Knoble was requested to take the necessary steps for organizing the local interests of Cleveland, so that an open meeting could be held at the time of the meeting of the committee there in June, when matters pertaining to the show could be fully discussed. He was given authority to arrange for this meeting.

It was voted that Chairman Asmus and Mr. Knoble be appointed a committee to negotiate with the proper authorities for quarters for the show.

The chairman announced that, following the precedent set in Philadelphia, at the proper time various committees would be appointed to take charge of the work of the show.

The secretary was authorized to proceed at once with the selling of space in the trade section of the show, with the understanding that, if for any reason the show should not be held in Cleveland, the contracts made would become void through cancellation. The rates for space will be determined at the next meeting of the committee.

American Rose Society at New York, account of which, with the president's and treasurer's reports, appeared in last week's issue of The Review, was as follows:

Since the last annual meeting seven sessions of the executive committee have been held, with an average attendance of nine members.

June 2, 1919, the members of the committee, with interested rosarians, met Dr. Van Fleet in his test garden at Bell, Md., and spent a most enjoyable and profitable afternoon looking over the recently introduced rose novelties which are under Dr. Van Fleet's supervision and inspecting his many seedlings. In the evening the executive committee held a joint session with the Washington rose test garden committee to perfect plans for the inspection of the national rose test garden on the following day. Dr. E. M. Mills, B. H. Farr, Charles E. F. Gersdorff, Alexander Cumming, L. A. Anderson and S. C. Hubbard were appointed judges. The question of an exhibition rose garden was discussed and it was voted that the American Rose Society should endeavor to secure the establishment of a permanent exhibition rose garden in Washington, and a committee consisting of J. Horace McFarland, Frederick Law Olmsted, Representative James B. Mann and S. S. Pennock was appointed to confer with the proper authorities as to ways and means for developing the project. The question of the introduction of Dr. Van Fleet's seedlings was discussed and a committee consisting of President Robert Pyle, S. S. Pennock, J. Horace McFarland, E. G. Hill and Robert Simpson was appointed to formulate a plan to effectively disseminate Dr. Van Fleet's rose introductions.

June 3 the executive committee and the judges met at 10 a. m. in the Washington rose test gardens and made a careful inspection. The roses were in excellent condition and many interesting varieties were in bloom. Following the inspection a luncheon was held at the Ebbitt house. Automobiles were then taken for a trip to Mrs. Bell's rose garden at Twin Oaks. In the evening Peter Bisset, of the Department of Agriculture, lectured at the new national museum.

Red-letter Day.

June 4 was indeed a "red-letter day" for the society. In response to an invitation extended by Captain George C. Thomas, the executive committee met at 9:30 a. m. in his beautiful rose garden at Chestnut Hill, Pa. After an inspection of the garden there was a session of the committee. At the last annual meeting of the society, Captain Thomas was elected president, but he found it impossible to serve. The committee therefore elected Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., to serve as president for the year beginning July 1, 1919. The remainder of the session was devoted to a consideration of proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws as presented by a committee at the last meeting. The proposed changes will be sent to each member at a later date.

After the session of the committee Captain and Mrs. Thomas entertained the members and their friends at a most enjoyable luncheon. On this occasion Dr. E. M. Mills, in his gracious manner, on behalf of the officers and executive committee, presented the retiring president, Benjamin Hammond, with a specially leather-bound volume of Captain Thomas' book on outdoor rose growing, in appreciation of Mr. Hammond's fourteen years of valuable service for the society, twelve years as secretary and two years as president. Mr. Hammond responded in a few well-chosen words expressing his appreciation of the kindly motive which prompted the gift. Following this presentation, Captain Thomas dedicated his seedling, No. 720, to Dr. Robert H. Huey in recognition of the inspiration for rose culture and breeding which he had received through Dr. Huey's intense love of roses. He formally christened it Dr. Huey.

At 2 p. m. about 100 members of the American Rose Society gathered in Captain Thomas' garden. After a general inspection Mr. Hammond introduced Captain Thomas, who spoke a few words of welcome. He expressed the pleasure it gave him to share his garden with others and he hoped the guests would make the garden theirs for the afternoon. J. Horace McFarland discussed American roses, emphasizing the value of the work Dr. Van Fleet and Captain Thomas have done in introducing types of roses suited for American conditions. He was followed by the "silver-tongued orator from Indiana," who is universally known and loved, E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind. Robert Pyle, the newly elected president, closed the formal program of the afternoon, emphasizing the value of the work the society is doing in reaching a large number of roses lovers and in carrying to them information of much value.

July Executive Meeting.

July 14 a meeting of the executive committee was held at the City Club, New York. President Pyle opened the meeting with an outline of what he thought should be the policy of the society during the coming year. These policies will be published in the forthcoming rose annual and if carried out they will make the American Rose Society one of the most efficient floricultural organizations. The president announced the appointment of the following vice-presidents for the coming year: Dr. E. M. Mills, Dr. Robert Huey, E. G. Hill, John Cook. Dr. Mills was named as a member of the executive committee to succeed Robert Pyle. J. Horace McFarland was elected editor and O. P. Beckley advertising manager of the American Rose Annual for 1920. It was voted to accept the proposition of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College to establish a rose test garden at that institution. A committee consisting of F. L. Atkins, J. Horace McFarland and J. A. Currey was appointed to outline a policy in regard to the establishment of rose test gardens in the various sections of the United States.

August 21 a short meeting was held at the S. A. F. convention in Detroit. In the absence of President Pyle, E. G. Hill acted as chairman and Benjamin Hammond as secretary. No official business was transacted.

A meeting of the executive committee was held at the City Club, New York, September 17, 1919. F. L. Atkins, chairman of the committee to outline a policy in regard to the establishment of rose test gardens, made a preliminary report. It was the opinion of the committee that test gardens should be established only in certain climatic zones. The Department of Agriculture at Washington has prepared a map showing the rose-growing zones in the United States, which will be published in the 1920 rose annual. The report of the committee governing exhibitions of garden roses was received from the chairman, Dr. A. C. Beal, and was accepted by the executive committee. These rules and regulations are now printed and can be obtained from the office of the secretary.

November Executive Meeting.

At the executive committee meeting, November 20, 1919, it was voted that the committee to foster the cut rose interests be authorized to negotiate with the officials of the international flower show or other organizations regarding the spring exhibition of the society and the admission of the members to the exhibition. President Pyle was designated the official representative of the American Rose Society to serve on the board of directors of the S. A. F. J. At a meeting of the executive committee held at the City Club January 12, 1920, G. H. Peterson tendered his resignation from the rose registration committee, because he would be in Florida for an indefinite period. President Pyle appointed F. L. Atkins to fill the vacancy. Because of ill health, J. F. Huss resigned from the chairmanship of the Hartford rose test gardens committee. Alexander Cumming was named as chairman. Judges were appointed for the spring exhibition of roses, which the committee had arranged to hold in cooperation with the international flower show in New York, March 15 to 21, 1920. It was voted that the president should appoint a committee on legislation to which will be referred all questions relating to national and state quarantines and similar regulative matters, such committee to have power to represent the American Rose Society. J. Horace McFarland, S. S. Pennock, Benjamin Hammond, James Boyd and Dr. E. M. Mills were named on the committee. The executive committee then voted on the best three eligible varieties of roses for the Gertrude M. Hubbard

The Market.

The weather has been fine and flowers are plentiful. The trade is preparing for the largest Easter business that it has had in its history. All stock is plentiful and will be no higher than is usual for holidays.

A large supply of pot plants is on hand in all varieties and colors. Hyacinths and lilies are much in evidence and will sell at about 75 cents per bloom, but will not sell by the bloom, but by the quality. Some beautiful lilies are on display.

Various Notes.

Winters & Kramer estimate that their Easter cut of sweet peas is about 40,000.
These will probably be used entirely by the local dealers, though some have been sent to Cincinnati and Cleveland.

HARRISONBURG, VA.

The Wetzel Seed Co., Inc., announces the addition of a flower department to its business. The announcement, which occupied about 378 lines in a local daily paper, said that from time to time, as the demand develops, everything pertaining to flowers will be added to the line, also that special attention will be given to those desiring information as to the culture of flowers. It is planned to erect a large greenhouse in the near future, but at present stock will be secured from Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Miss M. H. Chrisman, formerly society editor of the News-Record, of Harrisonburg, is in charge of the department. It was opened for the Easter trade.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

The market was kept fairly well cleared last week. Business started with a rush and late buyers were disappointed in many cases. There has been much funeral work. The weather has been fine in this locality and a good cut of stock is ready. The quality of roses is good and few are left to accumulate. Carnations are arriving in quantity and after the morning rush there are few left. Calla and Easter lilies moved fairly well. Bulbous stock moved well, although there were not so many tulips as in the previous week. Violets moved well. Sweet peas are in good quantity and have a fair demand. Snapdragons, daisies, pansies, calendulas, myosotis and similar flowers move well. Greens are scarce.

Various Notes.

Byron Bailey, of Kent, O., was in this city last week on business. He reports excellent business.

The street venders have not been getting the amount of stock that they were getting in previous years.

A. Dehner has bought the establishment of Henry Eickhoff, on Woodlawn avenue, next door to where he has been located, and has taken over the lease. In this place he intends to carry plants and cut flowers exclusively and in his own place he expects to carry candies and school supplies. Henry Eickhoff intends to retire to his farm, at Warrensville, O., and grow plants for the wholesale market. W. F. B.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, E. O. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.;
secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE seed trade's "Big Monday" may not have fallen in March this year.

GROWERS on the coast report that Asparagus plumosus seed has been a poor crop in California this season.

It is said the condition of the treaty most promptly completed by the Germans has been that requiring that seeds be supplied to the devastated areas of France.

THE cabbage plants for seed production on Long Island were buried in trenches and well prepared for the winter before hard freezing occurred and although the winter has been a severe one the plants are believed to be in good condition. March is the most critical time in that section, however, and it is obviously impossible for growers to estimate the final damage, if any, until after this period has passed and the plants are removed from the trenches.

BULB FIRM LOSES SUIT.

Judge Shenk, of the Superior court of Los Angeles county, has decided the case brought by R. E. Hoyt, assignee of the claim of Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philipppo, against S. Murata & Co., in favor of defendant. The defendant was represented by F. L. Stobbs and Hyman Schwartz.

The case was brought to record the amount alleged to be due upon the shipment of bulbs ordered by the defendant from the plaintiffs December 30, 1916, and other orders subsequent to that date.

The order was given upon condition that the shipments be specially boxed and marked. When they arrived at Los Angeles, they were not marked as per the order; neither were they insured in conformity with the orders given, as is customary in such cases.

The goods arrived in Los Angeles in a spoiled condition and S. Murata & Co. refused to accept the shipment on that account and for the other reasons given.

The following is a copy of the conclusion handed down by Judge Shenk:

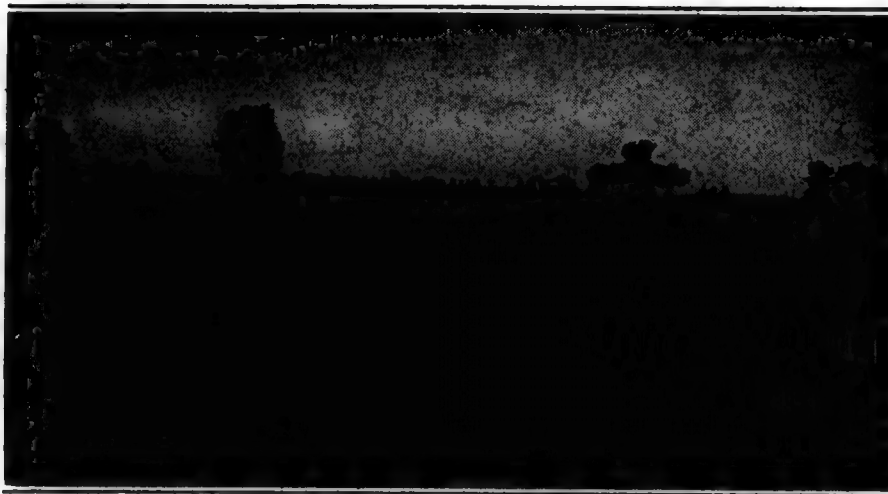

"That the merchandise was not delivered to the defendant; that the merchandise was not marked in accordance with the instructions of the defendant; that the merchandise was not insured as is customary and in accordance with the agreement between plaintiff's assignor and the defendant; that the title to the merchandise remained in the plaintiff's assignor because the same was shipped to the plaintiff's agent and not to the defendant; that the defendant was not liable or indebted therefor unless he accepted the merchandise.

"That the plaintiff take nothing by the said cause of action and the defendant is entitled to have judgment in his favor for costs."

addition was built in the rear of the 4-story building owned and occupied exclusively by this corporation. It affords about forty per cent more space for the filling of orders and handling of stock in the shrubbery department. Foundations strong enough to carry three more stories have been laid, so that eventually the old and new buildings will have the appearance of a single unit.

It seems as though a continuous building program was on at this seed house. In 1916 the first unit, two stories in height and 60 x 140 feet, of reinforced concrete construction, was built. At that time it was thought by the members of the firm that this unit would care for about three or five years' needs. But in 1918 two more stories had to be added. It seemed as though this would take care of several years' growth, but the closing of the war brought such an increase to the business of the shrub and bulb department that the 1-story addition last summer became an absolute necessity.

The output of this concern has been confined to seeds in packets and mailing sizes of bulbs, shrubs, roots and vines. Modern equipment has been installed, so that orders may be filled with as little delay as possible. This includes eight Brown bag-filling machines. The United States Postal Department keeps employees on the premises who cancel stamps and route all packages direct to the trains instead of through the Cleveland postoffice. This in itself is a saving of time for the customers of the house, as one handling of mail is eliminated.

SEVEN POINTS OF SEEDSMAN.

Charles A. Heath, president of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, has seven points, instead of the famous fourteen, by the observance of which the prevailing unrest and economic disorder may be remedied. At an evening service held recently in the First Presbyterian church in connection with the greater Chicago campaign, Mr. Heath listed his points as follows:

- 1—Increase food production immediately.
- 2—Regulate cost prices and punish profiteers instant.
- 3—Distribute labor equitably and regulate nonessential industries.
- 4—Refund the national debt.
- 5—Cancel the allied debts.
- 6—Build good roads.
- 7—Improve rural life in America.

FRENCH BULBS

for your fall planting, why don't you buy them from a FRENCH FIRM?

A. & L. BREMOND FRERES

Wholesale Bulb Growers, OLLIOULES (VAR), FRANCE

A. B. C. Code, 5th Edition. Cable Address, Albremond, Ollioules

plant, directions for its culture and pictures of it in various stages of growth and of fruitage. The original stock of the variety, says the company, came from France.

Independence Nurseries, Independence, O.—A well illustrated, accurate catalogue of water lilies and other aquatics, with directions in regard to the construction of a water garden; sixteen pages, in an appropriate colored cover. At the end are lists of irises and of goldfish.

White Floral Co., Portland, Ore.—Illustrated catalogue of dahlias, "White's Winning Wonders for 1920," twenty pages, so bound and folded as to be convenient for pocket or pigeonhole. At the end are lists of gladioli, cannas, geraniums and other flowering plants; also vegetable and strawberry plants.

Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn.—A compact, businesslike catalogue of nursery stock, including herbaceous perennials as well as full lines of hard-wooded stock, both fruit-bearing and ornamental; forty-six pages, printed with brown ink and bound in a tasteful cover which also is designed in different shades of brown. In the text there is only one illustration, a garden scene showing the use of Box-Barberry, a dwarf form of berberis originated by this company. The same picture appears on the front cover.

Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O.—"Rain for the Asking," a most artistic and effective presentation of the arguments in favor of the Skinner irrigating system. The blue-marbled cover, which is both durable and handsome, bears a conventionalized but most expressive picture of a rain storm. The book contains twenty-five large pages, printed on a fine, heavy grade of enameled paper. The title-page is inscribed with the motto, "Skinner system rain is followed by the sunshine of prosperity," and the truthfulness of this motto is well sustained by the illustrations and explanations that follow.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.—A large, 6-page folder, which offers, according to its title, "cannas, some roses, Oak Brand shrubs and a few other money-makers, of such a quality as will make your customers happy, when you pass them on." Cannas are given most space and prominence and are recommended as "the best available substitutes for geraniums" in cases where the latter are extremely scarce. The recently adopted trade-mark of the American Association of Nurserymen appears on the title-page.

Louisville Nurseries, St. Matthews, Ky.—"Descriptive Catalogue of Nursery Products, for the Garden, Orchard and Lawn," a 60-page, illustrated catalogue, in an exceptionally tasteful, green-tinted cover, on which is displayed the slogan: "If It Merits Growing, We Grow It; If We Grow It, It Merits Growing." At the end are cultural directions and a "Spray Calendar." Several beautiful landscape scenes are shown on the cover and in the body of the catalogue.

was quoted. It certainly applied to business everywhere March 25. Yet, while there was not much business apparent, I found out that things are not always as they seem. There was a little party of retailers and growers present and, as the writer had an afternoon off, we spent a pleasant hour talking flowers. In this way a bit of information regarding advance orders for Easter was secured. From the advance orders for all lines of stock, this is a record-breaking Easter. The quality of stock could not be better and everyone assures me that the quantity equals all requirements. There is a good supply of local valley and it is fine. Roses are in good supply and there is plenty of bulbous stock. In fact, the supply of cut stock is all that could be desired. Blooming plants are not any too plentiful; the retailers have been canvassing the different growers and, where they found anything that struck them as being salable, they closed the deal for it on the spot. Everyone is preparing for a big business.

Local Publicity Soon.

The advertising committee had another meeting and plans have been mapped out with the idea in view, when the campaign is launched, to push it for all it is worth; there is to be no let-up. "Say It with Flowers" will be seen everywhere in our city after April 12. This date has been decided upon for the initial advertisement in the local press; just what this will be has not yet been determined, but the committee and its experts are considering those used by other cities and hope to improve on them. New names continue to be added to the list of those who have already signed to support this campaign and the committee is more than satisfied with the progress made.

Various Notes.

"A great show" is the comment of everyone who visited the New York spring show. Had it not been so near Easter, many more of the florists would have gone. Those who did take the time feel that they were amply repaid. These were Mr. and Mrs. William J. Johnston, Miss Isabel Johnston, William Feast, Charles Feast, John Wagner, Richard Vincent, Jr., R. A. Vincent, G. J. Muhly, Fred Bauer, William Bauer and Robert J. Johnston.

James Hamilton, of Mount Washington, has a record cut of roses for Easter. One would not think, to see the way his plants are set, that he has been having a steady crop from them all winter. Another thing that is right at the Hamilton range is sweet peas. He has a variety there that is certainly making a hit; it is a porcelain blue called Wedgwood. There is no doubt that it is a "dainty morsel" for corsage work. The fates seem to be with him, or perhaps I should say his good judgment; at any rate, he has about 15,000 valley in fine condition.

Jesse P. King, at Mount Airy, has a blue ribbon crop of Ophelia and his sweet peas are wonders. Mr. King has a batch of about 400 daisies that are good stock; they are well grown, symmetrical plants and well flowered.

A call on Samuel Feast & Sons found them all preparing for Easter. At this establishment I was told that from the advance orders they had booked, they were preparing for one of the greatest

Sweet Pea Seed

For July and Early August to December Delivery

Liggit's Special Winter Flowering Orchids and Spencers
Hand Rogued—Hand Picked—Hand Threshed

For Greenhouse Use

If you have been troubled with badly mixed Pea seeds, or immature seed that does not grow, try our hand-picked seed. Each pod is picked when ripe and matured, instead of pulling up the vines and stacking them to cure, then threshing them in a machine, as most growers do. While picking by hand the fields get rogued almost daily, not only for off colors but Winter flowering plants only are permitted to remain. Machine threshed seed has many mixed colors in it because it is impossible to clean the machine when changing from one color to another. Our system of hand-picking and hand-hulling does away with rogues and immature seed. This seed is worth much more than others—but our prices are about the same:

Mrs. A. A. Skach. Beautiful, clear light pink. Oz., 75c; lb., $9.00.

Miss Flora Fabing. Pink, some yellow and salmon. Oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.00; lb., $8.00.

Belgian Hero. Beautiful orange, rose-pink. Oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $2.50; lb., $9.00.

Rose Queen (Genuine). Best light rose pink. Grown heavily by leading Pea growers. Oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $6.00; lb., $18.00.

Morning Star (Genuine). Extra early light pink. Long stems. A good one. Oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

C. U. LIGGIT, Office: 303 BULLETIN BLDG. Philadelphia, Pa.

Easter rushes they have ever had. Mrs. Fannie R. Hill is back on the job after a sojourn of two months in a hospital. Everyone will be glad to hear that Mrs. Hill has completely recovered and is again her old self and ready for anything that Easter has in store.

At John Cook's, as at every other place, they were quiet for the time being, but, as on the well ordered man-of-war, decks were being cleared for action. Mrs. Cook said that they had a fine assortment of blooming plants, their hydrangeas being especially fine this year.

William Halliday had his usual attractive window and Miss Groves, whom I found in charge, said that they were booking orders and preparing for the rush that is just as sure to come to the florists as Easter itself is. She says that in all of her experience she has never known it to fail.

William J. Kennedy, of Pikesville, Md., has the right to be proud of his carnation crop. I have never seen finer Enchantress, White Enchantress and Ward than those he is now sending to market.

C. E. Akehurst & Son are sending in about 10,000 a week of wonderfully fine carnation blooms. Among them are their own seedlings, Mrs. C. E. Akehurst and Yellow Prince. These varieties certainly stand out among the rest.

John Nuth is another who has fine quality carnations. His Seigwarts are in a class by themselves. Mr. Nuth has a fine lot of bulbous stock, sweet peas and snapdragons for Easter. Tate.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market during the last week has been overcrowded with all kinds of seasonable stock and, considering the unusual spell of warm weather, stock has not moved rapidly. The prices, however, have not suffered to any great extent. The warm weather has done much to bring on an abundance of flowers and the outlook for the Easter business is encouraging. However, with some of the growers, plant stock, such as lilies and hydrangeas, will not be in time. But there is some excellent potted stock on the market, which has been selling well.

Roses are in abundance and selling at prices about the same as a week ago. There are large shipments of sweet peas arriving daily. It has not been possible for the stores to handle all of them, many going to the street men. Calla lilies are reaching us in good supply and the sale has been good. Easter lilies are in good shape and the usual supply is promised for the holiday. Valley and orchids are in good supply and sell fairly well. Gardenias also are ordered heavily for the Easter trade. Freesias, daffodils, poeticus narcissi and other bulbous stock sell readily.

Asparagus plumosus has not been any too plentiful, but other greens are in good supply.

Various Notes.

George Cramer, who has been busily occupied for the last few weeks in the manufacture of birch bark baskets, finished his work and has gone to Buffalo to assist there during the rush.

Hugo Teute has had an exceptional season with all of his greenhouse stock. Fortunately, he has a wonderful crop of lilies, which are in fine shape for Easter and which are all sold. Jonquils in many varieties are plentiful and his house of sweet peas promises to bring him good returns within the next week or two.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clifford have recently returned from their trip to England, having had a pleasant ten weeks' stay there with relatives. They returned on the Mauretania.

Those who visited the trade during the last week were George Ely, of Clyde, N. Y.; Miss M. R. Zimmer, of Dansville, N. Y.; W. F. Quance, of Newark, N. Y.; L. C. Stroh, of Buffalo, N. Y.; D. L. Taylor, of the Mono Service Co., Newark, N. J., and Valentine Gatz, of Albion, N. Y.

George Case, of James Vick's Sons, has been confined to his home with a severe cold for the last week.

Richard Teute, of Brighton, N. Y., is running a new delivery car, which is painted attractively with his name and a "Say It with Flowers" sign. His houses are well filled with seasonable stock and he reports business good.

You need Bailey's books

Get the knowledge you need, hints and practical suggestions that will help in your work, by buying Bailey's new "Standard Encyclopedia of Horticulture"—the florists' 6-volume library. 4,000 engravings, 96 full-page cuts, fine color work.

Take advantage of the present easy payment plan of $3.00 per month, or send $42.00 for the complete set of six volumes. This is the best book buy any florist could make—an investment that will pay a life-time of dividends.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE late beginning of the shipping season, particularly in the east, will make it an exceptionally short one this year.

THIS week T. R. Norman & Sons, Painesville, O., shipped four carloads of nursery stock to the Shenandoah Nurseries and the Mount Arbor Nurseries, at Shenandoah, Ia.; the Farmers' Nursery Co., at Troy, O., and Peter Bohlender & Sons, Tippecanoe City, O.

THE Bulletin of Peony News, No. 10, bearing date of January, 1920, has just been sent out by the secretary of the American Peony Society, A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y. It is called the Hollis number and contains a biographical sketch of George Hollis by Everett P. Wheeler, a study of his catalogues and a list of his seedlings by A. P. Saunders and a posthumous paper on "Hybridizing the Peony," by George Hollis.

A. A. N. BEGINS ADVERTISING.

Explaining the Trade-Mark.

The announcement of the adoption of the trade-mark has been sent out to members of the A. A. N. by Secretary John Watson in a circular which explains it as follows:

THIS IS YOUR TRADE-MARK.

The trade-mark of your association, duly filed for registration against infringement. It can be used only by members; its use identifies members with the association, with the association's advertising and with the association's standard of ethics as set forth in its advertisements to the public.

Trade-mark: It grew out of many hundreds of ideas suggested. It might be better; it is the best that could be evolved by those who made it. It holds these fundamental ideas: Trees

These Men Protect Your Planting

SOME four hundred of America's leading Nurserymen have linked themselves together to protect you in your buying of trees and plants.

It is used by members of the American Ass'n. of Nurserymen.

Membership in the Association is strictly restricted to firms whose methods and standards come up to the Association measure.

Buying from any member of this Association, you have the Association's assurance of satisfaction back of your purchase.

How the Association Vigilance Committee means your protection, what the Association is, and where you can get trustworthy trees and plants, is all told in our Booklet, "Looking Both Ways Before You Buy Nursery Stock."

We will gladly send a copy on request.

A. A. N. Ad with Trade-Mark.

and plants; grown and sold by members of the American Association of Nurserymen; stock that is "trustworthy"; buyers protected by the chain of 400 members standing for the fair deal.

The basic idea is in the association's amendment to its constitution adopted in convention as Article IX, providing for fair dealing as a condition of membership and setting up a vigilance committee to secure that.

That is the most outstanding fact in American horticulture today. It means a new relationship between the nurseryman and the planter. It places this association in line with progressive business; it establishes new standards.

They are serviceable only if made known; the public is entitled to know what you stand for. You are entitled to have it known. In response to the action of your market development committee, taken after consulting you through the questionnaire distributed, advertising has been placed in the papers named.

Advertisements: The copy was carefully prepared and every statement thoughtfully weighed. The idea advanced and the policy advertised are found in Article IX above referred to.

Publications: The list now used does not include all the good papers; there are many others; when we have more money to spend, we can use more papers; those selected were carefully chosen because of their high standing, their large circulation and their distribution over the territory where our members are located. They all go to land-owners, home-owners, present or possible buyers of your goods—in short, to your customers. Every issue means carrying your message to over 4,600,000 people directly interested.

No obligations have been assumed beyond the money actually on hand and appropriated for this purpose.

Electros have been sent you in two sizes; one for use on your letterheads, envelopes and circulars; the small one for tags. Take all your printed matter to your local printer and have him run it through the press and imprint the trade-mark. The presswork will be the only expense and the use of the trade-mark is what identifies you with the association, with its advertising and with its standards of fair dealing. You all believe in fair play; say so, and say it in the only way that will effectively identify you with this campaign and make it profitable to you. Use the trade-mark; print it on everything you send out.

Booklet: To send in reply to planters is being printed with the name and address of every member included; copies will be sent you.

Articles: Have been distributed to 750 newspapers and will be continued through the season. Lectures are a part of the program. But it is the advertising that identifies the association and its members with that general publicity and gives you opportunity to bring the results directly to yourself and those who use the trade-mark.

Additional business will hardly come of this now, but you have as much as you can easily handle without more. Selling for next fall and spring will soon be under way and this advertising will tell people what to figure on when placing their orders. And they will do that.

Buttons: Can be made of the trade-mark. Estimates will be asked for as to cost.

The association and all its members may well congratulate themselves on the action they took in convention whereby they declared for fair dealing; not that it has been absent, but that it was made the association's standard. That policy now being advertised to planters, that they may know you and your methods and standards better. The response from press and public will be more than you may have expected. But the extent to which it can be made to benefit you and your business depends entirely on the extent to which you use the trade-mark. Use it!

the society. The exhibition will open the evening of September 27 and will close the evening of September 29.

The roof garden is used during the summer as a restaurant. It has good daylight on all four sides and the entrance is through the conservatory on the roof. The space is large, something like 12,000 square feet in a long hall, giving wonderful decorative opportunities.

A determined effort will be made to make this the largest exhibition ever given of any single flower. Plans will be rapidly perfected and developments will be announced later.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week was an excellent one for the growers as well as for the retailers. Growers who were behind with a great deal of their stock had a blessing of sunshine and those who had cut increased supplies fared well in finding a good market. The weather was the finest since last fall and it brought the public out in parading style. The lower-priced stores have been able to offer stock at prices which served well in stimulating interest.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson has returned from a visit to New York city. At his greenhouses Mr. Anderson held the usual Palm Sunday flower show. The visitors passed through the houses in large numbers and were given roses as they left.

Frank J. Baum has purchased a new General Motors truck. It is the first one to be used in the trade in this city.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The Market.

All of the local growers are about sold up on all kinds of stock for Easter and prices have held up well. Violets are quoted at $5 per hundred retail and, with sweet peas, form the largest part of the corsage work.

The weather last week was everything that could be desired by the growers, as there was plenty of sunshine and the thermometer stood around 50 degrees or higher every day, thereby helping to bring along stock that was quite backward.

Club's Spring Flower Show.

The spring flower show of the Albany Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, March 25, at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange rooms and was successful in every respect.

George Nagengast, Jr., displayed some of the finest hydrangeas seen this year. William Hannell showed some of his well grown pot roses in variety. Henkes Bros. had excellent hyacinths in pans. Frederick Goldring, of Slingerlands, brought some of his cut daffodils, which were much admired.

Several of the retail florists showed baskets of plants arranged for effect, also corsage bouquets in variety.

After everyone had examined the exhibits, Matthew Mulholland, of Troy, auctioned all plants, etc., and over $200 was realized, which was turned into the club treasury.

Various Notes.

W. C. Gloeckner, 97 State street, plans to get into his new store, on the corner of Steuben and James streets, about June 1. He intends to operate both stores and will have better facilities to accommodate his growing list of customers.

F. A. Danker held his usual Palm Sunday flower show at his greenhouses. He was busy all last week getting things arranged to accommodate the large crowd of people who attended.

George Nagengast, Jr., held a Palm Sunday flower show in his new greenhouses, at Washington and Main avenues. Many attended, as the houses are right in the midst of the residence section of the city.

L. Menand, of Cemetery avenue, has a fine lot of cattleyas in bloom for Easter and has had them all sold for the last two weeks. His Easter lilies are quite good this year, but not in such large quantities as he has had in other years. Pot lilies are quoted at 35 cents per bud and bloom and he has sold every one of his 500 pots. Mr. Menand also has about 300 Easter Greeting pelargoniums and they are in good condition for Easter. H. M.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Last week was uneventful in this market, being a typical Lenten week, with plenty of stock in all varieties and the demand not equal to the supply. Carnations and sweet peas were plentiful, also callas and Easter lilies. Roses, however, moved well and prices on them were well maintained. The outlook for Easter is fine. The supply in sight indicates that there will be enough to meet the demand. Cut lilies may pos-

A. N. PIERSON, Inc. - - Cromwell, Conn.

Mention The Review when you write.

DUNEIRA. A magnificent Coleus. A fine, showy bedder standing the sun as well as Verschaffeltii. In color it is a combination of various shades of crimson.
FIREBRAND. Bright maroon.
GOLDEN BEDDER. Golden yellow; the old original, true to name.
LORD ALVERSTONE. Velvety plum with yellow, green and pink markings. A handsome combination. Has a constitution that will resist sunscald and drought.
LORD PALMERSTON. A beautiful variety that immediately commands admiration. Deep maroon center with dark crimson venation.
QUEEN VICTORIA. Cardinal red with distinct golden border.
VERSCHAFFELTII. The standard crimson.

ENGLISH IVY.

Invaluable evergreen variety, used for covering graves where other plants will not thrive because of shade. Excellent for covering walls, etc.
3-inch pots, $1.50 doz., $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000; 4-inch pots, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100; 4-inch selected, $2.50 to $3.00 doz., $20.00 to $25.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

USING 1-INCH PIPE.

We are erecting a John C. Moninger Co. greenhouse, 21x52 feet, running east and west, with a boiler house at the northeast corner. It will be seven feet to the gutter. Three feet of the wall is of tile and stucco. Forty-five inches in the ends and the north side of the house is glass. The south wall is wood to the height of three feet. We are using 16x18-inch lapped glass, with 12-foot sashbars from gutter to ridge.

We intend to use steam heat and want to have a heat of 60 degrees in zero weather. We also want to heat a cold-frame at the south side of the house, 6x50 feet, to 45 degrees in zero weather.

Will a 2-inch main overhead be sufficient to feed coils under the benches, taking a 1¼-inch line to coils, the coils to be made of 1-inch pipe? We are using branch tees at both ends of the coils, taking the returns out of the branch tees nearest the boiler. There are air valves in the tees at the far ends. We have four benches, two side ones, thirty inches wide, and two center ones, sixty inches wide. The returns will be above the water line in the boiler, making all radiating surface live steam. How many 1-inch coils will be necessary? C. & S.—Ill.

As I understand the description of the house, each wall has forty-five inches of glass below the level of the plates. To heat such a house to 60 degrees in zero weather, about 300 square feet of radiation will be required.

For this a 2-inch overhead main will answer well and will readily heat the house with sixteen 1-inch return pipes in the coils. It is advisable to use five of the returns under each of the side benches and three pipes in coils under each middle bench. The lower ends of the coils should be two feet above the water level of the boiler. The air valves should be in the tees at the end of the house nearest the boiler. For heating the hotbed run a 1¼-inch pipe around three sides of the bed.

FOR STEAM HEAT.

I am erecting a greenhouse, 35x50 feet, of which I am sending you a sketch. Will you outline a satisfactory steam heating system? My idea is to extend this house later, but I should like to know how large a boiler is necessary to maintain 45 to 50 degrees in zero weather. The boiler is to be only large enough to heat the present house. How would the piping be best arranged, using 1¼-inch pipe? L. H. H.—O.

Neither the letter nor the sketch affords any information as to the amount of glass in the walls and ends of the house. Provided there is no glass in the side walls, about 360 square feet

DULUTH, MINN.*The Market.

With Easter just a week away, everybody is busy preparing for the great day, with the expectation of a busy week-end. There will be no shortage of stock this Easter, as there seems to be a large supply of everything.

Stock last week was plentiful, with an oversupply of carnations and the prices down to pre-war times. Roses were not in large supply, but there were quite enough for the business done. Spring flowers, including daffodils, freesias, tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, were in good supply. Sweet peas are good property and sell well. Mignonette and calendulas of good quality are also arriving. Violets, both single and double, are in ample supply and are used chiefly for corsage work. Easter lilies and callas are in great demand. Asparagus plumosus was scarce last week.

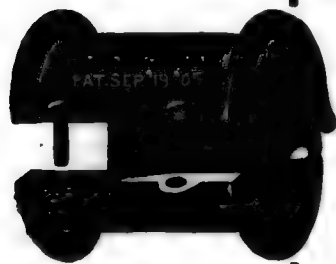

In potted plants there is a good collection of primulas, cinerarias, genistas, hydrangeas and many bulbous plants, which make a good selling line.

In the seed trade things are beginning to move in fine shape and the outlook is that business will be exceedingly good along this line for the next few months.

Various Notes.

J. J. Le Borious has a fine batch of Easter lilies, which will be in prime condition for Easter. He was a bit doubtful about getting them in on time, but the sunny days of the last week have helped greatly. He also has the finest batch of hydrangeas that has been seen in Duluth for some time. In cut flowers he is cutting some fine carnations.

William Japp has some fine lilies and bulbous stock. J. E. S.

"Please send us another of those thermometer clocks, just like the one you sent us about two weeks ago. We would never be without one again."
Trost & Steinfurth.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with. The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

The Market.

Considering that it is the late Lenten season, business moved along well last week, with quite satisfactory returns. People seem to be finally appreciating the fact that flowers and plants are low in price and are taking advantage of the situation. Each day sees the markets cleaned up nicely. Present indications are that this Easter season will be a record-breaker. Saturday, March 27, one wholesale house reported more advance orders than were received altogether during the Easter season last year.

Various Notes.

Tuesday, March 23, fire destroyed the second floor, including the furnishings, of the home of Theodore Verscharen, the Carbon street grower, south side. The damages were estimated at $3,500 and are understood to be fully covered by insurance. The fire is attributed to crossed electric wires.

Edward J. McCallum has offered the Retail Florists' Association of the Pittsburgh district $100 to head a subscription list for the launching of an aggressive newspaper advertising campaign.

Carl Lindroth has returned from an eastern business and pleasure trip, during which he visited various growers, including the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, where he was employed several years; Bobbink & Atkins, and the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and Henry Schmidt, Weehawken, N. J. During the last five years Mr. Lindroth has been in charge of Randolph & McClements' greenhouses on Stanton Heights, and he is now supervising the erection of a greenhouse to be finished in June, for chrysanthemums. This will make a total range of thirty-two houses devoted to growing all varieties of plants for retail use, in addition to a number of coldframes. Two houses are filled with magnificent cibotiums; seven with ferns of the Boston types; two with crotons and one with pandanus, the remainder being used for Dutch and French bulbs and various flowering plants, including approximately 22,000 geraniums, 1,800 ramblers, 3,000 hydrangeas, 6,000 Easter lilies and about 250 Tausendschoen roses. Outdoors are 10,000 pansies and all kinds of perennials, small trees and shrubs. Twenty-seven men are employed. James McCurio, who has been with the firm for the last ten years, is in charge of the croton houses and of the making of combination baskets. Mr. McClements had unusually elaborate decorations for the automobile show at the Motor Square Garden last week, which required four men and two trucks of stock for setting up and two men daily for retouching. He contributed the decorations for the forty-fifth anniversary and house-warming of the East End Y. W. C. A., and the opening of its new group of buildings.

Announcement has just been made of the marriage of William Picketts to Miss Elsie Reeves, which was an event of January 15, at Wellsburg, W. Va. Flower Week.

The flower week held in this city March 15 to 20 made large use of the Von Tilzer song, "Say It with Flowers." Mrs. Mae Middleton Colley sang it at several motion picture theaters during the week and also at three of the schools, where it was taught to the children. It was sung also at Mrs. John Wesley Graham's concert in Munn's auditorium Wednesday afternoon, March 17, when flowers were distributed to the audience and the artists who participated; the song was printed on slips of paper and given to the audience, who were encouraged to join in singing it.

A flower program was given at the luncheon of the Rotary Club Thursday, when the songs, "Springtime" and "When You Looked into the Heart of a Rose," were used, the first song being also sung at the luncheon of the Salesmanship Club Friday.

R. C. Kerr, who was president of the S. A. F. when the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," was adopted, had 20,000 copies of the slogan song printed for distribution and was largely responsible for the musical entertainments.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—The Haentze Floral Co. has sent out announcements inviting its customers and friends to attend the opening of its completed greenhouses and stores March 28 and 29. The announcements invite this firm's customers who have never visited the range or inspected a modern greenhouse and its equipment, to take this opportunity.

Stock continues in large supply. Roses in almost every variety have been plentiful at from $6 to $12 per hundred. Carnations have been abundant. Good stock in the more common varieties has been selling at $4 and $16 per hundred, while good fancies are bringing $8.

Good sweet peas are scarce and are making $2 per hundred sprays. Poorer qualities are more plentiful at $1 per hundred sprays. Violets are in evidence at $1 and $1.50 per hundred.

Lilies have been fairly plentiful. Callas have been abundant, but Easter lilies have been just about equal to the demand. The former are bringing $2 and $3 per dozen, while the latter bring an average of $3 per dozen.

A newcomer in the market is the snapdragon. It is selling at $10 and $12.50 per hundred.

Bulbous stock is in fair supply, including jonquils, tulips, daffodils and hyacinths. The average price of these is from $6 to $8 per hundred, except the hyacinths, which bring a little more.

Potted plants have been meeting with fair sales; the most popular of all are potted bulbous stock. Cinerarias have also been popular. Begonias, cyclamens and primroses are also offered.

Easter Forecast.

The market is in fair shape for Easter. Prices in the latter part of this week will of course be higher than those quoted in the preceding paragraphs. Roses will range from $15 to $35 per hundred. Carnations will bring from $8 to $10, except fancy stock, which will bring $15 per hundred. Sweet peas will be around $2 and $3. Potted plants will not be so abundant as in previous years, but will, nevertheless, be in fair supply. Azaleas and hydrangeas will be rather scarce. Bulbous stock will be conspicuous and the regular line of potted stock for this season will be in evidence.

Various Notes.

Clarence Greene, realizing the value of time, has put "the time" in his window and has been realizing a great deal from it. This clock, which is self-winding, always has some readers, who, by following the hands, cannot help but read "Say It with Flowers," which is enscrolled across the top.

Baur & Steinkamp have been busy shipping out carnation and chrysanthemum cuttings. They will have an excellent cut of carnations and snapdragons for Easter. Clarence Hirth, formerly with the Pahud Floral Co., is now with Baur & Steinkamp. Theodore Kuebler, Jr., of Evansville, is also with this firm. Robert Fohl has left this firm to superintendent Hugh McK. Landon's private estate.

The April meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association has been postponed from the first to the second Tuesday of the month. Because of its close proximity to Easter, it was deemed wise to make this change in order that the florists may have a chance to recuperate in the meantime.

George Gauss, of Richmond, Ind., attended the ceremony at the Murat temple last week.

A. F. J. Baur and his family spent Sunday in Richmond, Ind. Mr. Baur states that the crops there look excellent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

There was a greater abundance of stock on the market last week than there has been for some time. The demand has been fairly good and the large supply of sweet peas and various spring flowers has kept the market filled up. Prices have been affected in all lines. Orchids are bringing $20 per dozen, Beauties $12 to $15 per dozen, Easter lilies $30 per hundred, carnations $15 per hundred, sweet peas $3 to $5 per hundred, gardenias $5 to $9 per dozen and roses $10 to $50 per hundred. The rose supply is satisfactory and the stock is exceedingly fine. Spring flowers are arriving in large quantities, but are cleaning up in good shape.

The outlook for Easter is good and business is fair at present, although there is a lull before the storm. All varieties of stock are keeping up to the mark in quality and, despite the large supply, little is held. Everybody seems to be piled up with Easter orders and all members of the trade are preparing for the rush. Due to the disappearance of the flu epidemic, the amount of funeral work is about normal again.

Various Notes.

With much hard work and careful thinking, Arthur Shaffer and Herbert Sauber are working out their plans for the Washington baseball team this year. The members of the trade have given freely to the fund which is being collected to equip the team in first-class shape. The team has had its first workout and the batteries have been out getting good practice. Arthur Shaffer is manager and he reports the progress satisfactory. Arrangements for the first game have been completed and they expect to play several out-of-town games. They also have hopes of going to Cleveland to play for the convention.

A movement is on hand to induce the local music stores to handle the "Say It with Flowers" song and also to have the different picture houses flash the chorus on their screens. There is also a suggestion that the local florists handle the song in their stores.

Final arrangements have been completed for the oyster roast to be held in honor of the newly elected officers of the Washington Florists' Club at Elks' hall, April 9. G. V. S.

David G. Grillbortzer, of the Washington Floral Co., reports that his firm has between 5,000 and 6,000 pots of lilies bearing from three to fifteen flowers each, at the Alexandria range. Of hydrangea plants the company has about 1,500 pots.

Our Specialty - Get Our Figures

531-537 Plymouth Pl., CHICAGO

Troy, Ohio, March 15, 1920.

Dear Mr. Review Reader:

We are frankly optimists upon the future of a flower-growing industry in this country. With flowers being used as they are today, not merely as a luxury by the rich, but practically as a necessity in the ever-day life of the people, who have learned to "Say It with Flowers," has come an insistent demand that will mean high prices for a long time.

So it surely behooves every Florist, whether he grows plants for the trade, or cut flowers, inside or out, to take advantage of every labor-saving device and every proven method of getting bigger and better crops, that he can find.

There is many a grower operating only an acre or two of ground outside, and a few thousand square feet of glass, who wants a Skinner system, but does not think that he can afford it.

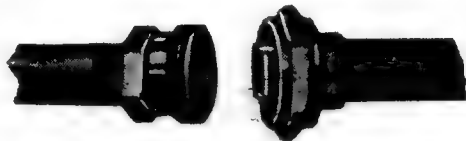

Irrigation is now a really vital necessity to those men who expect to make real money out of their crops outside, and it is proving to be a tremendous saver of labor and expense for inside watering.

The big grower, operating a dozen houses and acres of ground outside, can better afford to take a chance on the weather than the small grower, because he is in a financial position to stand the loss. But, as a rule, the big grower has the Skinner system, because he is a keen business man and knows that it is necessary to realize the biggest percentage of profit on his investment.

It must be admitted that the small grower realizes the value of irrigation, but his excuse is that "it costs too much." That is not a logical excuse.

To make it easier for the small grower to try irrigation on his own place, the company with which I am identified has put on the market what we call Sectional Portable Irrigation Lines.

These lines are built of heavily galvanized pipe, cut into 18-foot sections. Between each two sections there is a patented "quick-acting coupling." Here is a picture to show just what this coupling looks like.

The sockets fit together so that the nozzles are always in perfect alignment. No tool except an ordinary monkey wrench is needed to quickly take them apart and put them together.

A line 200 feet long consists of 11 sections 18 feet long, the extra 2 feet being made up by the turning union attachment at the head of the line.

Here's the interesting part:

Suppose the grower has an acre outside, which is a piece of ground about 200 feet square, and he wants to put that acre under the Skinner system. Ordinarily, it would require four lines, each 200 feet long, spaced 50 feet apart.

The Sectional Portable Line makes it possible for the grower to use one line to water the whole place. He simply places four rows of posts 50 feet apart, the posts being 15 feet apart in the row. Water is piped to the head of each row. It is a very simple matter to couple the pipe together, lay it on the top of the roller-bearing hangers, which slip into the pipe posts, turn on the water and irrigate a first strip, 50 feet wide. When that strip is watered, two men can easily and quickly shift the line in 36-foot lengths to the next row of posts, and so on, until the acre is watered. Three men can move the line in 72-foot lengths.

This may sound like some trouble, but it will pay the biggest return of any labor you can do. Two hours will cover the pipe shifting necessary to water an acre.

In an ordinary year the line will more than pay for itself, and in a dry year it will pay dividends the grower didn't think possible. Or, one of these Portable Lines, equipped for greenhouse watering, can be put up and tried in one house. If you have any doubts of its working successfully on the different things you are growing, it is an easy matter to shift it to another house, and prove for yourself that it will work successfully there.

Now these Portable Lines make a mighty easy way to get started, and we heartily recommend them to the man who wants a Skinner system, but has put off getting it, with the argument that he can't afford it.

The Skinner Irrigation Co. especially invites correspondence. Questions about water supply, pumps, engines, etc., are cheerfully answered. A service that growers will appreciate is a free blue print, showing how the Skinner System can be adapted to the size and shape of the land of the grower asking for it. Or to different widths of greenhouses, and for different greenhouse crops. There is no obligation, and we would like to have every one interested write us. Through our Engineering Department and traveling experts we render distinct service that is valuable to any grower.

We don't care how small a proposition is—it will receive just as careful attention as one calling for the largest kind of a system.

P. H. BRIDGE, Sec'y.

P. S. We are going to have a few things to say about watering by hose, and watering by mechanical equipment, which will interest any one who grows anything under glass. Watch the columns of this paper the next few weeks, for the series of talks on "Horse Sense Hunches on the National Sport of Hose Holding." No. 1 will be entitled, "Rut Running and Hobby Riding."

HERE'S A GOOD ONE
Everyone who grows single Pompons knows Mrs. E. D. Godfrey. It has been the best late pink variety. Now comes a sport of Godfrey, its name is:

ANNABEL
It is a sturdier grower with exceptionally good foliage. Has long stiff stems, well branched. Have cut stems with seventeen flowers and buds running up to 8½ in. across. Unusually good keeper in bench or when cut. Color, a beautiful cerise, tending toward lavender. Flowers of anemone type with several rows of petals, and yellow center. Season of blooming, Thanksgiving to Christmas. It is better than parent or any other Pompon and will bring more money. It is later than any variety we know of. 2½-in. plants for delivery April and later. Orders filled in rotation. Order early. Sold under agreement that you dispose of no stock to any person until 1922. Prices, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000. Rooted cuttings, $15.00 per 100, delivery May and later. Strong plants and careful packing guaranteed.

A-JAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results. To prospective purchasers we can give names of satisfied users in every greenhouse center—over a hundred names in Chicago locality alone.

NOT AFFECTED BY EXTREME HEAT OR COLD

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres, and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather due to its being inter-laced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard drying white putties are used.

LOW COST

Compared with the old fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost.

One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

D. S. CHAPIN

Easily applied with a bulber. No clumsy tools necessary.

BLACK APHIS ON MUMS.

I have a number of stock chrysanthemum plants in my greenhouse from which I am taking my cuttings, but lately they have become infested with small black insects. These insects are just as thick on the plants as is possible for them to stick. They are about the size of the green aphid, possibly a little smaller. Can you tell me what they are and how to get rid of them?
D. B. D.—Ark.

The little insect with which you are troubled is black aphid, which is identical with green aphid, except in color. The only way to get rid of them is to dust the plants with tobacco dust, the fumigating kind, and fumigate the house until the fumes have driven out or killed all the flies. The black aphid should be all cleaned off before the cuttings are taken to be put in the sand.
C. W.

Ardmore, Okla.—A hail storm March 11 caused the breakage of about 300 panes of glass in the establishment of Woerz Bros. The houses of single glass suffered the most, as only a few panes of the double-strength broke.

Beacon, N. Y.—S. L. Young, of the Spy Hill Conservatories, says demand has been excellent all season and that at no time has it been impossible to get good flowers. Weather conditions have been difficult. In no winter within Mr. Young's recollection has the Hudson been frozen from shore to shore for so long a period as this season. Outdoor work will start late and come with a rush.

Joe Hill Builds

You, of course, remember how, when Joe Hill built his first Lord & Burnham house in 1916, it created a good bit of talk.

It happened that a lot of you knew that some fifteen years before, E. G. Hill, his father, had built a Lord & Burnham house.

But when the Joe Hill Company was started, they didn't start with "L. and B." houses.

So when that double-page spread came out, telling about three of our houses which followed, you pricked up your ears. Have just looked back over that Ad, and the thing which to our notion is most impressive, is what Joe Hill says himself.

You may recall he said that "always he had kind of thought that eventually he would build Lord & Burnham houses. It was an ambition he had held for years, to own one of their top-notch houses."

When it came to building his new house he decided to make it nineteen feet and a half wider than our first big one, which makes it 79 feet 5 inches.

Although over 19 feet wider than the other, both have but two columns.

The extra roof strain is taken care of by the necessary increases in framing members and the use of a two-strut truss running from the column to the eave.

All trussing members are double bolted.

The gusset plates binding together the post and rafters, are double.

The eave is equipped with a galvanized U-Bar drip gutter.

The sash sill is galvanized angle iron.

The 4-inch concrete curtain wall is capped by a 5-inch cast iron sill.

The columns are galvanized inside and out.

Mr. Hill tells us he will plant the house to about 16,000 Rose Premier.

Three years ago we furnished two Steel Frame Truss houses to the Eagle Grove Greenhouses at Eagle Grove, Iowa.

Just the other day we received an order for another house to be added to the above.

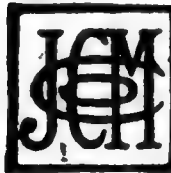

These greenhouses have stood up through the winter's snows and storms and have rendered constant and economical service. They are money makers and while they cost a little more than the pipe frame house, they are worth it.

Government Builds Big House at Fort Leavenworth

You ask: "What in the name of common sense does the Government want of a greenhouse at an army Disciplinary Barracks?"

ANSWER: Because it is common sense; that's why they want it.

QUESTION: But what are they going to do with it?

ANSWER: It isn't a question of what they are going to do. They have already done it. They have for two years planted it with flowers and vegetables.

QUESTION: But what under heavens do they want with flowers? Surely a Fort doesn't require flowers.

ANSWER: No, but the men do. They need to have things said to them with flowers, as only flowers can say them.

QUESTION: Who looks after the growing?

ANSWER: The Trustees. The prisoners who, because of good behavior, have proved themselves trustworthy. And say, you ought to see the pride with which they show you every little thing! Why man, those growing things are like children to them!

QUESTION: How big a house is it, and is the one all there is to it?

ANSWER: It is 70 ft. by 400 ft., having 2 columns spaced 37 ft. 1 inch apart across the house, and 12 ft. 6 inches lengthwise of the house.

The Government plans call for several houses of the same size. It is figured that, when the range is large enough, it can become practically self-supporting.

Oh, yes, and another thing. I went there as a perfect stranger to all the men. Didn't let on I was from Lord & Burnham. In that way I got a fair and frank point of view of how they liked the house. Didn't have to ask them. They just bubbled over with pride. All of them were sure it was the finest house built. One of them, with engineering training, told of its construction strong points, in a way that made me almost believe L. & B. did know how to build greenhouses.

You're maybe of the same frame of mind.

If so, and you want to talk building, say when and where, and we'll be there.

It has taken 35 years of hard work to develop the organization making National Cash Registers

STARTING with two employees in one little room, The National Cash Register Company now has a making organization of over 7,000 people working in 21 big buildings.

It has taken 35 years to develop this tremendous organization.

Many obstacles had to be overcome in those years. Money, time, and energy were thrown into the enterprise by large-visioned men who believed that cash registers were a necessity in stores of all kinds.

Slowly but surely the business grew. Building after building sprang up to house the expanding organization.

The National Cash Register factory of today is the result. It is built on a foundation of faith in the cash register as a business necessity. It is dedicated to the making of a labor-saving machine that helps merchants, clerks, and customers.

The latest and most amazing introduction of Carnations and an entirely new departure

OVER 100 DIFFERENT VARIETIES

ORDERS

Are now being accepted for small plants in 2-inch and 2½-inch pots, for December or later delivery, of Merveille Francaise and Le Miracle.

MERVEILLE FRANCAISE

The largest Carnation in the world.

Color, flesh with pink stripes and spots.

The flower, fully developed, forms a perfect ball of astounding size, measuring in most cases from 7 to 9½-inches across (over top).

Free from disease.

Unlike other large flowering or Malmaison type of Carnations, every shoot forms immediately a flowering stem.

The stems are 18 to 24 inches long.

It has a spicy fragrance.

The flowers can be kept from seven to fourteen days after being cut.

Excellent shipper.

The cuttings root easily.

Make ideal pot plants.

In fact, a 100% Carnation with the greatest propagating possibilities for obtaining any number of different colors of same type.

LE MIRACLE

The most remarkable color ever obtained, being purple lavender in Winter and shady position, changing to a variegation of colors in Spring and Summer.

Possesses all the qualities of Merveille Francaise except the flowers are not quite so large and of a somewhat different form.

Over 10,000 cut flowers have been sold at a standardized price of 50c each in New York City alone (wholesale) and $1.00 each retail.

Prices for small plants in 2 or 2½-inch pots for private trade have been accepted at:

One Plant ..... $5.00 each	Twelve Plants ..... $4.00 each
Six Plants ..... 4.50 each	Fifty Plants ..... 3.00 each

I now offer these plants in 2 or 2½-inch pots to the Wholesale Trade in 100 lots at $1.00 each and special prices for larger quantities, or outright for one or another variety, on application.

These prices may seem exaggerated, but will be found exceedingly cheap in comparison to the following facts and figures:

Twenty-five years' experience in growing Large Flowering Carnations.

Six years "Americanizing" Plants to obtain the proper results.

Thirty thousand dollars ($30,000.00) invested.

"We Wouldn't Consider Any Other Truck"

IN the service of Florists, White operating records of 100,000 miles and more are common. Malandre Bros., of New York; Weiland, of Chicago; Graham and the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, are a few of many florist-owners who have recently reported White records of over 100,000 miles. Whites owned by Kirchner, of Cleveland, and Baum's, of Knoxville, Tenn., have passed the 200,000-mile mark, and are still going strong.

C. A. Samuelson, of Chicago, is another florist who recently reported a White record of 100,000 miles. "The efficiency and economy of the White have been wonderful," says Mr. Samuelson. "In nine years of delivery the truck has never failed us. We are so well satisfied with the service given by the White that we wouldn't consider any other truck."

New Sweet Pea Mrs. Rudolph Nagel

The Sweet Pea Grower who is no longer content with a "mere white," who has been dreaming of a variety that would come into the market early, bloom continuously throughout the winter and late into the spring season, should by all means invest in an ounce or more of Mrs. Rudolph Nagel, the new black-seeded White Sweet Pea, originated and grown for the past two years by Mr. Rudolph Nagel, of Lancaster, Pa.

The consensus of opinion of growers who "watched it grow" is that Mrs. Rudolph Nagel is without a doubt the best variety in sight today.

In a letter under date of March 29, 1920, the Leo Niessen Co., the well known commission house of Philadelphia, writes us as follows:

S. S. Skidelsky & Co., 50 Park Place,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Referring to the new White Sweet Pea introduced by Mr. Rudolph Nagel, of Lancaster, Pa., would say that we have handled the flowers this and last season, and we consider this variety has many good qualities.

It blooms early in the season; in fact, Mr. Nagel was cutting good Peas in November. They bloomed all winter and the same vines are still producing good flowers at this date. We do not hesitate to recommend this Pea very highly.

Respectfully yours,

THE LEO NIESSEN CO. (signed) A. A. Niessen.

In its issue of February 21, 1920, the Florists' Exchange has this to say about Mrs. Rudolph Nagel:

"The flowers arrived in good condition and kept well after they arrived; in fact, unusually well. These new Sweet Peas are of the Spencer type, very large, and the long, stout stems carry three and four blooms each. The white variety looks to us like a desirable addition to the present list of Sweet Peas of that color."

A Certificate of Merit was awarded this variety by the expert Sweet Pea judges at the recent International Flower Show held in New York.

So, lest you forget, we say again, invest in an ounce or more of Mrs. Rudolph Nagel, the Black-Seeded White Sweet Pea.

STORM STOPS EASTER PARADE

Stormy weather on Easter morning prevented the big Easter parade that brings thousands of dollars into florists' tills Sunday morning. Coming on the evening before in some places, snow and rain dissipated the crowd of last-minute buyers and hindered delivery. But it was a big Easter.

PROMISE of an Easter record that would exceed anything in the trade's history was wrecked by a storm which arrived in some places the day before Easter and in others on Easter morning, forbidding the streets to thousands of once-a-year church-goers and depriving florists of an untold amount of business. The orders in the week before the big day had been rolling in so strongly that the trade had anticipations of an Easter business without compare. To the retailers' great satisfaction, there turned out to be plenty of stock, both of plants and cut flowers, more indeed than anyone had expected, and they planned to push sales with a vim that would send the total to a high figure. Plant orders started to come in early and the retailers disposed of all in this line before the arrival of the storm. All that it did was to handicap deliveries and spoil a comparatively small number of plants. Cut flowers bore the disastrous effects of the storm. For, instead of streets crowded with the gayly clad Easter parade, Sunday morning saw them deserted for the most part, swept clean of pedestrians by rain and snow.

Panhandle Blizzard.

The weather bureau report which appears on this page tells the story. A blizzard that started in the Texas panhandle swept northeastward across the country, carrying rain, wind and snow. The storm struck Kansas City Saturday morning and a heavy downfall of snow discouraged the shoppers for Easter. Saturday afternoon snow fell heavily in St. Louis. Kansas, Nebraska, northern Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa all felt lower temperatures and received some rain or snow. In some places the precipitation was quite heavy, several inches of snow or rain falling during the afternoon.

Saturday night the storm reached Illinois, where the snow was exceptionally heavy. A new April snowfall record was made at Springfield. Six and three-tenths inches fell between 2:30 and 7 o'clock Sunday afternoon. It was more than the fall of snow for the entire winter at that place. At other points in the state heavy snow was also reported.

In Chicago the storm began early Sunday morning and when the Easter church-goers looked out of their windows upon arising they saw swirling snow driven by a tremendous wind through the streets. By church time several inches had fallen and the streets were filled with a slippery, sloppy mass that intimidated any but the most staunch-hearted pedestrian and made passage difficult for automobile traffic. Delivery trucks were in many cases stalled and under the guidance of skillful drivers could at best only crawl along, making but a quarter to a third the usual speed. Extra cars were pressed into service and taxicab drivers bribed to carry the belated Easter plants to their destinations. Instead of ceasing work at noon, florists were at work till mid-afternoon and evening getting out orders.

Of course, the customary great trade in corsages was to a marked extent lost. The stores which particularly depend upon counter sales felt the effects of the storm keenly. Some sales were made, but they were few compared with the number that would have been possible if the day had been bright and clear. The loss of this business was the more lamented because of the abundance of cut flowers. There was a large supply of lilies, carnations and some other stock Saturday night, a large part of which would have been moved, had Easter day been clear. As it was, few orders were filled on the wholesale market Sunday morning and large quantities of stock were carried over to the following week.

Later in East.

Northern Indiana and Ohio received a large fall of snow, while the southern parts of the states had rain. In the large flower centers there the plant stock was all moved, but an abundance of cut flowers remained, for lack of the usual corsage business. Roses and carnations, particularly the latter, were left in the wholesale houses till Monday.

Michigan suffered from heavy snow, the cold section of the storm passing northward across the country. To the east of Michigan the effect was felt in the form of showers which reached Philadelphia and New York Easter morning and Boston Sunday afternoon. The northern half of the storm was the worse and the cities which were in its path felt the effects much more severely.

Rains had fallen on the eastern seaboard earlier in the week, in New York on Friday, April 2, but Saturday was, fortunately, a bright clear day, when business made up what it had lost on the day before. The severity of the weather was not so great as in the central west when the storm did come, and the curtailment of trade was much less felt. New England escaped the storm until the big day's business was over and the trade there did the largest it has known.

Big Day, Nevertheless.

Despite the storm, however, an enormous business was done by florists in all sections of the country and the trade is not so pessimistic over the losses incurred as it would be if the storm had been earlier and of longer duration.

Prices were not so high as might have been anticipated, because stock was exceedingly plentiful. There were all the plants and cut flowers the retailers could sell. The former were moved well, though in some places growers who were anxious over prospects of a surplus sold out at low prices to department stores in order to clear out the plants before Easter had passed. But these cases were few. Of cut flowers, there is a different story, chiefly because of the storm. An abundance that the trade would have regarded as a godsend with bright Easter day weather became a surplus. In some centers carnations became even a glut, so abundant were they and so weakly did they sell in the face of good supplies of other stock.

Lilies were much more numerous than had been expected, from the reports of a short supply of bulbs and of curtailed planting because of the high price. They descended to 15 cents for cut blooms and in some places went as high as 35 cents. Plants held more uniformly to 25 to 30 cents per flower at wholesale. Retail figures were customarily 50 and 75 cents per bloom and bud.

Some centers, Philadelphia for example, report the greatest Easter in their history, greatest in number of sales, greatest in sum of money. As to net profits, it is not safe to say, but there is no doubt that everywhere the trade made much money. Telegraph orders were extraordinarily large. The public had the money and spent it this Easter. The sole drawback occurred when the storm would not allow the people out to spend their money.

EASTER ADVERTISING.

The big day of spring was especially big for florists in those communities where they used newspaper space during the week preceding to advertise their stock. The trade was generous in its use of advertising space as a rule and everybody was much pleased with the results from their publicity.

The page advertisement used in St. Louis was reproduced in last week's issue of The Review. In Milwaukee and other cities also cooperative advertisements assisted in booming Easter sales.

Individual florists also made extensive use of newspaper space, not only in the large cities, but also in the smaller towns. Full pages were not uncommon, though the news-print paper shortage restricted some florists' expenditure.

John Coombs, at Hartford, Conn., was one who employed a full page, which appeared in the Hartford Times March 30, urging customers to purchase early. The advertisement is reproduced on this page. Its layout is effective because the reading matter has been divided so as to give the main story, that of choosing early, conspicuous position and to concentrate the reader's attention on it entirely, permitting reference afterwards to the list of stock available at the right. The copy was prepared for John Coombs by Hilmer V. Swenson & Co., Chicago. The result of the publicity was most satisfying to Mr. Coombs, who did a big business at both his stores in Hartford.

CUT GLADIOLI FOR EASTER

How often can one expect to see the large-flowering gladioli at Easter time? Few people know and perhaps it is hard to believe that they were seen in Toledo, O., this year, at Easter. April 2, 1920, just two days before Easter Sunday, we cut the first of our Niagara, large white spikes, with an average of eight florets open, which we sold at our retail store at the small price of $1 per stem and all were sold at that price. Of course we did not have many to cut, there being only a few, but to think of having cut gladioli for Easter! Can anyone beat it? We shall be able to cut a few right along—not many, but a few. W. Imobersteg.

PROPAGATING LILACS.

I have a large number of large shrubs from which I can take thousands of cuttings—double lilacs, snowballs, weigelas, mock oranges, hydrangeas, etc. There are a small stream and a lake on my place. Would this location be a good one in which to root these cuttings? I want to grow a large number of double lilacs for forcing. M. F. J.—Va.

Propagating can be done in early summer by using short cuttings of half-ripened wood. A close frame is necessary. Cuttings must be shaded and frequently sprayed, as many as six to eight times daily if the weather is hot. You should do this propagation early in June, before the wood becomes too hard. Many shrubs can also be propagated from mature wood. Place the cuttings, cut in suitable lengths, in damp sand in a cold cellar over winter, where they will callous. In spring plant out in nursery rows, burying the cuttings two-thirds of their length and firming the soil well. Persistent cultivation is necessary, as well as hand weeding through the growing season. The choice double and single lilacs do not propagate successfully from mature wood. The other shrubs which you name are easily grown in this way. C. W.

TAKING ORDERS FOR TREES

THE season for outdoor planting draws near, considerable numbers of florists have opportunities to take orders for shrubs and trees as well as for bedding plants and other herbaceous stock. Many florists, of course, are so situated that they would not find it either convenient or profitable to push the sale of hard-wooded stock. Others, however, are favorably located for the successful handling of such a line of trade. Certainly few florists can afford to disappoint and perhaps offend a customer by rejecting such extra spring business when it is freely offered to them.

In accepting even a stray, semi-occasional order for a few trees or shrubs, the florist may—who knows?—be conferring an ultimate benefit on a wide circle of people, including himself, the customer, the community at large, the nurseryman from whom the stock is procured and the whole nursery trade. Not a few home-owners have just enough ambition for home-improvement so that they will take the slight trouble, on their way to or from business, to stop at the store of the neighborhood florist and give an order for trees or shrubs—if the florist can tell them exactly what are the best varieties for their purpose.

What to Sell and What to Tell.

If these half-hearted would-be purchasers find that the transaction requires any greater effort than “dropping in” casually at the florist’s store, they simply will not purchase; they will limit their lawn operations to the growing of grass. But if the florist sells them the right trees and shrubs, accompanied with a judicious amount of the right sort of advice, the results may be so satisfactory as to encourage the purchasers to greater endeavor in lawn beautification. Their neighbors also, watching developments, may be spurred to the same sort of endeavor and so the wholesome contagion will spread, ad infinitum. On the other hand, if the florist proffers the wrong stock or the wrong advice, the consequences may be only disaster and disappointment. How important it is, then, that the florist should know what to sell and what to tell when the amateur planter wishes to buy!

Some helpful suggestions on the selection of ornamental and shade trees are given in a bulletin recently issued by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, at Wooster, O. Of course the bulletin’s statements, as far as they are based on experiences at or near Wooster, are not intended to be precisely applicable elsewhere, even in similar latitudes.

Latitude and Local Conditions.

Wooster is in the same latitude as north-central Illinois and the southern extremity of New York state. But local conditions, as well as latitude, must be considered. Some species of trees which are approved in the bulletin, and which presumably thrive in the vicinity of Wooster, O., would not fare so well in or near Chicago. That assertion applies especially to some of the flowering trees and other more showy varieties mentioned in the bulletin, such as the liquidambar, the flowering dogwood, the judas tree and most of the magnolias. Conservative nurserymen in northern Illinois would hesitate to recommend these to local patrons. Even the birches, though unquestionably hardy, are difficult to establish near Chicago and in some other localities.

Among the less familiar, less commonplace trees that are favorably referred to in the agricultural bulletin, perhaps the most desirable is the ginkgo or maidenhair tree, called botanically Ginkgo biloba or Salisburia adiantifolia. It is of Chinese origin and is unique and picturesque in appearance.

Its leaves, which are fan-shaped or maidenhair-like, withstand city conditions. It is hardy and seems to be unmolested by pests, even when surrounding trees are a prey to many sorts of insects. It may be obtained either in decidedly pyramidal shape or with more wide-spreading branches. The pyramidal form is the more striking and is suitable for comparatively small areas, such as city lawns, though the tree finally attains a good size.

Oaks would not usually be considered good subjects for a beginner to experiment with, but the agricultural bulletin rightly gives them high rank as ornamental trees. “Well selected hardwood trees,” says the bulletin, “although in some instances of slow growth for a few years after planting, have a permanence worthy of serious consideration when the choice of planting materials is being made. When they are once thoroughly established, the rate of even the slowest species becomes accelerated and it is safe to assert that at the age of 25 years the oaks will approximate in size most other species that were planted at the same time. On the grounds of the experiment station the oaks are becoming the leading trees in a planting scheme designed primarily to illustrate the value of native planting materials.

Choice Species of Oak.

“Our oaks are trees of much dignity, are extremely long-lived and are endowed with a landscape value such as few trees possess. For streets and avenues oaks compare favorably with the elm and can be grown on a greater variety of soils. One of the finest is the red oak, which has been more widely planted in Europe than any other of our oaks and is probably the most rapid of all the oaks in its rate of growth. The pin oak is an extremely graceful tree; it is native to moist lands, but grows well almost everywhere and makes a perfect specimen for the lawn or formal avenue.

"The bur oak, scarlet oak and white oak are all good trees that are known to succeed in the latitude of Wooster and over the entire state. Less well known but equally choice and desirable are the chestnut oak, the willow oak, from the south, and the shingle oak (Quercus imbricaria), sometimes called the laurel oak, which is one of the richest and handsomest of all oaks in its garb of glossy, dark green leaves. The willow oak, though most abundant in the southern states, has proved to be entirely hardy and satisfactory in Ohio.

Elm, Ash, Linden and Maple.

"For alluvial lands and all rich soils the American white elm is unrivaled in majesty and grace. A moderately fast grower, the elm lives to an extremely old age, its beauty increasing from year to year. For street planting the elm is unexcelled where soil conditions are suitable.

"The white ash and the American linden or basswood have a high landscape value and are known to succeed over a wide range of country.

"Probably no group of our native trees has been more popular for lawn planting than the maples, particularly the Norway maple. The most lasting of our native species is undoubtedly the sugar maple, which ought always to be transplanted before it exceeds two have high value for street planting through their resistance to dust, gas and smoke. Foremost of these is the oriental plane or European sycamore, a large, spreading species somewhat similar to its American prototype, but in most regards a finer, more desirable tree. The foliage of this plane is quite free from the fungous diseases that disfigure the American tree, while its head is much more adequately supplied with limbs and branches. The Norway maple is another good smoke and gas resister, whose merits appear now to be pretty generally recognized."

The ginkgo has already been referred to as a good tree for city use; it is generally both healthy and handsome in a city environment. Perhaps the Chinese cork tree, Phellodendron amurense, though omitted from the agricultural bulletin, might appropriately be mentioned in this connection, since it flourishes luxuriantly in city conditions, or at least in Chicago conditions. It is like the ginkgo in being remarkably free from pests, but is an absolute contrast to the ginkgo in habit of growth. It has large pinnate leaves and its branches are wide-spread, forming a round head. It is naturally somewhat irregular in form, but may be trimmed freely.

Distance Apart in Row.

As to the proper spacing of trees along roads, streets and avenues, the letin, "should be spaced sixty feet for the former and forty-five to fifty feet for the latter. A space of forty-five feet will suffice for most other oaks. The American white ash and pin oak should stand thirty or thirty-five feet apart. The sugar maple and silver maple should have a space of forty feet. The ginkgo ought to have a space of thirty feet. Theoretically, the plan of spacing closely and thinning by taking out alternate trees when they begin to crowd is a most admirable one, but reluctance to thin them at the right time generally defeats the original good intentions of the planter."

Results of Reckless Pruning.

Trees generally should be headed back more or less at the time of planting, if the top greatly overbalances the roots. Thereafter, heavy pruning is seldom needed. On this point the bulletin says: "The pruning of shade trees is a subject concerning which information is often desired, and in a general sense it is safe to say that the matter is usually overdone. During the earlier years of a shade tree's existence but little cutting will be required beyond such as is needed to remove broken or otherwise injured limbs or to preserve a moderately symmetrical, well balanced head. As the specimens grow older and often encroach upon one another or sustain injury from storms, heavy cutting will sometimes need to be done. The indiscriminate topping and heading in of trees, particularly such as is in evidence along most village streets, cannot be too severely condemned. The heavy, unsightly stubs thus produced afford openings through which the germs of decay enter and speedily work havoc to the larger branches and to the trunk. If the trees are properly spaced when planted, or are thinned later to avoid overcrowding, little or no pruning will be needed and the lives of the trees will be greatly prolonged."

PLANTING TIME.

When the warm days arrive it is the right time to remind the home owner of the opportunity spring offers for beautifying his grounds by plantings that will develop under the influence of April showers. Often a suggestion is all that is required—the desires of the home owner do the rest. The local papers give florists and nurserymen this opportunity. The illustration on this page shows the form of the suggestion to the Chicago public given by the nursery firm of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., in 3½-inch double-column space in the Chicago Tribune last week. This firm has a large clientele in that city among the people who decorate their home grounds horticulturally.

In this advertisement may be seen the new trade-mark of the American Association of Nurserymen, introduced to the Chicago public for the first time in this appearance.

PREPARED HYACINTHS.

We should like to know what success the trade has had with prepared hyacinths and how early they can be brought into bloom. G. B. & C.—Pa.

Prepared hyacinths can be flowered earlier than the ordinary Dutch hyacinths. A few were noted in flower at Christmas, 1919, but the majority were inches in diameter. For securing early results the silver maple has few equals, but it can scarcely be considered a satisfactory permanent tree. The soft, brittle wood is easily damaged by high winds and most old specimens are much dilapidated. Wier's cut-leaved silver maple is a wonderfully graceful variety of silver maple, with a pendulous, weeping habit. The scarlet or rock maple does best on low, moist lands and colors up in autumn extremely well.

"A few trees from foreign countries bulletin states that the distances depend on the species, on the width of the thoroughfare and most of all on the intentions or expectations of the planter in regard to the permanence of the tree-row. Along many streets the trees have been spaced too closely for a permanent planting and no thinning has been done; hence the presence of many tall, pinched, ill-shaped maples and elms. Unless the planter proposes to thin as required, "the larger trees, such as the white elm and red oak," says the bul-not in good shape until the middle or end of January. If Dutch bulbs arrive earlier than has been the case the last two or three years, there should be no trouble in getting a fair proportion of these in bloom for the holidays. All hyacinths need a certain time to fill their pots with roots and it is useless to try to force them when they have only a few roots.

The Market.

The Easter business was heavy and, on the whole, satisfactory to growers both of plants and of flowers for cutting. The plantmen were all practically sold out of flowering plants many days in advance of the holiday and the indications that cut flowers this year would also enjoy a good demand were entirely fulfilled, a general clean-up being experienced; the little surplus covered only the poorest stock, such as usually is moved only with difficulty.

There was no dearth of lilies and immense quantities were handled within a price range of 12 cents to 20 cents per bud and bloom. Pot lilies brought something more, selected stock bringing as much as 30 cents, or even better, per bloom. Carnations were available in large quantities early Saturday, but moved quickly at $5 and $6 per hundred, mounting later in the day to $8 and $10 per hundred, as they became scarce. Roses were not so plentiful as might have been expected, but there were sufficient to go around, and at moderate prices, since spring flowers, such as tulips and daffodils, of which the supply was enormous, were in greatest demand; this tended to minimize the demand for more staple flowers. There was a good supply of cattleyas, which included the first of the crop of Mossiae, the best flowers of which brought $3 each and were moved quickly. Gardenias were plentiful, the best stock moving at a top price of $6 per dozen and the remainder dragging somewhat at lower figures. Violets were quite abundant and the best brought $2 per hundred, with selected stock at $2.50. Large supplies of callas came in, the best moving off at $3 to $6 per dozen. Lily of the valley found good sales at from $4 to $10 per hundred sprays and sweet peas moved freely at $1 to $5 per hundred sprays, some especially long-stemmed and large-flowered stock bringing as much as $8.

Stormy weather throughout Friday, usually considered the retailers' banner day, curtailed business considerably for that day, but ideal weather Saturday seemed to compensate for the curtailment and a heavy business resulted. All through Saturday night the wholesalers were busy with receipts and sales. Easter Sunday was dreary, with showers, so that business was a little quiet, although wholesale stores were open until midday. Little complaint as to prices was heard and there seemed to be nothing to mar the pleasure of a big business, except, perhaps, a shortage of help.

Now that Easter is past, the market has gone below normal, as might be expected. There is plenty of everything to meet the rather small demand existing. American Beauty roses, in the special grades which brought $1.25 each last week, are scarce, but there is a sufficiency of hybrid teas, within a price range of $3 to $25 per hundred, according to variety. Short grades are now in the ascendancy.

Carnations are not in heavy supply. The price has gone down to from $3 to $5 per hundred.

The cattleya supply is mainly covered by the left-overs of Saturday, with few first-grade flowers available. Lily of the valley is also on the short side, except for the lower grades. There are plenty of fresh cut gardenias, but their movement is slow, even at reduced prices. There are few arrivals of sweet peas, since rain and dark weather followed the big cut of Saturday. Few bulbous flowers also have followed last week's supply.

There is an abundance of miscellaneous flowers, among which the latest to appear are Spanish irises, quantities of which may be expected from now on.

Retail trade is quiet, with the exception of wedding and funeral work, which is quite good.

Various Notes.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society is joining with the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club, in a call for a meeting of all interested in a protest against Quarantine No. 37 as now enforced. This meeting will be held, on dates to be announced later, at the American Museum of Natural History, under the direct auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York.

The sympathy of his many friends in the trade is extended to Benjamin Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y., whose wife, Laura Anthony, died at the family home in Beacon, Wednesday, March 31, of pneumonia. Further notice of her death is given in this week's obituary column.

There was little interest taken by growers in the opening of the flower markets projected by the department of parks, Monday, March 29. Three were present in the early hours at Union Square and one at Columbus Circle stayed throughout the day. The object of the markets—to supply the poor with flowers at reasonable prices—seemed to have gone astray, as most of the customers were persons in automobiles.

This week is Fifth avenue week, and floral decorations along the avenue are abundant. The traffic signal towers between Thirty-fourth street and Fifty-ninth street are gaily decorated with wild smilax and other greenery and the store windows have taken on a floral dressing. The arrangements for a pageant to be held Tuesday, April 6, included the presentation of roses to 3,000 school children taking part. Charles Thorley is on the committee in charge of the festival.

A marriage fever is raging in and around New York. No one seems to recollect a time when weddings were so numerous as this month. All levels of perfect specimen for the lawn or formal avenue.

"The bur oak, scarlet oak and white oak are all good trees that are known to succeed in the latitude of Wooster and over the entire state. Less well known but equally choice and desirable are the chestnut oak, the willow oak, from the south, and the shingle oak (Quercus imbricaria), sometimes called the laurel oak, which is one of the richest and handsomest of all oaks in its garb of glossy, dark green leaves. The willow oak, though most abundant in the southern states, has proved to be entirely hardy and satisfactory in Ohio.

Elm, Ash, Linden and Maple.

"For alluvial lands and all rich soils the American white elm is unrivaled in majesty and grace. A moderately fast grower, the elm lives to an extremely old age, its beauty increasing from year to year. For street planting the elm is unexcelled where soil conditions are suitable.

"The white ash and the American linden or basswood have a high landscape value and are known to succeed over a wide range of country.

"Probably no group of our native trees has been more popular for lawn planting than the maples, particularly the Norway maple. The most lasting of our native species is undoubtedly the sugar maple, which ought always to be transplanted before it exceeds two have high value for street planting through their resistance to dust, gas and smoke. Foremost of these is the oriental plane or European sycamore, a large, spreading species somewhat similar to its American prototype, but in most regards a finer, more desirable tree. The foliage of this plane is quite free from the fungous diseases that disfigure the American tree, while its head is much more adequately supplied with limbs and branches. The Norway maple is another good smoke and gas resister, whose merits appear now to be pretty generally recognized."

The ginkgo has already been referred to as a good tree for city use; it is generally both healthy and handsome in a city environment. Perhaps the Chinese cork tree, Phellodendron amurense, though omitted from the agricultural bulletin, might appropriately be mentioned in this connection, since it flourishes luxuriantly in city conditions, or at least in Chicago conditions. It is like the ginkgo in being remarkably free from pests, but is an absolute contrast to the ginkgo in habit of growth. It has large pinnate leaves and its branches are wide-spread, forming a round head. It is naturally somewhat irregular in form, but may be trimmed freely.

Distance Apart in Row.

As to the proper spacing of trees along roads, streets and avenues, the

letin, "should be spaced sixty feet for the former and forty-five to fifty feet for the latter. A space of forty-five feet will suffice for most other oaks. The American white ash and pin oak should stand thirty or thirty-five feet apart. The sugar maple and silver maple should have a space of forty feet. The ginkgo ought to have a space of thirty feet. Theoretically, the plan of spacing closely and thinning by taking out alternate trees when they begin to crowd is a most admirable one, but reluctance to thin them at the right time generally defeats the original good intentions of the planter."

Results of Reckless Pruning.

Trees generally should be headed back more or less at the time of planting, if the top greatly overbalances the roots. Thereafter, heavy pruning is seldom needed. On this point the bulletin says: "The pruning of shade trees is a subject concerning which information is often desired, and in a general sense it is safe to say that the matter is usually overdone. During the earlier years of a shade tree's existence but little cutting will be required beyond such as is needed to remove broken or otherwise injured limbs or to preserve a moderately symmetrical, well balanced head. As the specimens grow older and often encroach upon one another or sustain injury from storms, heavy cutting will sometimes need to be done. The indiscriminate topping and heading in of trees, particularly such as is in evidence along most village streets, cannot be too severely condemned. The heavy, unsightly stubs thus produced afford openings through which the germs of decay enter and speedily work havoc to the larger branches and to the trunk. If the trees are properly spaced when planted, or are thinned later to avoid overcrowding, little or no pruning will be needed and the lives of the trees will be greatly prolonged."

PLANTING TIME.

When the warm days arrive it is the right time to remind the home owner of the opportunity spring offers for beautifying his grounds by plantings that will develop under the influence of April showers. Often a suggestion is all that is required—the desires of the home owner do the rest. The local papers give florists and nurserymen this opportunity. The illustration on this page shows the form of the suggestion to the Chicago public given by the nursery firm of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., in 3½-inch double-column space in the Chicago Tribune last week. This firm has a large clientele in that city among the people who decorate their home grounds horticulturally.

In this advertisement may be seen the new trade-mark of the American Association of Nurserymen, introduced to the Chicago public for the first time in this appearance.

PREPARED HYACINTHS.

We should like to know what success the trade has had with prepared hyacinths and how early they can be brought into bloom. G. B. & C.—Pa.

Prepared hyacinths can be flowered earlier than the ordinary Dutch hyacinths. A few were noted in flower at Christmas, 1919, but the majority were

bulletin states that the distances depend on the species, on the width of the thoroughfare and most of all on the intentions or expectations of the planter in regard to the permanence of the tree-row. Along many streets the trees have been spaced too closely for a permanent planting and no thinning has been done; hence the presence of many tall, pinched, ill-shaped maples and elms. Unless the planter proposes to thin as required, "the larger trees, such as the white elm and red oak," says the bul-

not in good shape until the middle or end of January. If Dutch bulbs arrive earlier than has been the case the last two or three years, there should be no trouble in getting a fair proportion of these in bloom for the holidays. All hyacinths need a certain time to fill their pots with roots and it is useless to try to force them when they have only a few roots. C. W.

The Market.

The Easter business was heavy and, on the whole, satisfactory to growers both of plants and of flowers for cutting. The plantmen were all practically sold out of flowering plants many days in advance of the holiday and the indications that cut flowers this year would also enjoy a good demand were entirely fulfilled, a general clean-up being experienced; the little surplus covered only the poorest stock, such as usually is moved only with difficulty.

There was no dearth of lilies and immense quantities were handled within a price range of 12 cents to 20 cents per bud and bloom. Pot lilies brought something more, selected stock bringing as high as 30 cents, or even better, per stem. Carnations were available in large quantities early Saturday, but moved quickly at $5 and $6 per hundred, mounting later in the day to $8 and $10 per hundred, as they became scarce. Roses were not so plentiful as might have been expected, but there were sufficient to go around, and at moderate prices, since spring flowers, such as tulips and daffodils, of which the supply was enormous, were in greatest demand; this tended to minimize the demand for more staple flowers. The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, April 12, at the club's quarters in the Engineering Societies' building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street. At this meeting the flower show committee will present a report covering the recent flower show and F. W. Mossman, superintendent for Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., will read a paper on "Raising Orchids from Seed." An unusually large attendance of members is expected. It will be Orchid night and the exhibition committee is trying to secure some good exhibits of orchids, also of spring flowers. J. H. P.

HOW'S THIS FOR HIBBING?

Did you ever hear of Hibbing? No? Well, neither had we until M. C. Wright called us up. Wright, you know, is the Chicago sales manager for L. & B. He's wise to a lot of things other people never heard of; gets paid for it, probably. But that's neither here nor there.

"You know Hibbing," said Wright's voice on the wire.

"No, we don't," said we. "Who's he?"

"Hibbing isn't a 'he,'" said Wright, "it's an it; I've been there."

"All right," said we, "tell us the story."

"Hibbing," said Wright, "is a town; it's in Minnesota. Prosperous place; 15,000 people; nothing too good for them; they're going to spend $125,000 for Lord & Burnham greenhouses in their city park. Now, what do you think of that?"

"Gee whiz!" said we.

"Yes, siree! Nine houses. A dome-roof palm house, two curved-roof show houses, a fern house, three growing houses, two propagating houses, all iron-frame curved eave—regular metropolitan lay-out. Beats everything for a town of that size. Thought you might like to know. Good bye." Click.

Most remarkable!

Might be a good town for a florist. What?

Let's see! Oh! Yes. Got two already. Of course they take The Review.

EASTER IN CONNECTICUT.

At Hartford.

"Easter business is fully up to expectations," was the report from Hartford, Conn. The trade attributes this to the big display advertisements carried in the local dailies the week previous and also to having stock on show early, enabling patrons to avail themselves of the fine weather to make early purchases. Little wrapping was needed. Lilies led, as usual; roses were next, with Bougainvillea Sanderiana a close third. Holland bulbs made up in baskets and pans sold readily.

D. A. Spear, of the Spear & McManus Co., was making up a pot of lilies to order for $12 and, pointing to a trained specimen of bougainvillea which was sold for a similar sum, remarked that they will gladly welcome the return of the azalea, regardless of the fact that their sales on made-up baskets were never so large, as bougainvilleas require more material and labor.

Both of John Coombs' stores were taxed to capacity, being strong on lilies. The demand for daffodils was heavy. The veteran John Coombs put in a strenuous time at the greenhouse end, although just recovering from the result of a tumble on the ice.

J. Albert Brodrib is making a strong bid for business and says that a full share is coming to him.

Both of the Welch stores made a fine display, but, here as elsewhere, the absence of large specimens was noted, especially hydrangeas.

The Whitney Greenhouses, at West Hartford, looked as though a cyclone had passed through, cleaning out completely the fine stock of plants and cut flowers, so clean was the sweep at Easter.

At Wallingford.

"Out of sight," observed William Rowden, of Rowden & Mitchell, Wallingford, Conn., referring to an aviator who had just flown off after leaving an order for an Easter gift, "describes our business for some time past. With funeral work and steady sales, we could not desire a more satisfactory condition of things." Among spring stock was noted a fine lot of geraniums, Lawrence and Doyle, two good sellers, and a batch of hydrangeas, too late for Easter, which will be boosted for Mothers' day sales.

At New Haven.

Smith T. Bradley, New Haven, Conn., describes the season's business, with Easter as the climax, as one of the most puzzling, though at the same time a record-breaker in volume.

"Great business," commented John Champion, of John Champion & Co., New Haven, Conn. "It is difficult to say which shows best profit, cut flowers or plants. The call for both was large and enabled us to take care of the Easter rush in good shape."

Munro's Flower Shop, New Haven, had the Westerly range to fall back on this Easter and disposed of a big line of both cut flowers and plants made up in baskets, which were excellent sellers.

John Sokol, New Haven, has a large range of glass adjoining the principal cemetery of New Haven and says a livelier time he has never experienced than at this Easter. "Come over and help us," was the invitation. Never was assistance more appreciated than now. W. M.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Boston, Mass.—Horace S. Rogers, formerly in business at 78 Boylston street, under the name of Hamlin the Florist, has made an assignment to Maurice B. Ulin, for the benefit of his creditors. This step was immediately due to his expulsion from the store, states the attorney for the assignee, Martin Witte, but primarily to his inability to obtain sufficient financial assistance to enable him to establish himself. His liabilities are approximately $8,000, while his assets, consisting of such incidentals as are used in the business and accounts receivable, are of doubtful value, but may realize in the neighborhood of $1,500, at the best. They have not yet been fully converted into money, but some of the odds and ends had to be sold at once in order to save them from being stored and possibly destroyed.

PINEAPPLE SALVIA.

I saw an inquiry in a recent issue of The Review regarding a plant that looked like a salvia, but was a lighter green in color, with a strong odor of pineapple, and had a small red salvia-like bloom. I send a description of the salvia referred to and its name. I came upon this lately in the Gardeners' Chronicle (London):

"The pineapple salvia that bears the specific name of S. rutilans gives out an agreeable perfume if lightly touched, but if roughly handled the sage-like smell becomes very pronounced."

Mrs. Francis King.

MRS. BULLOCK ILL.

The many friends of Mrs. E. M. Bullock, of Elkhart, Ind., member of the Ladies' S. A. F. and a life member of the S. A. F., will be sorry to learn of her illness with Bright's disease and other complications since January. At present she is only able to sit up for a short time. Mrs. Charles H. Maynard.

Winchester, Ky.—The office of Poole & Purllant was destroyed by fire March 25. The greenhouses were not damaged.

Holland, Mich.—The Twelfth Street Floral Shop had a splendid Easter business. This firm had an abundance of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils. Saturday, April 3, all of the patients in the Holland hospital were remembered with an Easter plant from the store.

Kokomo, Ind.—A serious accident happened to W. W. Coles Easter Sunday afternoon, which will place him under the care of a physician for several weeks. While attempting to regulate the overflow from a steam pipe in his home basement, he made a misstep, causing his leg to give way and break just above the ankle. No serious developments are anticipated and he is doing as well as could be expected.

BITS ABOUT BOSTON SHOW.

Visitor From England.

Miss Eileen Low, who is connected with the famous horticultural establishment of Stuart Low & Co., London, England, is paying a visit to America and will also make a short trip to Canada, spending about seven weeks on this side. Miss Low, who looks to be scarcely 20 years old, is an enthusiast in the business and, considering that it was a war-time duty with her, she is remarkably well informed, particularly concerning orchids.

Miss Low spent a little time each day at the orchid exhibition and was entertained at luncheon March 25 by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., and J. T. Butterworth assisted greatly in extending a welcome to the visitor.

On being questioned regarding conditions in her own country, she said that the business was quickly getting back to the pre-war level. She said, "Our greenhouses were more than full. Our orchids and other valuable plants were not interfered with during the war, as the government considered that they were a valuable national asset. The carnation houses, however, were used to produce food, such as tomatoes, etc." Miss Low was asked how the carnations grown in this country compared with those in Great Britain and she said that she considered the quality similar and that they are grown over there in the same manner as they are here. She also remarked that the demand in her country for flowers and plants was enormous and that there is great difficulty in supplying some of the stock, owing to a scarcity of such kinds as are imported.

Miss Low paid a visit to Beverly Farms to see the famous collection of A. C. Burrage and also to J. T. Butterworth's, at Framingham, Mass.

A. C. Burrage Exhibit.

The exhibit of A. C. Burrage at Boston was possibly the most remarkable and gigantic ever attempted by any one person in any country, especially since it was his first attempt at exhibiting, and the period of growing orchids is not more than three or four years for Mr. Burrage. This exhibit, which required eighteen trucks to haul the material from Beverly Farms, a distance of twenty-five miles, and a small army of men necessary to look after the stock, took more than a week to arrange. The result was well worth the effort and expense, both as a thing of beauty and from an educational point of view. A large number of experienced men were ever ready and eager to give information. There were distributed 12,000 pamphlets and the same number of illustrations of phalaenopsis, both having interesting particulars, with the names of orchids and their native habitats.

Mr. Burrage is well versed in orchids and the work of preparing the two pamphlets was his own effort while on his way to California. They were greatly appreciated by the large crowds visiting each day.

The orchid plants which filled the large lecture hall were entirely stripped of their blooms, which, with the aid of two automobiles, were distributed to hospitals and other charitable institutions. In fact, a great part of the blooms from Orchidvale find their way to similar worthy places. There are many other cities that could be benefited in a floricultural way by such an enthusiast. There is no doubt that this exhibit will be a great boost for the florists' business, especially for cut orchids.

Condemning the Embargo.

E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, who was in charge of the magnificent exhibit of Japanese azaleas, urged Senator Lodge, during a conversation they had together while Mr. Lodge was visiting the show, to take a good look, as the foolish embargo imposed by Quarantine 37 would shut off many of the most beautiful plants now seen at the exhibitions.

George E. Baldwin, of the company of orchid specialists which bears his name, at Mamaroneck, N. Y., considers the embargo on orchids and other imported plants a cruel ruling to be adopted at a time when production, owing to war conditions, was at its lowest ebb.

Gate Receipts.

The official number of actual paid visitors at the show was as follows:

	Adults	Children
March 24 .....	1,154	55
March 25 .....	1,962	182
March 26 .....	1,999	157
March 27 .....	2,130	185
March 28 .....	1,344	116

In addition there were probably 1,000 members' admissions and 800 special rate florists' tickets and a half-day free to school children, including children from orphanages. The regular price of admission was $1, with children 25 cents.

Butterworth's Rare Plant.

J. T. Butterworth & Son, of Framingham, Mass., had a fine specimen exhibited in a glass case, at the show, of the variety Dendrobium Wardianum album, which is named J. T. Butterworth. This beautiful rarity has been in their possession for twenty years. It came direct to them from its native home and is a priceless gem that money could not buy.

Killing Them Off.

Douglas Eccleston, of Orchidvale, received a shipment of 2,000 phalaenopsis. By the time they have gone through the process of killing imaginary or might-be pests, which also kills plants, he will have about 400 to 500 left. It is hoped that they will be the choicest of the consignment.

COAL AGREEMENT SIGNED.

In Effect April 1.

The negotiations for a new agreement for the bituminous miners were brought to a close March 31, when the general scale committee of operators and miners of the central competitive field ratified a contract embodying the award of President Wilson's coal commission.

This new agreement, which involves a wage increase of twenty-seven per cent, became effective April 1 and will continue in force for a period of two years.

Immediately upon adoption of the contract by unanimous vote of the members of the scale committee, it was signed by the international officers of the United Mine Workers, John L. Lewis, president; Philip Murray, vice-president, and William Green, secretary and treasurer, and by two operators and two miners of each of the four states of the central competitive field—Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Representatives of the mine operators of West Virginia, Kentucky and other outlying districts, not included in the central competitive field, immediately announced that they also would put into effect the new contract in their territory.

Quick Jump in Price.

Granting bituminous mine workers a wage increase of twenty-seven per cent means the price of coal at the mines will advance 65 cents to $1.25 a ton, according to bituminous coal operators.

While asserting they "desire to keep the price of coal as low as possible and to avoid speculation in the product of their mines," mine owners cited Illinois as the only state where the minimum increase would apply. This was said to be due to local conditions, which lessen the cost of production.

Since the removal of bituminous coal price restrictions by President Wilson, some operators, it is stated, already have sold large quantities of coal for April delivery at from $3.50 to $4 a ton. The operators in some districts, it is said, have received as much as $4.75 a ton in instances where big purchasers went into the fields and engaged in competitive bidding.

Miners Strike in Three States.

Dissatisfied with the awards of the coal commission, 8,000 miners in Illinois, Ohio and Kansas went on strike April 5. In the various bituminous fields in Illinois twenty mines were closed by the walkout. In Madison and Macoupin counties, 3,000 workers had quit. It is stated that 2,000 men had left their places in ten mines in Kansas and 3,000 had gone out in eastern Ohio April 2, because of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the wage increase was distributed.

The trouble is believed to have been started by the mine car drivers, who were given only a twenty per cent increase in wages, while others received a twenty-seven per cent raise.

Another fine flower is Andropogon scoparius (bottlebrush), which, like the others, is native to the area. It is a tall, slender plant with a dense, upright cluster of small, tubular flowers. The leaves are narrow and pointed, and the plant is very hardy. It is a common sight in many parts of the country, and is often used for landscaping.

HOME-GROWN

AMERICANIZING EASTER LILIES.

Department of Agriculture's Work.

That the Americanization of the Easter lily is entirely practicable—a fact which eventually may make florists wholly independent of foreign bulb growers—has been demonstrated by the work of the United States Department of Agriculture horticulturists at the department's experimental farm, at Arlington, Va. Just now several hundred plants are coming into bloom. They have been grown from seed produced on the farm instead of from bulbs imported from Japan or Bermuda, as is the practice of florists. At the present time approximately $250,000 is commercially expended each year in importing Easter lily bulbs.

Not only are the agricultural department's lily plants a thoroughly American product, but the manner of growing them brings them to flower in approximately fifteen or eighteen months, whereas foreign-grown bulbs usually require three years to produce. This shortening of the growing period before blooming not only saves much time, but also lessens the opportunity for the bulbs to become infected with disease, thereby materially reducing the risk of the grower.

Growing Them Outdoors.

Some of the plants now in bloom at Arlington have grown from bulbs which had been discarded after they had flowered once, showing that the practice of throwing away such bulbs is not always to be followed. Another feature of the experiments has been to grow some of the Easter lilies outdoors, whereas this has been commonly thought an unsafe practice as far north as Washington. It has been found that Easter lily bulbs will winterkill in the gulf coast states, while surviving outdoors in the colder regions. The usual mildness of the extreme south produces top growth which is killed when a sudden drop in temperature occurs, whereas the normal cold farther north keeps the bulbs dormant.

Methods to Follow.

The federal horticulturists point out that any one of four different programs may be followed in producing all-American Easter lilies. One of these is to begin by making pollinations at Easter. This will give ripe seed the following June, which, if planted early in August, will produce plants ready for 2-inch pots in January and 4-inch pots in March or April. If these plants are well handled they will show scattering blooms the following June. All the progeny, whether flowered or not, can be tried for four or six weeks during August and September. Then, during the winter months, ten to twenty-five per cent of the most promising ones can be forced to bloom for the following Easter.

The second method of procedure is to defer the planting of seed from August, the date indicated in the foregoing, until about January 1. It will then germinate in about half the time. The seedlings will be ready for 2-inch pots in March and, as soon as the danger of frost is past, they can be put in open ground six inches apart each way, in beds. With suitable fertility and moisture, scattering blooms will begin to appear in July and flowering will continue until frost. Those which have not bloomed before frost can be potted from the field and their growth continued in pots. Those which have bloomed in the field can be potted and forced the same way as imported bulbs.

October Digging Possible.

The third way consists in digging up and drying all the seedlings early in October, instead of letting them stand until frost, as indicated in the previous paragraph. After they are dry, they can be planted outdoors again about November 1, with a good dressing of well rotted manure after the ground freezes. These bulbs should remain in the ground until the following September and then be potted for winter forcing. The smallest of these and the stem bulblets should be held until November, when they should be planted outdoors again to continue the propagation.

The fourth method recommended by federal horticulturists makes the grower independent of the greenhouse, the chief advantage being that it shortens the time of bringing the plants into bloom. The seed secured in the manner indicated above can be sown in a cold-frame in the autumn and then transplanted and spaced after it has made sufficient growth in the spring. Few, if any, of these plants will bloom the first year. In the autumn they can be dug up and dried off and then reset about November 1. A good percentage should be large enough to force after the second year's growth and all of them after the third year's growth. The investigators are inclined to favor the second method of procedure indicated in the foregoing.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Charming!" ejaculated Miss Eileen Low, daughter of Stuart Low, of Stuart Low & Co., London, England, who has the honor of being the first member of the fair sex to represent a European establishment in America in the history of horticulture. It was at the Boston flower show and the fair visitor was viewing the wonderful display of acacias grown by Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., acknowledged by those qualified to speak as being unequalled in the world, granting that, while the exhibits of orchids were superb, yet they could be duplicated. "It was a source of disappointment when I learned that the ship would not reach New York in time to allow my visiting the international flower show, which I am glad to learn was so successful. The fame of the Grand Central Palace as an ideal exhibition hall has spread across the ocean. I can imagine how, with its vast and elegant proportions, a splendid collection of plants would appear. Its wealth amazes one and has already convinced me that the reports I have heard of the progress of horticulture in America have not been exaggerated."

Motoring out to the Aitken greenhouses, at Agawam, Mass., through a dense fog, Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., observed that the outlook for the retailer who grows his own stock was never brighter than now; in other words, it is not what will be the best seller, but how to produce the goods fast enough. His sales show a large increase over previous years and the bookings for Easter were in proportion. Eber Holmes, the grower, called attention to the choice line of Holland bulbous stock grown in flats, then panned by the night fireman, a big job easily worked out. Lilies, pot roses and hydrangeas lead, with all the varied assortment encouraged by the introduction of plant receptacles from the pygmy to the giant. Looking beyond, one sees a fine line of candytuft for Mothers' day, ten weeks' stocks for Memorial day, gladioli for early summer and chrysanthemums for fall. "In this way," observed Mr. Holmes, "the leaders act as reminders, so to speak, of the various important seasons; in other words, the grower's calendar."

Chatterton Warburton, of Fall River, Mass., commenting upon the short spell of bright weather, observed that he cannot recall when blooming plants and other crops responded so readily. An abnormal amount of funeral work has used up all kinds of stock, though set pieces are still popular with the factory workers, who like something big for their usually liberal investment.

H. W. Littlefield, of Worcester, Mass., made a visit to Boston and found the pulse-beat of the Hub flower market rising rapidly as Easter approached.

"Quite out of my element," observed William Schlatter, of William Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, Mass., "but at this Easter season, oversight at the greenhouse end is profitable, while our salespeople are kept busy booking orders. Then when the rush comes everyone is posted. Experience gained in the short space of time spent among the stock is well worth the change."

"Lilies are somewhat behind, but carnations are much to the front and, believe me, of the two the divine flower will show the largest net profit," is the opinion of R. C. Carey, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., who is also strong on Holland bulbous stock, which was just right for Easter. W. M.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

HANGING BASKET PLANTS.

Spring Brings Call.

With the first warm weather of spring comes the demand for plants for hanging baskets. Some members of the trade do much of this kind of work and those who make up these baskets each year are constantly seeking new ideas. There are a large number of plants of vine-like or climbing habit which are useful for this purpose. Many that would be useless to use in vases make pretty basket plants, because in the vase they are exposed to drought, sun, wind and neglect, while the basket has more or less shelter and is under the care of someone whose duty is to keep it well supplied with water, the chief need of a successful hanging basket.

Some of the plants used in baskets are of upright habit. These are either plants of naturally small stature, or are practically such for a season from a slow habit of growth. The suitability of these erect-growing plants for the purpose is determined, aside from their stature, by their freedom of bloom, beauty of foliage, striking form or grace of habit. Such plants are used principally for filling the central part of the basket. Plants of trailing habit are inserted near the sides, some to droop, others to twine upward on the cords or handle by which the basket is suspended. Some plants are more suitable than others for shady places; the selaginellas are examples. Others thrive only with several hours of direct sunshine each day.

Available Plants.

Some plants of vine-like habit are, first, those that are long-drooping: English ivy, Kenilworth ivy, Vinca major, Vinca Harrisonii, Saxifraga sarmentosa, Cissus discolor, Moneywort ivy, Tropaeolum (nasturtiums), Ampelopsis Veitchii; second, those that are climbing: Lygodium scandens, maurandia, Senecio scandens, thunbergia, Cobaea scandens, Japanese variegated hop, Clematis coccinea and forms of convolvulus; finally, those that are short-drooping, or half-erect: Lobelia Erinus, Othonno crassifolia, sweet alyssum, tradescantia, petunias, Oxalis floribunda, Russelia juncea, fittonia, Fuchsia procumbens, ice plant, verbena, ivy geraniums, selaginellas and begonias.

Plants of upright habit are low-growing and tall-growing. Some of the low-growing plants are torenia, pansy, Cuphea platycentra, C. hyssopifolia, Primula obconica, dwarf alyssum and Bellis perennis, which are flowering plants, and peperomia, Begonia Rex, Farfugium grande, maidenhair fern and alternanthera, which are foliage plants. Those of taller-growing habit are geraniums, pelargoniums, fuchsias, petunias, begonias, browallias and Stevia serrata var. nana, which are flowering, and dusty miller, crotons, palms, ferns, fancy caladiums, coleuses and achyranthes, which are foliage plants.

Arranging the Basket.

Some of the foregoing plants make large subjects when growing in the open ground. Of such, only young or smaller plants are available for use in hanging baskets. Ordinarily, several different sorts of plants are used for filling a basket. In some cases, however, a satisfactory basket is made by using but one kind of plant. A hanging basket filled with sword fern (nephrolepis), for example, makes a handsome object.

The soil used in hanging baskets is simply good, common potting soil. This usually contains about twenty-five per cent of humus and a small amount of sharp sand to make it porous.

A common mistake in arranging baskets is crowding or filling them too full. Fewer plants will appear more graceful, growth will be more vigorous and the basket will retain its grace and beauty for a longer time. Exercise vigilance and care in watering. After the roots have well filled the basket, watering is best done by dipping the basket in a tub or barrel of water and allowing it to become well saturated, but never leaving it sitting in a foot of water, as is done sometimes. Dipping the basket in a weak liquid manure once or twice a month will greatly promote vigor when the plants have been long in the basket.

Search for New Arrangements.

Florists are constantly on the search for new ideas in the arrangement of ways of arranging them, write The Review about it, so that you may get the ideas of florists in other towns and give them yours in exchange.

GROWING AZALEA HINODIGIRI.

Please give the culture of Azalea Hinodigiri, from propagating to blooming. J. D.—Pa.

Azalea Hinodigiri is propagated from soft-wood cuttings or seeds. Sow the seeds on pans of fine peat, to which a good dash of sand has been added. Sift some fine dry sphagnum over this before sowing the seeds. Do not cover the latter at all; they will germinate much better when the mulch of fine sphagnum is used. Prick off into flats of peat, leaf-mold and sand quite thickly and later into coldframes, where they can get some shade and be regularly watered. They are best if kept in frames until 3 years old, when they can be planted in nursery rows, if the climate is mild enough to permit their outdoor culture. If not, hold them in frames. Finodigiri is a splendid azalea for outdoor uses and is equally good in pots. It would be better to keep the flowers and seed pods picked from all the plants while small. While azaleas will grow well in ordinary loam, you will find a mixture of fine peat, leaf-mold and sand particularly good for the plants while small. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Easter Market.

Everyone seems well pleased with the volume of Easter business done. The cold, drenching rain which continued uninterruptedly through Good Friday hurt trade considerably and retailers stocked up sparingly with cut flowers, but Saturday, April 3, brought ideal weather with a cloudless sky and a temperature well above freezing, so that little wrapping of plants was necessary. Probably in gross sales it was the best Easter business which Boston has yet had, but it is doubtful whether it broke all previous records for net profits. Plants were the main feature to a greater extent than ever before, but cut flowers sold well.

hanging baskets. Their patrons appreciate a novel style in contrast with that of previous years. Readers of The Review who do much of this work would welcome an interchange of ideas on this subject. If you use different plants from those mentioned above or employ new Roses made no special advance. Short-stemmed stock sold at $4 to $8 per hundred, with other grades running up to $25 and $30 per hundred; a few Hadleys brought $50 to $75 per hundred, being of especially fine quality. Carnations averaged about $8 per hundred, with some fancies higher and whites a little lower. Both roses and carnations cleaned up completely. Violets were scarce; good singles readily brought $2.50 to $3 per hundred. Some Hudson river doubles were seen and sold at lower prices.

Sweet peas met with a tremendous sale; good flowers made $4 to $5 per hundred, with other grades selling down to $2 per hundred. Snapdragons were rather overdone and their sales dragged; superb stalks made $3 per dozen, with other grades one-half or one-third of this price. Marguerites were in large supply and fancy, long-stemmed flowers sold as high as $8 to $10 per hundred, with small, short-stemmed culls as low as $2; yellows were in large demand and some excellent Mrs. Sander sold at $4 to $5 per hundred.

Both tulips and daffodils sold out clean. Victoria narcissi made $8 to $10 and Golden Spur and other varieties a little less. Cut hyacinths moved more slowly. Callas sold at $2 to $4 per dozen and cut Easter lilies at $10 to $15 per hundred. Some nice Spanish irises realized $6 per dozen and fine long-stemmed ranunculuses $2 per dozen. Freesias continued to appear at $4 to $5 per hundred. Mignonette brought all the way from $6 to $15 per hundred. Calendulas and bachelor's buttons made little advance. A fair number of gardenias and only a small number of cattleyas were offered.

In pot plants, lilies were in much more abundant supply than had been expected, since the warm, spring-like weather of the last ten days in March had hurried along many laggards. The best stock reached $25, with poorer grades selling at $15 to $20. There were enough for all requirements and some surplus. Roses were abundant and of excellent quality; they came next to lilies in favor. Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschoen and Excelsa were the leaders among ramblers. Some excellent hybrid perpetuals and baby ramblers were also offered. French hydrangeas were of excellent quality and met with a big sale.

Dutch bulbous stock in pots and pans, as usual, had a large sale. Genistas went moderately well and ericas and acacias sold well; the last two were unusually well flowered. A fair number of bougainvilleas were seen, but few azaleas or rhododendrons. There were some excellent lilacs, but not many other deciduous shrubs. Marguerites were generally of not particularly high quality. Some cinerarias, primulas, polyanthus, metrosideros, pelargoniums, ageratums, schizanthus and geraniums were among the other varieties offered. Growers sold out about every salable plant, but some of the retailers had considerable stock left on hand. The call for ferns and foliage plants was comparatively small, everyone apparently wanting flowering plants.

Business Since Easter.

The usual decline in prices has followed Easter. There are many cut lilies offered and little call for them.

Roses sell from $2 per hundred upwards, select stock reaching $16 to $20, with supplies greater than the demand. Carnations are holding up fairly well and vary in value from $4 to $6 per hundred. Violets are about over, but there is an abundance of good sweet peas at 50 cents to $2. Snapdragons move with difficulty. Supplies of daffodils and tulips are not large. Miscellaneous flowers move rather slowly.

Various Notes.

Gordon Fisher, of Woburn, who has hitherto grown carnations and sweet peas principally, will plant all of his four large houses with roses this coming season. The varieties will be Premier, Columbia, Double White Killarney and Ophelia. About 27,000 plants will be used.

The William H. Elliott Co. had some especially handsome Hadleys for Easter, among the finest seen locally. His Ophelia, Double White Killarney and Columbia were also fine.

John J. O'Brien, of Beacon street, did a heavy business in high-grade pot plants and cut flowers. In his store were to be seen especially fine ericas, acacias, bougainvilleas and standard Tausendschoen roses. White cymbidiums and other orchids, gardenias and irises were noteworthy among the cut flowers.

Wax Bros., in their new store on Temple Place, did a business equal to the best done on Tremont street. They had a fine display of plants and cut flowers. Their store is deep and a rear door opening on an alleyway to Winter street is a great advantage. Business begins later at their new stand and there is less evening trade, but customers come with a rush from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m.

March, while it brought the largest accumulation of snow on record, proved to be a comparatively mild month, with an average of 39 degrees, or 4 degrees above the normal. The precipitation was three and seventy-two hundredths inches. There were fourteen clear days, eight partly cloudy and nine cloudy. The maximum temperature was 72 degrees and the minimum 5 degrees.

At Galvin's two stores an immense business was done. They had especially handsome specimen rambler roses, acacias, ericas, lilacs and genistas, also some nice boronias.

Thomas Roland cleaned out the whole of his big stock of roses, hydrangeas and other flowering plants. He had some handsome acacias, Erica melantha and E. cupressina. At Revere he had a particularly heavy cut of roses.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had the only Liliun candidum noted. This company cleaned out all of its 10,000 pots of giganteum lilies, while hydrangeas, genistas and bulbous stock sold well. It had also some well flowered metrosideros.

The closing lecture in the winter course of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was given at Horticultural hall April 3 by Professor Osterhout, of Harvard University. The weather proved favorable for once and the attendance was good.

Among novelties noted in the cut flower line, the irises from J. K. Chandler & Sons, of Tewksbury, and the handsome Persian ranunculuses from H. F. Calder, of Norwood, were particularly distinctive.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club comes April 20. W. N. Craig will speak on the subject, "Some Seasonable Thoughts and Suggestions." There will be exhibits of early spring flowers and considerable business of importance will be transacted.

The R. & J. Farquhar Co. did a large business in Easter plants at both the store and the nursery. In addition to the more ordinary line of plants offered by other growers, this company had some fine Liliun regale, Azalea Kaempferi and other novelties. Business is now brisk at both store and nursery.

James Wheeler has had remarkable success with Godfrey callas grown in solid beds. The flowers are abundantly produced and are of enormous size. He had a heavy cut for Easter. A large vase of these callas of extraordinary size was awarded a cultural certificate at the recent spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

With the passing of winter, it is found that winter-killing is much less serious than was expected. The heavy blanket of snow made a fine protection, though it broke many branches on shrubs. Field mice have done a serious amount of damage by girdling fruit and other trees, rose bushes and climbers. Bridge grafting is being used to save many trees.

Henry Penn had a handsome display of cymbidiums and other orchids for Easter. He did the largest Easter business on record. Lilies, roses and hydrangeas were plant leaders and roses, sweet peas, daffodils, violets and carnations were chief among flowers. Great numbers of F. T. D. orders were received and sent out.

The retailers advertised freely for Easter business. Henry Penn had the largest and in some ways the most striking advertisements, but Galvin's, Wax Bros., the Houghton-Gorney Co., Hoffmann's and others used printers' ink freely and artistically.

Another corn borer hearing was held at the state house April 5. A number of florists, nurserymen and bulb growers attended. It is planned to endeavor to stop shipments of such cut flowers as gladioli, mums, herbaceous perennials, etc., from infested areas and this opens up a serious situation for many commercial growers, unless less extreme measures are adopted.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. had for Easter a particularly pleasing window display; the colors were harmonious and choice and unusual flowers and plants were used. A heavy Easter business was done.

Merle W. Farr, of the West Street Greenhouses, Reading, had a fine crop of sweet peas for Easter; he marketed over 20,000 April 2 and many more the following day. Such peas proved to be among the most popular of Easter cut flowers.

The trade was fortunate to escape an Easter morning snow storm, but experienced a storm Easter afternoon, following a day of leaden skies. Everyone was glad that it did not come a day earlier.

Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., at 260 Devonshire street, reports a fine Easter business, with sales April 3 alone of $3,000, even though he has a basement store in the wholesale district.

The Welch Bros. Co. had a splendid Easter trade in both cut flowers and plants; the latter this firm shipped direct from the greenhouses of its growers. W. N. C.

GERMINATING PRIMULAS.

I should like to get some information on the best and most successful way to germinate Primula obconica. What temperature and soil composition would you advise for the seed flats? E. F.—Ill.

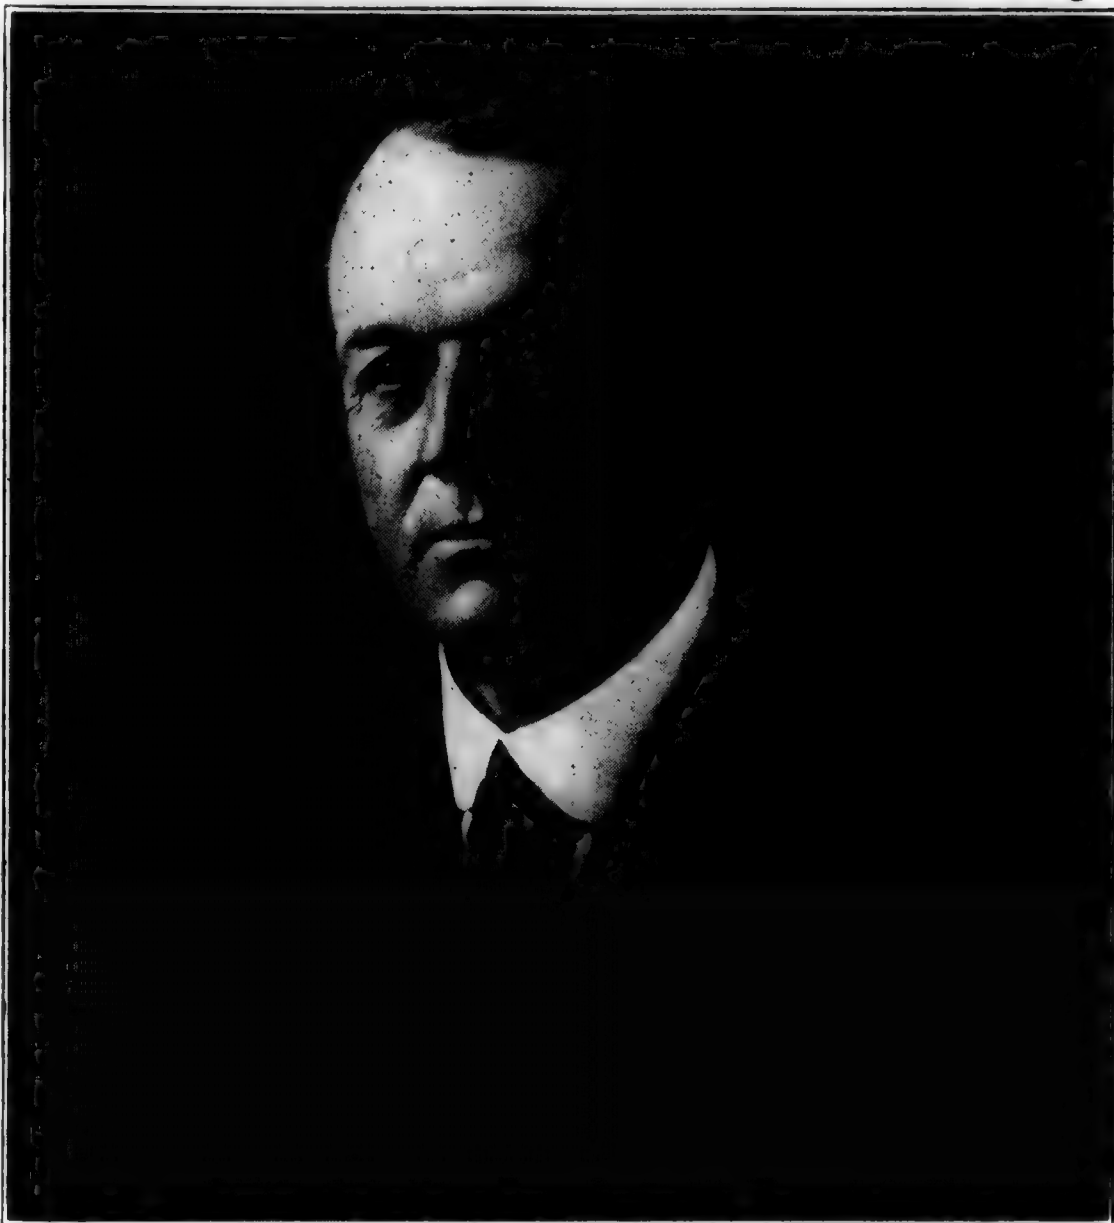

Use pans, well drained; place some rough, fibrous loam or a few half-decayed leaves over the drainage. The compost should consist of two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and a dash of sand and the upper surface should be passed through a fine screen. Make the surface smooth and over this scatter the seeds as evenly as possible. Gently press them in with a small piece of board; round pieces, with a handle attached, to fit the tops of various pans are useful. Dust a little sand over the surface after firming, but give no further covering. Water, shade from sunshine and keep in a warm, moist house. Usually seedlings will appear in a fortnight. Then they can have more light and be kept in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night. Always water through a fine rose and keep a sheet of glass over the pan until the seedlings germinate. C. W.

PROBLEM: FIND THE BUG.

"The little bugs that eat our crops
Have other bugs to bite 'em.
The other bugs have lesser bugs,
And so, ad infinitum."

Entomologists declare that the up-to-date way of combating insect pests is not by means of fumigants and other insecticides, but by discovering the bugs which prey upon those which cause our trouble. Some day, perhaps, instead of sending to his supply house for so many cases or cans of this or that brand of bug-killer, the florist will write to John Jones & Co., bug breeders, with the slogan, "Buy Our Bugs to Protect Your Plants," on their letterhead, and order so many live Gobitum andchasum, which the experts will have recommended as the insect enemy of some pest that is damaging the florist's crops. By that time the anti-tobacco societies will probably have banished the "weed" to the same innocuous desuetude as alcoholic

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

JACOB DIETERICH.

BUSINESS sagacity and horticultural skill are well combined in Jacob Dieterich, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was born in Württemberg, Germany, in 1867, and gained with Mertz, of Stuttgart, and J. C. Schmidt, of Erfurt, a thorough grounding for his life-work. After two years of landscape work in Switzerland, he came to this country in 1888, not stopping till he reached Los Angeles. There he worked in the first flower store in the city, then called the Central Park Floral Co. Four years after his arrival, he started in business for himself on Wall street. In 1908 he formed a partnership with H. W. Turner, for growing at Montebello, buying out his partner's interest nine years later. In 1919 he sold his business to Roy F. Wilcox and in the same year bought land at Wintersburg, where he is growing chiefly aspidistras, having a special permit from the government to import large quantities. This year he bought ten acres in the San Fernando valley, much of which he expects to plant to Erica melanthera.

potions, so that form of nicotine poisoning for pests will be a thing of the past.

If you think that the above is not penned in a serious vein, read the following from the weekly bulletin of the Department of Agriculture:

"The Japanese beetle is going to have its old enemies on its trail in this country. The United States Department of Agriculture has sent a man to Japan to find those enemies and send them across the ocean. They will then be established in the sections of New Jersey where the Japanese beetle has gained a foothold and they are expected to aid greatly in the control of the pest.

"The agent employed for the work in Japan is familiar with Japanese conditions and is a specialist in this character of work. It is expected that the task will require his sojourn in Japan for two or three years. While something is known of parasites of the Japanese beetle, a great deal is still to be learned, much of which can be learned only under field conditions where the beetle lives with all the enemies that prey upon it. The beetle reached this country with importations of greenhouse plants and thus far apparently has been comparatively free from molestation by natural enemies."

With the passing of winter, it is found that winter-killing is much less serious than was expected. The heavy blanket of snow made a fine protection, though it broke many branches on shrubs. Field mice have done a serious amount of damage by girdling fruit and other trees, rose bushes and climbers. Bridge grafting is being used to save many trees.

Henry Penn had a handsome display of cymbidiums and other orchids for Easter. He did the largest Easter business on record. Lilies, roses and hydrangeas were plant leaders and roses, sweet peas, daffodils, violets and carnations were chief among flowers. Great numbers of F. T. D. orders were received and sent out.

The retailers advertised freely for Easter business. Henry Penn had the largest and in some ways the most striking advertisements, but Galvin's, Wax Bros., the Houghton-Gorney Co., Hoffmann's and others used printers ink freely and artistically.

Another corn borer hearing was held at the state house April 5. A number of florists, nurserymen and bulb growers attended. It is planned to endeavor to stop shipments of such cut flowers as gladioli, mums, herbaceous perennials, etc., from infested areas and this opens up a serious situation for many com mercial growers, unless less extreme measures are adopted.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. had for Easter a particularly pleasing window display; the colors were harmonious and choice and unusual flowers and plants were used. A heavy Easter business was done.

Merle W. Farr, of the West Street greenhouses, Reading, had a fine crop of sweet peas for Easter; he marketed over 20,000 April 2 and many more the following day. Such peas proved to be among the most popular of Easter cut flowers.

The trade was fortunate to escape an Easter morning snow storm, but experienced a storm Easter afternoon, following a day of leaden skies. Everyone was glad that it did not come a day earlier.

Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., at 260 Devonshire street, reports a fine Easter business, with sales April 3 alone of $3,000, even though he has a basement store in the wholesale district.

The Welch Bros. Co. had a splendid Easter trade in both cut flowers and plants; the latter this firm shipped direct from the greenhouses of its growers. W. N. C.

GERMINATING PRIMULAS.

I should like to get some information on the best and most successful way to germinate Primula obconica. What temperature and soil composition would you advise for the seed flats? E. F.—Ill.

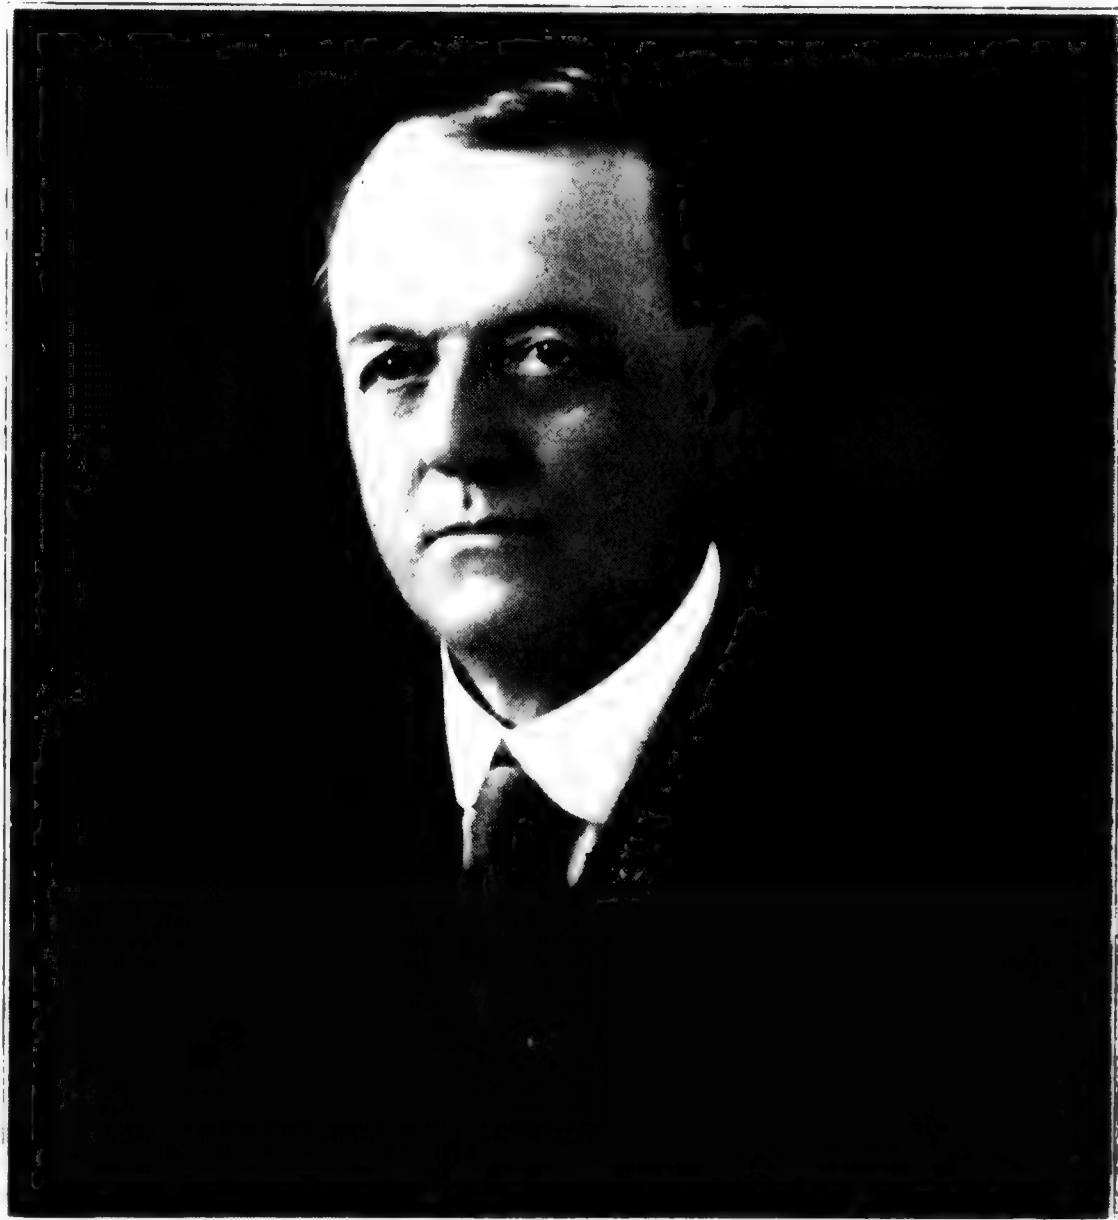

Use pans, well drained; place some rough, fibrous loam or a few half-decayed leaves over the drainage. The compost should consist of two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and a dash of sand and the upper surface should be passed through a fine screen. Make the surface smooth and over this scatter the seeds as evenly as possible. Gently press them in with a small piece of board; round pieces, with a handle attached, to fit the tops of various pans are useful. Dust a little sand over the surface after firming, but give no further covering. Water, shade from sunshine and keep in a warm, moist house. Usually seedlings will appear in a fortnight. Then they can have more light and be kept in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night. Always water through a fine rose and keep a sheet of glass over the pan until the seedlings germinate. C. W.

PROBLEM: FIND THE BUG.

"The little bugs that eat our crops
Have other bugs to bite 'em.
The other bugs have lesser bugs,
And so, ad infinitum."

Entomologists declare that the up-to-date way of combating insect pests is not by means of fumigants and other insecticides, but by discovering the bugs which prey upon those which cause our trouble. Some day, perhaps, instead of sending to his supply house for so many cases or cans of this or that brand of bug-killer, the florist will write to John Jones & Co., bug breeders, with the slogan, "Buy Our Bugs to Protect Your Plants," on their letterhead, and order so many live Gobitum andehasum, which the experts will have recommended as the insect enemy of some pest that is damaging the florist's crops. By that time the anti-tobacco societies will probably have banished the "weed" to the same innocuous desuetude as alcoholic

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

JACOB DIETERICH.

BUSINESS sagacity and horticultural skill are well combined in Jacob Dieterich, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was born in Württemberg, Germany, in 1867, and gained with Mertz, of Stuttgart, and J. C. Schmidt, of Erfurt, a thorough grounding for his life-work. After two years of landscape work in Switzerland, he came to this country in 1888, not stopping till he reached Los Angeles. There he worked in the first flower store in the city, then called the Central Park Floral Co. Four years after his arrival, he started in business for himself on Wall street. In 1908 he formed a partnership with H. W. Turner, for growing at Montebello, buying out his partner's interest nine years later. In 1919 he sold his business to Roy F. Wilcox and in the same year bought land at Wintersburg, where he is growing chiefly aspidistras, having a special permit from the government to import large quantities. This year he bought ten acres in the San Fernando valley, much of which he expects to plant to Erica melanthera.

potions, so that form of nicotine poisoning for pests will be a thing of the past.

If you think that the above is not penned in a serious vein, read the following from the weekly bulletin of the Department of Agriculture:

"The Japanese beetle is going to have its old enemies on its trail in this country. The United States Department of Agriculture has sent a man to Japan to find those enemies and send them across the ocean. They will then be established in the sections of New Jersey where the Japanese beetle has gained a foothold and they are expected to aid greatly in the control of the pest.

"The agent employed for the work in Japan is familiar with Japanese conditions and is a specialist in this charac-

BRIEF ANSWERS.

A. M. B., O.—No.

G. P., La.—You can use young stock or old plants from the benches. See the ads. New soil is better.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

MOTHERS' day is next.

SUPERIOR quality is always better selling talk than lower price.

THE coming three months will form the biggest spring business florists have ever had.

THE clock has been set ahead in New York city and about thirty other, mostly eastern, communities.

THE volume of telegraph delivery orders broke all previous Easter records. But wait till Mothers' day!

THE florist who buys plant stock that is not up to specifications will not spend his money in the same place next year.

THE florist who has rid himself of the idea that he can only make money at certain seasons is putting a good deal more of it in the bank.

No florist will spend his money for a fertilizer or an insecticide which will not give results. Only a few spend it for advertising of that kind.

THE farther the florist gets from the mere merchandiser of flowers and the nearer he comes to the decorative artist, the better will he be paid for the service which he gives.

As regards the paper situation, The Review is assured the necessary quantity, five to six tons per week, but is unable to know what the price will be more than thirty days ahead.

WHAT did you learn from this Easter's business that will enable you to improve your system for the big day next year? Do you make a note of it, or leave it to memory to help you in March, 1921?

THE average florist goes in for quantity production and depends on price to sell the stock. It leaves a splendid opportunity for the grower who keeps it constantly in mind that quality is remembered long after the price is forgotten.

THE day has passed when the florist felt obliged to respond to every plea to spend his money for space in mediums from which he could get little or no return. The advertising appropriation today is considered an investment, not a donation.

POOR packing is a perennial cause of dissatisfaction. Whether lack of knowledge or lack of care is most to blame, is not so important as how general improvement can be effected.

THE florist who has turned his profits into cash and does not merely carry them on the books faces tomorrow in better mind than the one who wonders what part of them he can collect.

THE job of bringing buyer and seller together, for which a real estate dealer would charge a commission of $200 or $300, is often done by a For Sale ad in The Review which costs $1.75.

"KEEP 'em coming back," is the sage advice of an old store proprietor. Holding the old trade requires much less effort than developing new. It's merely a matter of making them satisfied.

ONE of the pronounced characteristics of the Easter supply, like that for Christmas, was the lack of novelty. The trade has had all it could do of late to keep up with the demand for staples; there has been neither time, facilities nor incentive to develop new ideas and materials.

OF the 2,000 members of the S. A. F., how many actually read the journal of the society? How many toss it aside after a glance? But the pages of the pamphlet reflect the activities of the officers and committees; they are full of food for thought.

SOUVENIR convention programs for the S. A. F. are a thing of the past, the executive board having voted at the January meeting to omit their publication hereafter. The present-day florist spends his dollars for advertising just as he spends them for other things—where he can get something for his money.

AMONG the makers of most manufactured articles there are gradations ranging from the artisan to the artist, the services of the latter commanding many times as much as those of the former. There are the same gradations among flower growers, though the proportion is larger in the artist class than in other lines.

SEND IT IN.

If you have a bit of news,
Send it in;
Or a joke that will amuse,
Send it in.
Something helpful that is new,
Something you have learned to do,
We should like to hear from you,
Send it in.
If it's only worth the while,
Never mind about your style,
Send it in.

HOW THEY HAPPEN.

Now and again a florist says, "I do not get as many telegraph orders from other florists as I should. How can I get more?"

The answer is simpler than he thinks. The way to receive more is to send more. As a general rule, for every order that goes out at least one comes back.

One of your customers wants to send a birthday gift or some other remembrance to a friend in another city. You suggest telegraphing flowers. Sooner or later your customer has a birthday or an occasion similar to the one for which he or she sent flowers, and back comes a telegraph order from the friend in another city. So frequently does this happen that nowadays a florist, when he receives a telegraph order, is especially careful in filling it, shrewdly anticipating the response that almost invariably follows and aiming by the best of service to draw the reply to his store.

That is the solution to the florist's problem in a nutshell. Develop outgoing telegraph orders and you will develop incoming orders at the same time and by the same process.

ADVICE IN ABNORMAL TIME.

All substantial indications such as in normal times are considered to be safe indexes of the trend of business are now of a nature highly favorable to business prosperity.

But the times are not normal, and the influence of unsettled conditions is so great that the general tone of comment on business conditions is full of caution. For instance, in the United States Bulletin of March 1, 1920, appeared the statement:

"Statistics coming to the various governmental departments at Washington indicate that these must be trying days for the conscientious business executive. Whether in charge of finance, sales, production, purchases or credit, there are a great many serious problems for him to face.

"The executive in charge of finance is confronted with the question of whether he shall expand or cut down his loans. The best advice is, cut down your loans. The sales manager is confronted with the possibility of canceled orders. The best advice is, accept only orders which will not be canceled. The production executive is faced with a bad labor situation. The best advice is, be patient; there will be plenty of labor before long. The credit department is having requests which have never been made before. The best advice is, go slow in granting additional credits."

SAYING IT WITH THE SLOGAN.

In a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune, the slogan made two hits in succession in B. L. T.'s "colyum." Under the heading, "Say It with Artichokes," he quotes as follows from a Kansas paper:

Timid query to the Thoughtful Order of Florists: If you feel that your wife ought to be choked for ten or fifteen minutes and then sat upon for an hour or so, how can you say it with flowers?

That is immediately followed by a quotation from an advertising agency to the effect that "you can't put a dollar in your eye and fail to see Chicago." B. L. T. suggests, doubtless from painful experience, "Say It with Cinders."

Here is double proof, from Chicago and from Kansas, that the trade's publicity is indeed reaching the people. For newspaper "colyums" are the mirrors in which the people see themselves.

THE SAME STORY.

It seems to make no difference what one offers in The Review, there are prompt buyers for everything. Like this:

Kindly discontinue our half page ad on Rose Premier at $350.00 per thousand, also our Classified ad, as we are entirely sold out.—The Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., April 3, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Laura Anthony Hammond.

Mrs. Laura Anthony Hammond, wife of Benjamin Hammond, president of the Hammond Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., and former president of the American Rose Society, died Wednesday, March 31, at the family home in Beacon as the result of pneumonia.

Funeral services were held at Beacon Friday evening. Interment was in the Greenwood Union cemetery, at Rye, N. Y., Saturday afternoon, April 3. Among the many floral tokens of sympathy was a beautiful piece from the employees of the Hammond Paint & Slug Shot Works.

Mrs. Arno H. Nehrling.

Mrs. Arno H. Nehrling, wife of Arno H. Nehrling, of Crawfordsville, Ind., died suddenly April 2.

Mrs. Nehrling had been in good health up to the time of her death, which was caused by heart trouble. Short services were held Easter Sunday at Crawfordsville and the interment was at Jasper, Ind., her former home.

James C. McLeish.

James C. McLeish, a charter member of the Newport Horticultural Society and for several years its president, died at his home in Newport, R. I., Saturday, March 27, after an illness of only a few hours. He was 76 years of age.

Mr. McLeish was a sufferer from periodical attacks of neuralgia of the heart, and when he was stricken his condition was not thought serious until the usual treatment would give him no relief.

Mr. McLeish was born January 27, 1844, in Roseneath, Scotland. He came to this country in 1867 and held positions as head gardener on various eastern estates until 1872, when he started in business for himself in Newport. His business has gradually drifted into small fruit growing, specializing in grapes. He had several thousand feet under glass.

He married Miss Marion Cameron a year before he left Scotland and, besides his wife, four girls and two boys survive him. He was a member of St. Paul's lodge of Newport of the Masons. He was also a member of St. Andrew's Society. The pallbearers, with the exception of one, were members of the Newport Horticultural Society.

Easter Business.

Easter business was fully up to any previous year, with plenty of stock of all kinds to supply the demand. There were an immense number of carnations, roses, sweet peas and bulbous stock and about enough Easter lilies. The lilies sold at 50 cents per bud and bloom.

The weather was warm, with showers early in the morning, but the sun came out later in the day and it was cloudy and sunny by turns, with strong gusts of wind.

Various Notes.

Theodore Kuebler did a big business at his store, it being his first Easter business at this location. He had a big supply of hyacinths, sweet peas and carnations.

Karl Zeidler had large quantities of bulbous stock and carnations, but ran short of roses.

Julius Niednagel had a large cut of roses, carnations and sweet peas and in pot plants had Easter Greeting pelargoniums, genistas, cinerarias, pansies and Easter lilies. Business was good.

The Lockyear Floral Co. had good cuts of roses and carnations and a big supply of bulbous stock.

The Blackman Floral Co. reports better business than last year and it had enough stock to fill all orders.

Mrs. J. C. Elspemann enjoyed her usual good Easter trade, with a fine supply of plants.

C. L. Niednagel had a big crop of roses, of which Columbia, Premier and Russell were the best.

The Market.

Complete returns on the Easter business are not yet available, but it is believed that the day's record will run far ahead of last year. Advance orders have been large, beginning in some of the shops early last week and increasing as the week advanced. Thursday and Friday were heavy and Saturday was expected to be a record-breaker, but a snow storm came up in the morning and continued all day and the forecast was that Easter would be more like Christmas than a spring holiday. The weather man said that there would be five or six inches of snow on the ground, by far the heaviest snow of the winter. Coming so late in the week, the storm did not have such a bad effect on buying as it would have had if it had been a few days earlier, but there would have been a throng of late buyers, judging from other years, had they been able to get around without discomfort. Telephone orders were heavy. Shipping orders were not so heavy, proportionately, as local, but this is believed to be due to the abundance of stock everywhere and it is thought that, when everything is checked up, out-of-town orders will stand well.

All kinds of flowers were plentiful except roses, which were bought in Chicago to fill in. There were plenty of lilies and other bulbous stock, carnations and sweet peas, and prices were reasonable. Carnations sold at wholesale for $6 and $8 per hundred and in some cases for less, according to quality. Easter lilies were from $28 to $30 per hundred and sweet peas from $2 to $5 per hundred.

The retail stores were massed with blooming plants. Never was there a greater profusion of flowers than this year. Stocks were brought in Wednesday and Thursday, March 31 and April 1, and it seemed as if there was no room for more, but more was brought in Friday and it was with difficulty that salespeople got around.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had a display of choice hydrangeas in pink and blue shades, also a wealth of lilies, rose bushes and a variety of other plants and cut flowers.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. was the only company which had rhododendrons. It had also bougainvilleas, both umbrella and ball-shaped, genistas and a good variety of rose bushes. This company's sales force was doubled for all of last week.

All of the retail stores were open Easter Sunday to care for the belated buyers.

T. J. Noll & Co. had one of the best weeks in their history. They had plenty of stock to care for every order.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop mailed several hundred colored folders two weeks before Easter. The folders contained a list of seasonable cut flowers and plants and a suggestion that plant baskets would make suitable Easter remembrances.

Among the recent visitors were Carl Hagemeyer, Paola, Kan.; W. Retzer, of the Washington Gardens Co., Houston, Tex.; Tucker Smith and P. A. Manson, Pleasant Hill, Mo., and Leonard Coen, Lexington, Mo.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. cleaned up on lilies Thursday, April 1, and by Saturday night had cleaned up on everything.

The Alpha Floral Co. had a decidedly attractive window. A large Easter egg, lighted by electricity, housed a number of baby chicks and there were artificial chickens and rabbits among the numerous blooming plants and vases of cut flowers.

Henry Kusik & Co. report a heavy business, about all they could handle, and plenty of stock.

CHICAGO.

The Easter Market.

It was a great Easter, in some respects commonplace, in others quite unusual.

First of all, for practically every wholesale house it established a new high record for Easter sales. To only have equaled last year's high mark would have been no small achievement, especially for some of the largest houses, but they did better than that, by anywhere from ten to sixty per cent. This showing by the wholesalers deserves to be stated first because it is an index to the results obtained by the much larger number of producers and retailers. The middlemen could not have made so splendid a sales record if the retailers had not been doing a big business and, the wholesale total being good, each grower must have got his share of dollars, whatever the average price of flowers may have been.

The second outstanding fact, however, is not a cause for satisfaction. Huge as was the business done, the demand did not suffice to consume the enormous quantity of flowers offered. That the supply exceeded expectations is the general report, also that the demand, while good, did not reach the anticipated volume. At no time in Easter week was the market cleaned up, but the supply on hand Saturday night was larger than the night before. As not infrequently happens, stock went out about as fast as it came in on the days when shipping was heaviest. No doubt the cleanup would have been much better had Easter been a pleasant day. Most of the wholesale houses were open late Saturday night, to deliver on advance orders and to accommodate buyers who found themselves short of stock, but they did not do much business. Sunday morning many of them opened in the hope of getting rid of some of the surplus, but about the worst blizzard of the year started early in the day and business dropped dead.

Paragraphing the principal items, roses were not in oversupply. During the rush it was not always possible to get just the grade and variety wanted and some orders were cut, but the fact that wholesalers sold large quantities to each other shows that there was no general shortage. Prices were well maintained except on the longest stems. Easter does not call for a large proportion of extra specials and many of these had to go with the lower grades. There were considerable quantities of roses which had been held too long and which were a source of disappointment.

Not only were carnation orders filled in full, but there was a large surplus. To begin with, the pickle factories had been busy; there were many carnations which should have been sent to market the week before. These stood no chance of satisfactory sale with weather conditions as they were. By Thursday the oversupplied state of the market became apparent to some of the wholesalers, who began wiring special offers to the other fellows' customers. But nobody who handles carnations in quantity caught enough orders to clean up. A lot of fine stock was put away Saturday night and was still in the iceboxes Monday morning. Average prices will disappoint the growers. The unexpectedly large receipts might have cleaned up if the early quotations had been lower. The price asked deterred the retailers from taking large lots.

Lilies are worth a separate chapter.

Sweet peas suffered from the extreme heat early in the week and the subsequent drop in temperature. There were few other flowers suitable for corsages and Saturday the market was bare of good peas. Cattleyas were scarce. Violets cut little figure; the heat wave finished them.

Large quantities of good bicolor narcissi were sold and the market cleaned up. Outdoor Spurs arrived in considerable quantity and many were left, because weather conditions were unfavorable for the class of florists who handle such stock. There were more tulips, early and Darwin, than had been expected. Considerable quantities were left. Freesia was hard to sell.

Such items as calendula, valley, daisies, snapdragons and pansies fared poorly, as the supply of other flowers was too heavy. Callas could not be moved.

There was a famine in plumosus.

"Consider the Lilies."

Three weeks before Easter The Review suggested that a perusal of the news-letters and ads might lead to a belief that there would be lilies enough to go around at the prices asked. There were—and then some. That the condition was not peculiar to Chicago was shown by the circumstance that wholesalers in other cities, to hold up their home markets, sent their surplus here, still further adding to our burden.

The figures published in The Review March 25, showing the Japanese official record of the number of lily bulbs shipped to America, told the story. While the bulb crop was short, America got it nearly all, about as many as ever. The United States was full of lilies. Also, the bulbs were stronger than usual. A given number of bulbs produced nearly half again as many flowers as in an ordinary year. This was apparent on the pot lilies. While lilies in pots sold fairly well, some of the growers had plants so heavily flowered that the retailers would not buy them. Most of the pot lilies sold at 25 cents to 30 cents per bud, but did not clean up. The greater part of the cut lilies were sold at 20 cents to 25 cents. A few sold at 35 cents, more at 30 cents. A good many short lilies went at 15 cents. One sale was reported of 1,000 at $125. It is believed to have been the bottom, but it would not have been the bottom had any wholesaler seen the chance to clean up. Old observers say they never before have seen so many unsold lilies on hand the night before Easter. It is probable nearly, if not quite, one-fourth of the week's receipts were left.

The result for the growers will depend largely on what it is possible to do with the surplus this week. If these flowers can be worked off at fair prices the growers will have had a fine season. Here is how one wholesaler figured it out: In an ordinary year bulbs cost 5 cents, gave two to three flowers, averaging 10 cents, brought about 25 cents, loss of bulb twenty per cent, leaving the grower 15 cents for his work. This year bulbs cost 15 cents, produced three to four flowers, which averaged 15 cents (counting unsold lilies as lost), brought 55 cents, loss of bulbs fifteen per cent, leaving about 31 cents, or twice as much as usual out of which the grower could meet his extra labor costs, etc., and make a profit. If the left-over lilies can be sold the showing will be still better.

That the retailers did not call for all the pot lilies was shown by the fact that the Boston store, which likes to slaughter prices on lines not carried regularly, was able to pick up several thousand plants at 55 cents each, selling them at 59 cents, much of it good stock. Fortunately, their ad did not quote the price.

Easter in Retail Stores.

Most of the retailers report themselves well pleased with the Easter business, congratulating themselves that the storm held off until Sunday. The stores which cater to the transient trade, particularly those in the outlying districts, no doubt lost heavily because of the storm, but the total business for the week in most cases foots up a larger total than ever before at Easter. Most of the retailers pushed plants, selling cut flowers only as called for. In many stores lilies constituted a much smaller proportion of the stock than in pre-war years. With minor exceptions the plants were all sold and delivered Saturday, ahead of the blizzard. One downtown store says the Sunday storm cost $1,000, but neighbors, catering to a different class of trade, say their business had been practically finished before the weather turned. The retailers assert prices asked for lilies and carnations were so high they could not see much chance of making a profit on them and preferred to handle plants or roses, but in most cases it is said the public paid the higher prices without protest.

with a complete suspension of the express service. This time the express service was discontinued because of a strike of switchmen in some of the railroad yards. At the office of the company it was said that the embargo was complete, but the wholesalers found that by taking their boxes to the depots and tipping someone, it usually was possible to get shipments put on the train. It is an astounding state of affairs when the managers of a public service corporation seize every opportunity to discontinue that service while the service is still procurable by paying money to the company's minor employees.

Under the conditions it might be said that there was no such thing as a market. Receipts were so light that flowers

Randolph Tuesday night, April 6. The purpose was to discuss a city-wide special sale of carnations under the auspices of the Allied Florists' Association. Less than a dozen retailers were in attendance and therefore no action was decided upon.

Secretary Lautenschlager's notice of the club meeting April 8 was decorated with a front-page portrait of Treasurer Paul E. Weiss, who was announced to talk on coal.

One of the curiosities of Quarantine No. 37 is exhibited in the supply of Spanish irises seen at the establishment of the A. L. Randall Co. The quarantine prevents the importation of the roots, but permits the importation of the cut flowers. Consequently Chicago growers received no irises from Holland last fall, but Randall now gets the cut flowers from Canada, which admitted the roots as usual. The duty is twenty-five per cent.

A few weeks ago H. N. Bruns had a disastrous experience with a leaking gas main in the street adjoining his greenhouses. Considerable valley was rendered valueless. The gas company asked August Poehlmann to make an appraisal of the damage in its behalf, which he did. There is good prospect that Mr. Bruns will be paid for the loss.

It is announced that Payne Jennings, well known to florists through his activities in the advertising field, has been elected vice-president in charge of sales for the Machinists' Supply Co.

The American Bulb Co. has received a large number of letters about its recent advertisement in the Sunday Tribune, telling the public to buy lilies. In every case the letters are commendatory.

Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, is busy building new benches and replanting the roses, but had 42,000 flowers for Easter.

Charles Drissler, of the store force of Wietor Bros., lost his father March 30. In ten days the venerable gentleman would have been 80 years old. He died of heart failure while walking on the street.

The flu a few weeks ago brought prosperity to many florists, but not to Damm Bros. Ordinarily their lilies are among the best on the market, but this year all three of the brothers were laid up with the epidemic at a critical time in the growth of the lilies. The result was that they did not have more than one-third the number of salable flowers which should have come from their bulbs.

Eric Johnson had the most unpleasant Easter in his career. Starting the week with a slight illness, by Wednesday he had to see a physician and spent the three rush days nursing an abscess ness use and on the cover of the spare tire are the large white letters, "Wittbold, Evanston." When the top is down the boot completes the story with the information, "Floral Decorator."

Frank Oechslein had some potted Easter lilies so fine the retailers could not use them. Stems five feet high carried twelve to fifteen buds. He cut the unsold ones and sent them to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. They were a problem there, too. The retailers do not care for more than three flowers to a stem.

Though the shortage of newsprint paper compelled the Fleischman Floral Co. to use a quarter page instead of its usual full-page advertisement in the Tribune for Easter, the restriction worked no hardship in the day's business. Nor did the storm. The twelve heavy trucks hired by the hour made all deliveries without being stalled once, everything having left the store by noon Sunday.

"Sunday's storm cost us at least $1,000," said Andrew Chronis, of the Alpha Floral Co. "We cleaned up on plants, of course, though there was some trouble in delivery because the cars couldn't get through the heavy snow in some places. But we had little business on Sunday, when a sunny day would have brought hundreds of people into the store." Sales were, however, larger in number and money total than last Easter.

Only a few Darwin tulips, which were a little "green," were left at H. N. Bruns' store after the Easter rush was over. But these are still good property. The snow delayed deliveries, so that three taxicabs were bribed into service

Your Stocks Will Need Replenishing After the Easter Rush

AFTER the rush of last week your stocks are, no doubt, sadly depleted. A careful inventory should be taken at once of such things as baskets, ribbons, chiffons, corsage accessories, novelties and all other supplies necessary in conducting your business.

THEN, after taking this inventory, don't delay. See to it at once that your stocks are replenished immediately. Prices are unsettled, but that means the trend is ever upward. RIGHT now is the time to buy, and RIGHT here is the place.

Among the heaviest sufferers was George Rye. His loss from broken glass and plants amounted to about $300. Estey O'Neale, an employee, was badly cut by the flying glass.

At B. B. Freeman's range damage estimated at $125 was done to glass and to potted plants.

The Quality Flower Shop had several windows cracked and the range at Prairie View suffered considerable broken glass. Along with the hail three-quarters of an inch of rain fell during the storm.

Roses of the Better Kind

We find so far this season the demand is mostly for Roses of the better kind.

Your trade wants the better variety of Roses, and is willing to pay you a good price for them.

For the balance of the season we will be very strong on good Roses.

We will have Russell in quantity. The best of all the pink on the market today.

It is a variety that will ship most any distance at any time of the year.

Premier Columbia Sawyer

Sunburst Ophelia

Double White Killarney

are other varieties that we recommend to you. These varieties are called for more than any other.

BEAUTIES

The Supply will be sufficient from now on to take care of all orders. You will find the quality of our Beauties somewhat better than usual at this time of the season.

Most of the stores carry a regular supply of Beauties, and we are in a position to arrange with any of our customers for a regular supply of Beauties for the balance of the season.

We are headquarters for Beauties in this market, and you will find our stock equal to, if not better than any other here.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

This Easter has been the greatest the Philadelphia market has ever seen. A greater quantity of stock has been grown and sold than ever before. This stock has realized a larger sum than has been realized by the stock sold at any previous Easter.

This encouraging result is largely due to the enterprise of the growers of Easter plants, who have developed an immense shipping industry through their own efforts and those of the plantmen who represent them. The city, too, has developed its plant business, but not to the same extent as that out of town, the field being much smaller.

Encouraged by beautiful weather, the market started well. At the beginning of the week, many of the out-of-town plant orders had already gone. More went out, to be followed immediately by the first of the nearby and local orders. These were pretty well out by Wednesday night. Then there was a lull. The market weakened slightly Thursday and still more under the influence of Friday morning's rain. Friday noon saw a change. The weather cleared and orders came in with surprising rapidity. Saturday saw an advance in prices, the market closing strongly.

While this general outline describes the plant situation, the last lines also apply to the cut flower market. The difference is that the cut flower market started much weaker than the plant market; strength did not come until Thursday, the first big shipping day. The market was strong and active until the close on Saturday night.

Lilies were again the Easter flower. These were grown in quantities probably seen nowhere else and their quality made their market. The price started at 30 cents; later it receded to 25 cents. During the midweek depression there were sales at 20 cents and even at 15 cents. This was due partly to cold feet and partly to inferior stock. The rally took the price back to 25 cents. In the final rush sales were recorded as high as 35 cents, the highest figure of the season. That so large a quantity of lilies could be marketed as plants and as cut flowers is extraordinary, considering the high price. It is due to enterprise, general prosperity and quality. In quoting these lily prices and other prices, it should be clearly understood that there is cutting. The sales at department stores and elsewhere indicate this state of affairs is more prevalent at Easter than at any other time.

The general retail price of lilies was 50 cents for each flower and bud.

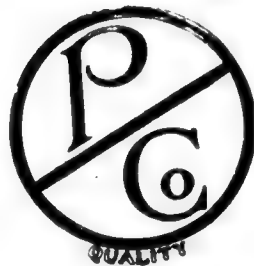

Hydrangeas were an important crop. The French varieties proved much more profitable, as well as more attractive, for the early Easter. Otaksa takes more time and heat and does not color so well with unfavorable weather. Of the French varieties, Lilie Mouillere, General de Vibraye and Mme. Chautard were most popular with the growers. The acme of perfection in hydrangea production lies in getting a shapely plant in a pot of moderate size. Hindigiri did yeoman's service as an azalea, doing duty for the whole indica class with trifling assistance from amena.

GRAVE MARKERS

Stein's Floral Supply Mfrs.

2223 N. Front St.,
Philadelphia.

The specimens were too expensive to be used freely; all the other sizes were popular. Roses were not so much grown as usual. Some of those that were grown did not bud well. The smaller plants of the rambler type were best.

Genistas were good and fairly plentiful. Daisies were grown freely with the idea that they would do service as substitutes for spiraea. They failed to meet the approval of many of the buyers, though marketed in fair numbers. Rhododendrons and bougainvilleas were absent. Bulbs were fine; hyacinths were especially so. They were largely used both in pots and pans at prices much higher than were asked before.

The sweet pea was the disappointment of the cut flower market. Outside of peas the stock was, in the main, satisfactory. Sweet peas were at their best a fortnight ago, maybe a little more. By the time Easter arrived they were not at their best. This fact was aggravated by the growers' attempt to hold the flowers on the vines and by the damp weather coming at just the wrong time. There was a pretty good crop of sweet peas for Easter. It was not so large as it had been and it was not of such superlative quality; so the buyers grumbled a little. Fancy peas brought $4 and even $5 per hundred; most of the stock sold at from $1.50 to $3. Double violets sold well at $1.50 per hundred, and even more. There were not nearly enough of them. There were no single violets. Orchids were in fair supply. C. Mossiæ brought $1.25 to $1.50; C. Schroederæ, 75 cents to $1, and a few tight C. Trianae brought $1.

Spring flowers were much in evidence in the shops. Snapdragon was considered excellent value at from $8 to $16 per hundred. Daffodils came next at $4, $5 and even $6. Good daffodils were worth these prices. Unfortunately, there were many poor daffs, soft, over-ripe. The growers kept them until the last moment, hoping they might retail them direct. Failing to do this, they were cut and rushed in to the wholesale market in an evident state of "going." Good callas were popular at from $25 to active demand at from $8 to $12, with a few select blooms of certain choice varieties at $15. The preponderance of white went off rather better than of late.

Beauties led the roses at $1 each. There were not many and the sales of fancy flowers of other varieties at fancy prices were few. The medium stock went well at $15 to $20 in all varieties, pink being at times quite scarce, while the shorts suitable for corsage bouquets went smartly at $8 to $12. There were other plants and flowers that were grown and sold. These are the most popular. Those given are the leading varieties. This description will give a pretty clear idea of the market conditions here.

The rain Easter morning was a disappointment to those florists who do a large cemetery business and to the makers of corsage bouquets.

good quality and in good condition and most gratifying, with the exception of violets, which unfortunately suffered from the warm weather.

The weather, which had been unusually warm and spring-like, brought on thousands of good carnations, but suddenly changed Saturday, April 3, though not sufficiently to do much harm to business. Easter Sunday, however, was bad, with intense cold, considerable snow and, later, heavy rains.

Calla lilies were plentiful and sold well. Easter lilies, though not over-plentiful, were sufficient to fill about all the orders. Orchids and gardenias were in excellent shape and sold well. Valley was in good demand and there was an adequate supply.

There was a fine supply of sweet peas on hand and these were particularly popular this year. Most of this stock was of high quality, few of the inferior grades being seen. There was a mammoth supply of roses in all grades and varieties and the demand was good. This stock was fresh and was considered to be as good as ever seen at Easter. Mignonette, marguerites, primulas, calendulas and myosotis sold well. Heavy shipments of bulbous stock arrived each day and fairly glutted the market, but, fortunately, the greater part of it moved. Potted bulbous stock and Easter Saturday was almost impassable. The second floor, which is given over for such occasions, was crowded to the limit with all kinds of potted plants and sales were reported as excellent.

Brooks the Florist reported an excellent trade during the rush and most of his stock cleaned up nicely.

Salter Bros., at both stores, did a bumper business and about everything in sight was cleaned up.

George Boucher's store was unusually well filled with all seasonable stock, in cut flowers, plants and baskets. Sales were heavy and included large funeral and wedding orders.

Louis Collatos was well satisfied with the amount of business done in his store.

E. R. Fry said that he had the busiest Easter in the history of his business, which has extended over a period of many years.

The Rochester Floral Co. disposed of an unusual amount of stock. The stock was attractively arranged and sold easily at good figures.

Alberts the Florist reported heavy holiday trade and cleaned up on most of his stock. Cut flowers sold readily and considerable corsage work was done.

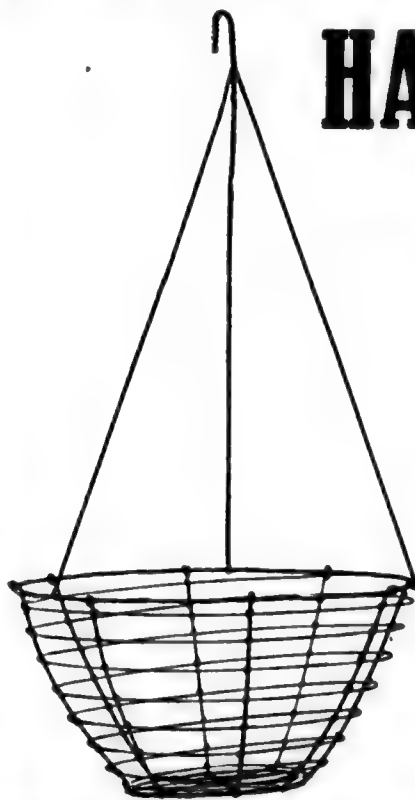

J. B. Keller Sons had heavier trade this Easter than ever before. In the considerable advertising done by the trade for this holiday this firm played an active part and much benefit was derived.

Jacob Thomann & Sons enjoyed a heavy trade. The greater percentage of their stock was grown by themselves.

The New York Florist Co. held large crowds of customers from morning until

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Easter Business.

Easter business was excellent. Potted plants were the leaders in popularity and practically everything available in this line cleaned up. Bulbous stock and small flowers led in cut flowers, carnations and roses not being in heavy demand. Lilies sold unusually well, both in pots and as cut flowers.

Roses were in abundance, but did not sell briskly. Tuesday, March 30, carnations were bringing $8 and $10 per hundred, with Laddie at $15 per hundred. By Easter Saturday, however, there was a glut on the market and, because of a great deal of pickled stock, the price had fallen to $4 per hundred. Had not Easter Sunday been a rainy, cold day, a great many more roses and carnations would have been sold, but the weather was so bad that it killed the Sunday trade.

The Market.

Stock is abundant. Roses are available in large quantities and prices have dropped. A large supply of carnations is on hand at $5 to $8 per hundred. Calla lilies and Easter lilies are selling at $3 per dozen. Daffodils and jonquils are popular at $8 per hundred and tulips sell for $5 and $6, except a few Darwins, which demand $8 per hundred.

Sweet peas are scarce and range in price according to quality. Snapdragons are just arriving and are of good quality.

Various Notes.

The April meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held Tuesday, April 13, at the Smith & Young Co. commission house.

Bertermann Bros. Co. enjoyed an excellent Easter business. The entire force was kept on the run. The company is installing a bookkeeping machine.

E. E. Temperley, dressed as a monkey, won the man's prize offered at the Shriners' masquerade ball, for the most grotesque costume. The prize was a beautiful platinum Shrine pin, set with two diamonds.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

In the last six months the circulation of The Review on the Pacific coast has more than doubled. As no effort has been made to secure subscriptions there, the increase is wholly due to readers who recommend the paper to others in the trade. But it points also to the rapid increase in the trade interests on the coast.

PORTLAND ROSE SHOW.

To Be Held Outdoors in June.

Portland, Ore., will attempt to win new laurels with roses when the Portland Rose Society holds its annual show June 21 to 23. Since all suitable buildings have been engaged for the Shriners' convention at that time, the committee of arrangements for the show, consisting of H. J. Blaesing, president of the Portland Rose Society; Jesse A. Curry, Pacific coast representative of the American Rose Society; and C. P. Keyser, park superintendent, decided to hold it outdoors. Madison street, between West Park and Tenth streets, is the site selected.

Booths will be erected to provide adequate shelter from rain and sun and will be arranged in the form of a U, with a band stand and flagpole in the center of the closed end. The general scheme of lighting and of other decoration will be in harmony with the rose festival plans. At the West street end will be a fountain with waterfalls, and a low, rustic bridge will form the main entrance to the rose show from the festival center.

Only Rose Society Members to Exhibit.

This year only members of the Portland Rose Society will be permitted to exhibit and compete for prizes, but, since a campaign for more members is now being actively waged, no decrease in the number of exhibitors is expected. The total value of the prizes offered will be in excess of $3,000.

After 10 a. m., June 21, when the roses have been placed, the judges will spend two hours in making the awards; thereafter, until 1:30, the imperial officers of the Shriners and their ladies will have a private view, with the members of the Portland Rose Society as escort. For the remainder of the three days, the show will be open to the public. The exhibits will be replenished each day.

The Market.

Easter found a better prepared market than usual, but still there was considerable shortage in some lines. At the middle of last week there was every prospect of pot Easter lilies being equal to the demand, but the high prices asked reduced that considerably. Cut lilies were short, the majority of them being taken from pots which would easily have been sold. Callas in some cases took the place of Easter lilies; they have held up well in price this season. Roses were not equal to the demand, nor was the quality all that could be desired. Some of the stock in roses came from the north. Valley was up to the demand at the price asked; this checked business, as well as the fact that customers have got out of the habit of asking for it. It costs money to make enough of a show of valley to draw attention to the fact that it is again on the market.

Easter plants, except lilies, were not particularly good, the majority of the best stock being shipped in. The spectacle of hydrangeas in small pots being offered at wholesale for prices which formerly would have bought a fine azalea or rhododendron checks the ardor of the would-be purchaser.

The retailers last week made strong bids for business with attractive displays and had a good amount of advance orders. Wholesalers had all that they could handle, especially with last-minute orders.

Various Notes.

W. Armacost & Co. have purchased an additional nine acres of land adjoining their large range at Sawtelle. Some, at least, of this land will be used to grow sod for compost for the rose benches before being built on, though further extension of the lath houses for plumosus is under consideration.

David Griffiths, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has been visiting the nurseries and bulb-growing establishments in the vicinity. Mr. Griffiths is especially interested in the government's experiments in growing Easter lilies from seed. The work which the department is doing is not only interesting to the cultivator but suggestive to the trade.

A. O. Stayskal, of Fort Bayard, N. M., was visiting this city last week.

George Stewart has made and is making several improvements in his store at Second and Western avenues, where he has a fine location. A new icebox is in course of construction.

G. Gorini has purchased another five acres at Huntington Park, making ten acres in all. He is sending to the market some of the finest Shasta daisies which are grown in this section, his strain being particularly strong in the stem, with fine, well formed flowers. Large plantings of dahlias, gladioli and other popular flowers are going in and will easily find a market.

Paul Ecker has sold many thousands of stock plants of poinsettias already this season; his shipments reach practically all over the United States and Canada. A large percentage of the orders are from satisfied customers of last season and previous years.

H. R. Richards.

The Market.

Last week found the florists all busy with their Easter orders, with a general rise in prices over the previous week. Good roses had a fifty per cent rise and carnations were somewhat higher in price. Lilies of the valley were scarce and high in price. The supply of orchids was diminished and the blooms were extremely high-priced. The supply of Easter lilies was good this year, but the cut blooms and potted plants both sold out at a high price. Violets were still plentiful and all outside flowers arrived in good shape and large quantity. Gardenias were scarce and free-sias all gone.

A good supply of roses was in the market for the Easter trade, including Russells, Columbias, Wards, Ophelias and September Morns. Kaiserins, Hadleys and American Beauties had commenced to come in and Cecile Brunners also put in an appearance for the Easter trade.

A large supply of tulips was available, while anemones and ranunculuses were more plentiful. The outdoor sweet peas from the southern valleys were seen in San Francisco stores.

The wholesale dealers stated that they had been cutting and shipping large quantities of flowers for the northern and eastern trade last week. All varieties of roses have been much in demand. Both cut and potted Easter lilies have been shipped in large numbers. White and lavender lilac blooms are becoming more plentiful in the shops.

Dahlia roots are being shipped out in large quantities for the eastern and northern trade. Several shipments have been made by a San Francisco dealer to South America and China.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Copeland, who purchased the business and store of the Misses Hannon, on Sutter street, was kept busy in the latter part of Lent with decorating work. Last week most of the decorations were in connection with Easter services, but she states that general business has kept up right along. One of her largest orders last week was the decoration of the Sorosis Club; for this she used quantities of Easter lilies and spring flowers. Mrs. Copeland has been featuring a fine showing of lavender ranunculuses and an excellent collection of Easter baskets.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. had its store on Powell street beautifully decorated for Easter. Trestlework of white wood was used effectively in the setting for the large showing of potted rambler roses, Easter lilies and other plants. Manager Fred Bertrand reports exceptional Easter sales. The supply of flowers and plants from the nursery was practically cleaned out. The landscape department reports busy days and the stand in the Palace hotel is rushed. Several large decorations, ordered some time in advance, are being taken care of now that the Easter decorations are out of the way. The latter included an elaborate decoration of the banquet hall and lodge room for the Scottish Rite's Easter ceremony, which required a great many Easter lilies and rambler roses.

B. M. Joseph's store attracted much favorable attention in conjunction with its Easter decorations. The comprehensive showing of plants and cut flowers was supplemented by a grand array of canaries and other song birds. A handsome Japanese cage, housing a particularly beautiful singer, was the central feature of the window display. Robert Lang, who is a student of Stanford University and whose father is in the trade in Texas, spent his Easter vacation assisting with the rush at this store and, incidentally, familiarizing beautiful decoration at a recent wedding in this city, when Miss Eastlake, a Chicago belle, was married to a San Francisco business man.

The E. W. McLellan Co. had on hand last week a fine line of roses, especially Russells. An abundant supply of American Beauties and Cecile Brunners arrived from the nursery in time for Easter.

J. A. Axell had a fine supply of roses for the Easter trade, including Ophelias, September Morns, Russells, Columbias, Wards, Hadleys and Kaiserins. He also had a large supply of tulips.

Gen. A. J. Gooch reports a good supply of lavender and white lilacs, ranunculuses, anemones and outside sweet peas ready for market.

The United Flower & Supply Co. had a large supply of Easter lilies. They are making a specialty of Japanese baskets and have recently received a shipment from Japan.

C. Kooyman & Co. had on hand plenty of outdoor flowers and Easter lilies for the Easter trade.

Enomoto & Co. had a large supply of roses, Easter lilies, calla lilies and spring flowers for Easter.

Domoto Bros. had a store full of excellent potted Easter lilies and other potted flowering plants.

Among the visitors to San Francisco last week were Mr. Martin, of Martin & Forbes, Portland, Ore.; E. A. Feters and Thomas Brown, of Detroit, Mich., and Ernst Wienhoeber, of Chicago.

SEATTLE, WASH.*The Market.

While it was hard to figure Easter trade from the preliminary activities of the week, everything pointed to a splendid business. There were plenty of lilies in sight for the trade; in fact, there was some fear expressed that an oversupply might develop before the end of the week, but most of the handlers were of the opinion that there would be a ready sale of all stock at good prices. One or two houses showed an inclination to start their sales too low, but this was not generally the case.

The local greenhouses are supplying everything that the trade can use. In some few instances the local growers are showing a surplus and have been able to fill shipping orders from points in the intermountain country. This is especially true of sweet peas and hydrangeas, both of which have been arriving in fine shape. The sweet peas have been combined freely with the fine cut of orchids which is available and the local cut of gardenias has been in-have been big sellers of late, especially the smaller potted varieties, and stores have about cleaned out the stock of tree ferns held here.

Considerable added cost in the handling of lily bulbs is assured this year through the ruling of the government against the importation of all bulbs and nursery stock packed in Japanese soil. This means that all of the supply will have to be landed at Vancouver, B. C., repacked in Canadian soil and then nearly every shop, with tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and cinerarias in many hues all catching the eyes of buyers.

The local cut of roses is also increasing, with Ward and Premier showing the largest gains. White Killarney has been arriving more freely, with Ophelia and Columbia still furnishing the bulk of the arrivals. Lily of the valley has also been increasing, but not to a large enough degree to leave stock on the hands of the dealers. Freesias have been used freely in decorations and some fine specimens have been received.

March showed an increase in the number of accounts handled by the various florists in Seattle, when compared with the total for a year ago, and the total volume of business is expected to make a good a showing. More advertising has been carried on this year by the florists than ever before, but the sales have warranted this in every instance, say the members of the trade. Ferns brought here for distribution all over the country. Last year's bulb business through the port of Seattle amounted to $25,000,000 and Vancouver port officials are figuring on getting that trade this year.

Still other items which the local trade has been forced to buy in Vancouver are palms and azaleas. Vancouver buyers cleaned up the palm market of Florida on certain classes a year ago and buyers now have to pay an extra twenty-five per cent duty to get this stock. Efforts are being made to have this refunded on the ground that the stock was not grown in Canada, but only stayed in that country for a short time.

Various Notes.

Robert Corrier, for a number of years on the floor with Rosaia Bros., is again at work for this firm. Ward roses and hydrangeas have been the big offerings with this firm recently and the buyers have shown a decided preference for these lines.

Henry Day, manager of the Woodland Park Floral Co. since its purchase by Rosaia Bros., has been featuring tulips and daffodils in his window displays, with good results. The interior arrangements are being changed and improved to permit a better showing of stock and more room.

Harry Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, offered some of the first potted calceolarias of the season last week and found buyers took to them readily. This firm maintained its prices

The Market.

Trade conditions here are good. Everyone in the business got his share of Easter business and the public spent its money for flowers more freely than ever before. Stock was never better or more complete than this year. All the growers were fortunate with their Easter lilies and made a fine showing. There was a great variety of flowers to choose from and the public could get anything that it asked for.

Various Notes.

Martin & Forbes are showing some nice gloxinias. Their Easter window display was charming and attracted a good deal of attention.

H. J. Millatt, of Clarke Bros., underwent a serious operation last week. It will be some time before he will be able to resume his duties at the store.

Smith's Flower Shop featured some fine hydrangeas for Easter. The window display of lilies and hydrangeas, with trimmings of lavender ribbon and chiffon, made an attractive display.

George Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., and H. R. Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, of Seattle, Wash., and F. C. Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, Wash., were visitors last week. L. T. S.

Hoquiam, Wash.—A. W. Tweedie, proprietor of the Grays Harbor Floral Co., said that conditions favored business in that wages were high and plenty of money was afloat. March, after coming in like a summer's day, went out in a rain, snow and hail storm, with the temperature down to 30. This was unusual for this section, particularly after a mild winter, which, however, was itself unusual.

almost exactly the same figure as that for the preceding week. The cumulative production since the beginning of the year was as follows, in net tons, for the first sixty-eight working days: 1917,

The year 1920 has thus fallen behind each of the two war years, but retains a lead of 23,070,000 tons over 1919.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

SIEBRECHT'S STAR DECORATION.

For the largest social event of the season in southern California, the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Cutten, of Chicago, at Hotel Huntington, Pasadena, on the evening of Friday, March 19, the ballroom was transformed into a secret garden taken from the "Garden of Allah" by Siebrecht's House of Flowers. The room was massed on all sides with tall eucalyptus trees of the blue color, from thirty-five to fifty feet in height, gracefully hanging over the entire room and forming a roof of green. Climbing roses grew up the trees, hanging down with thousands of roses of many varieties and colors.

The stage at the end of the ballroom was banked with palms fifteen to twenty-five feet in height. In front of the palms were banks of Spiraea Bridal Wreath, Rhododendron Pink Pearl and pink Chinese azaleas, forming a screen which completely hid the twenty musicians from view.

On each side of the ballroom were three miniature secret gardens, festooned with running roses and vines; in front of each garden was placed a standard rose tree, seven feet in height and three in width, with hundreds of roses on each tree.

On each side of the ballroom were four large, round tables, ten feet in diameter, festooned underneath and over the entire top with roses, making a perfect rose umbrella. Electric lights were placed up under the umbrellas, spreading their rays over the tables, giving subdued light like that of candles. Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., of the House of Flowers, states that this is the first time that this effect has been produced. There were used in the umbrellas alone 700 to 800 roses, all of selected, specimen stock.

Entrance to the secret garden was most unique and interesting. At the first entrance a large, double gate was built, representing a garden gate. This was entirely covered with running and climbing roses in full bloom, as were the arches over the gates. These gates opened into a long corridor, which was transformed into an arbor of climbing and running roses in full bloom. At the garden was another large pair of gates, entirely covered with running and climbing roses in full bloom. There were between 10,000 and 12,000 roses used to beautify this arrangement and a staff of twenty-two skilled artists worked two days and a night to complete this setting.

SPRING'S OPPORTUNITIES.

Plenty of Stock.

Now that Easter is over, it behooves the retailer to form his plans for a grandstand finish to the season that will go down in history as one of the greatest that was ever known. The winter of 1919-20 will often be referred to as the winter of great scarcity of stock and high prices. But that is all past; stock can now be had in any quantities desired, at prices that are normal and in some cases below normal.

This is not the time for the retailer to try to get even for the high prices he was obliged to pay a short time ago. Put yourself in the grower's place and I am sure that you would have done as he did. The point I wish to emphasize is that there is no doubt going to be a big supply of cut stock as the spring advances and you owe it to your business to move as much of this stock through regular channels as it is possible to do. Remember that the stock, as it comes to the market, will not last long and that it is going to be sold at some price. And I am sure that any wholesaler would rather give his old customers the advantage of low prices than he would the street men.

Street Man Takes Opportunities.

Let us look at the situation from the side of the commission man for a moment. There will be a big supply arriving from day to day; if this is not kept moving, Saturday will find his iceboxes stocked up, with a fresh supply in sight for Monday morning. This is the opportunity that the street vender is looking for. He will make an offer for perhaps the whole quantity. It may be ridiculously cheap, but it is the commission man's last chance of a sale. It gives him his commission, though a much smaller amount than he should have, and, while it will not be profitable for the grower, this sale will make the latter's loss less than if it had not been made.

We all know something of the street

Take a Leaf From Roehrs' Ten-Ten Book

When Roehrs first started telling about his Ten-Ten plan for increasing florists' business, I confess I was skeptical. Admittedly it sounded good, in those chats. But still I couldn't quite figure out how we florists would figure in it.

But now that I have looked carefully through the Ten-Ten Book itself—it's plain as day. Here, friends, is sure a new idea in selling. New in that it makes buying as easy as rolling off a log.

Doggone it all, if I didn't read every one of those delightful introductions and suggestions of what to do and the fun there would be in doing it.

All of us are 100 per cent sold on it.

Why, man alive—you can take that book, sit down with a customer and you can't help selling them seeds, shrubs, bulbs and even shade trees.

You don't invest a cent in stock, still you have the finest stock to sell.

I propose a rising vote of thanks to the Roehrs boys for helping the florists to help themselves to more business.

man's methods. There will be good and bad stock in his purchase. A little judicious mixing will make a bunch look fairly good. He has an army of assistants, a set of bright young fellows who live by their wits. The object of the leader is to get the purchase price safe in his pocket. Then, in the vernacular of the faker, they are "on velvet," or what they make after this is all clear profit. Sometimes this is large and often it is small, according to conditions. The point I want to impress upon the regular retailer is that, at best, these prices are cheap in comparison with current prices and it does not benefit our business to have such conditions to contend with.

REMEMBER, every customer must be satisfied. If not, either the order will be duplicated or no pay accepted.

The proper thing for the retailer to do is to find a remedy. The solution of the problem is in his own hands; that is, to beat the street merchant at his own game. This can only be done by co-operation. In every large city there should be an organization of the retailers, including the little fellows as well as the big ones. If it is necessary, they can buy out the wholesaler in times of glut and then divide up the stock. Everyone will take some and what one cannot use another will, so that all qualities can be handled. Just here is where a little judicious advertising will count.

stock will put the retail florists' business on a more dignified level. I have outlined but one method; the retail organization in each city can work out its own. The wise thing to do is to get together, have a better understanding with the growers and the wholesalers, keep stock moving, even if profits are small at times, and the business all along the line will be benefited.

Time for Bedding Plants.

Now let us get back to regular business. One of the principal things the retailer will have to think of now is bedding plants. All handle more or less of these. Some are so situated that they have a greenhouse connected with their store; most of those in the big cities have not, and, in a great many cases, they have no range connected with the store at all.

To those who have a range situated in the suburbs, it is an easy proposition. All you have to do is carry enough bedding plants to suggest them to your customers. Then, in these days of automobiles, it is an easy matter, with the use of a little tact, to get them out to the range; make them feel that it would be well worth their while to see the range in all its beauty at this time. Once you have them there, you will be able to sell them more than you would in the store. It is a well known fact that where you can show a customer bedding plants in good-sized blocks they look much better than when packed in flats.

Those who have no range to which to take customers will have to manage the best they can. Do not carry too large a stock, for soft-wooded bedding plants are quick to lose their freshness in a store. It is better to have small consignments frequently and as large an assortment as possible. Take the orders and have them delivered direct from your grower.

There is so much to think of about the store in spring time that space is insufficient now, but next week I want to talk about the windows. A good window is like charity; it covers a multitude of sins.

of their local papers and who have not availed themselves of the special elec-trotype issued for this day by the promotion bureau should at least use the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," promi-nently in their announcements, for such use links up with the national advertising. The more the slogan is used, the better it is for our industry.

It has been erroneously reported that our promotion bureau is to be removed to a western office. The bureau probably has been confused with the department which has handled our dealers' helps and which is to be transferred to Chicago. The amount of business transacted by this department becoming too great for the small staff maintained in our promotion bureau and an extension of our service being considered advisable, the committee at its last meeting decided to open what is to be known as the Florists' Publicity Service Bureau of the S. A. F., which is to be conducted under the management of H. V. Swenson, 431 South Dearborn street, Chicago, to which is to be transferred, as soon as possible, the stock of electrotypes, signs, stickers and other dealers' helps handled by the promotion bureau. The bureau remains as part of the administration offices of the society, 1170

Lack of Funds.

In everything but funds the organization of the publicity campaign is complete. It is unfortunate that a better response is not made to our appeals for one year's work that our committee so earnestly desires. It is less than an average of $5 per head from those who are conducting florists' establishments. A contribution should not be considered in the category of many other contributions a business man is called upon to make, as for churches, institutions, local enterprises and functions. It is a contribution that he owes to himself. It is an investment in the clearest sense of the term. It is an investment of a small sum of money in a fund for advertising the florists' business, the business from which all in the trade make their living, so that they can make more than a mere competence. It is a business proposition, the success of which has already been assured. Until this campaign started, the florists' industry, unlike other industries no more important, was never advertised. It was not in the public eye and suffered in consequence.

Like Aladdin's Lamp.

The publicity we have secured in the last two years has worked wonders. Never were flowers in better demand than they are today, because people have been brought to look upon them as necessities in every home of refinement. Many now make the permanent decorations of their living rooms in neutral color, so that flowers shall give the color note, changeable at will. Remembrance of anniversaries by gifts of flowers was never so general as it is today. And what has caused all this?

Simply the publicity which has been provided by our campaign. And you,
Mr. Nonsubscriber, are asked to contribute a small share of the expense; yet you hesitate to come across with your mite. You want to see the good work go on, without doubt. Then sit right down, no better time than now, write out your check for what you think you can afford and send it in to the secretary. It is needed.

The Market.

Easter of 1920 has come and gone and every indication is that it was a record-breaker. Judging from the reports from the leading retailers, the harvest was rich. Up to the end of last week, weather conditions were all that could be desired. About 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 3, a steady rain began, which lessened the transient trade somewhat, but most orders had already been placed. The perfect weather all last week was a great help to the Easter trade. A great deal of credit for the excellent business must also be given to the publicity campaign, both local and national.

The market was well supplied with everything in season. As is usual at Easter, there was a big demand for blooming plants, which practically cleaned up all of the large supply of the plant growers.

Lilies had the greatest call of any Easter known. While prices were high, the public did not seem to mind it so long as the retailers had what they wanted. The demand for bulbous stock in pots and pans was also large, especially for Dutch hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, freesias and valley. Callas, too, were plentiful this year and many were sold for Holy Thursday for church decorations. Hydrangeas and rambler roses cleaned out early. Made-up plant baskets had the largest call this year; in fact, when you asked the retailer what was selling best, he would say, "Everything, from lilies down to geraniums."

The market had plenty of cut stock, as the fine weather forced out an abundance, and prices were not out of reach in any of the grades. The big demand started as early as Thursday, with many advance orders placed for an extra daily supply up to Sunday morning. Roses were in excellent supply and the quality was of the best, with all varieties in good demand. In carnations the supply was also large, with excellent stock bringing as high as $8 to $10 per hundred; this was only in the extra fancies. All colors were in equal demand.

Sweet peas has a greater demand than any other flower this Easter. The warm, clear days brought an abundance of stock to the wholesale markets, all of it of extremely fine quality.

Cut lilies and callas had a large demand, at from 25 to 35 cents per bloom. Other bulbous stock, such as valley, tulips, jonquils, freesias and Dutch hyacinths, were in heavy supply and sold well. Snapdragons, calendulas, mignonette, daisies, pansies and irises all had a good call and the market was well supplied.

The market had an exceptionally large demand for greens. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri were plentiful, but not enough to go around. Adiantum, flat ferns and leucothoe were scarce. Good, long smilax had many calls during the week.

that by Sunday evening everything was cleaned out and that he could not remember a better Easter business.

Fred C. Weber, F. H. Weber, Joseph Witek and Otto Sander had grand displays of Easter plants and their sales greatly exceeded those of last year.

H. Young & Son, John Borm, Heil & Haizlep, Miss M. Carroll, Theodore Miller and Fred Hermann made fine displays and did a rushing business.

George Waldbart, M. S. Newman, the Ayres Floral Co. and the Koenig Floral Co., all near Grand avenue and Olive street, reported this year a good increase over last year.

The Ostertag Floral Co. and Young's put in some especially busy days last week and wound up with a big rush at the end.

Grimm & Gorly's new store was packed daily. Large daily advertisements in the newspapers helped them to dispose of their big supply. It was their best Easter since they have been in business.

Vandervoort's floral department, the Foster Floral Co., George Berner, the Riessen Floral Co. and the floral department of the Famous-Barr Co., all in the downtown district, had an especially heavy trade in plants.

In the south end, remarkable business is reported by the Eggeling Floral Co., Windler's Flowers, the Schoenle Floral Co., the Bergstermann Floral Co., Otto Bruenig, A. Meyer, W. H. Kruse, Mrs. T. Diemer, Mrs. Julia Pelletier, Charles Beyer and Emil Schray.

Grimm & Gorly's Opening.

The opening of the new store of Grimm & Gorly, at 712 Washington street, took the form of a house-warming March 29, when thousands of visitors participated, brought in partly by the large display advertisements in the daily papers. All visitors were presented with flowers by a corps of young ladies engaged especially for the occasion.

The interior decorations consist of French gold and marble panel mirror effects. The store is well lighted by large plate glass windows. The draperies are of silk texture and were designed especially for them. The building contains four stories, all well ventilated, and the firm occupies the entire floor space.

Many unusual gifts were received from friends in the city instead of the customary floral offerings. Among these was a yard of woolen goods from floral department, is to be married April 8 to Mrs. Bertha Bredemeyer, a sister of his business partner, Edward Steitz. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon in Florida, where they expect to stay until May 1. When the news became known, both were showered with congratulations by their many friends.

Walter Retzer, of Houston, Tex., a former member of the St. Louis trade, spent a few days here last week looking up old acquaintances in the trade. Mr. Retzer was a former student of the Missouri Botanical Garden and later an officer of the St. Louis Seed Co.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Newman have opened a store at 2519 California avenue under the name of the H. W. Newman Floral Co. They have a nicely furnished store in a good location. Both are former employees of Grimm & Gorly.

D. Bova, of the Red Bud Floral Co., has opened a store at the corner of Seventh avenue and Pine street and specializes in fancy fruit and cut flowers and plants.

The Acme Floral Co., in the Arcade building, enjoyed a splendid business its first Easter in business.

Carr & Richardson handled one of the largest assortments of blooming plants in the downtown district. In addition to a good Easter business, they had a large golden wedding order.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held their monthly conference at W. A. Rowe's new home, in Kirkwood, April 1. An interesting program was planned for the club's meeting to be held April 8 in Vandervoort's new music hall.

An important meeting of the florists' publicity committee will be held at 8 p. m., Tuesday, April 13, at its headquarters, 1316 Pine street. There will be plenty of urgent business to transact and Chairman Bourdet requests every member of the committee to be present at this meeting.

At H. G. Berning's store, the large extra force was kept busy from March 31 up to April 3 packing shipping orders to points west and east. Since stock was quite plentiful, all orders were filled to the letter.

The big blackboard in the salesroom of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is of much interest these days to the trade who are watching the changes in the standing of the various bowling teams and of each player.

George Deutschmann, of Kirkwood, was supplying the market with especially fine Darwin tulips last week, also splendid Spencer sweet peas.

August H. Hummert, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, celebrated his forty-second birthday April 1 with the officers of the club at the home of Trustee Rowe, in Kirkwood, Mo.

A. Jablonsky, at Olivette, Mo., got all his lilies in for Easter; as they were among the finest, he cleaned them all out early among the local trade.

The Review's advertisers in the Pink Part say that telegraph orders this year exceeded those of any previous Easter. Plant orders greatly exceeded those for cut flowers. The retailers in the west end, especially, had a large number of plant orders by wire.

There was no bowling last week, owing to the big Easter rush, but Wednesday evening, April 7, the Roses met the Daisies and the Carnations met the Sweet Peas. At the end of the bowling season, there will be one big night when the prizes will be distributed. This event will take place at the Western Rowing Club and all the florists in the city will be invited to attend and participate in the fun. Refreshments of all kinds will be served. J. J. B.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a superb exhibition of Easter plants, including the choicest and most varied collection seen anywhere. All of the plants were grown at the Williams greenhouses on Bausman street, Knoxville. The owner gives the entire credit to her foreman, Frank Hehman.

James J. Higgins and Norbert Huttinger, of the A. L. Randall Co. sales staff, headed the Easter force of twenty-five additional people at Randolph & McClements'. Mr. Huttinger, who formerly traveled in the immediate vicinity of Pittsburgh, has extended his territory to include the cities of Scranton and Lancaster.

Benjamin Fineberg, who was formerly identified with his brother, Joseph Fineberg, in the Pitt Floral Co., has gone into business for himself.

William Shirley, who has just recovered from an illness, has taken charge of the store greenhouse of the E. C. Ludwig Co. for a week or so of the Easter season and is also supervising the combination basket making. This greenhouse, which is supplied from the Ludwig station farm, near Mars, Pa., is now in the pink of perfection. Mr. Shirley has been in the employ of Randolph & Son, of Verona, Pa., for the last sixteen or seventeen years. He contemplates spending next winter in Texas.

Mrs. Edward Ernest Ludwig, a bride of last autumn, was also pressed into the firm's service for the week.

Mrs. Victor Bergman, of Chicago, arrived Thursday morning, April 1, to spend a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Ludwig, and help out with the Easter trade of the Ludwig Floral Co. Mrs. Bergman was accompanied by her young son, Victor Bergman, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilkinson Elliott have returned from a week's visit in Chicago, the object of Mr. Elliott's trip being to fulfill several lecture engagements before garden clubs.

William A. Dietz was a recent visitor among western Pennsylvania florists in the interest of Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York.

M. Ellison, who has been laid up for some time with a fractured rib, is again at his old stand with C. Beckert & Co., 918 East Ohio street.

season of prosperity. There is a lack of stock for this kind of work and the stock that is arriving is not up to the standard that it should be. The seed industry is also booming, the weather having brought forth the prospective sowers in unprecedented numbers.

Freeland & Jones, who recently opened headquarters at the corner of Liberty, Diamond and Ferry streets, find it impossible to get stock enough to meet their demand for landscape work.

The landscape work of the A. W. Smith Co. is pressing. Last week they had to release several of the staff to help with the Easter work. This firm has just closed a contract for grading and planting the grounds of the new Montour Heights Country Club and another with the Oliver & Snyder Steel Co. for the new town site of Oliver, near Uniontown, Pa.

The Scobie & Parker Co. has engaged Mr. Smail to meet the increasing demands of the seed business. E. E. S.

seen. Made-up baskets were everywhere; these ranged in prices from $5 to $25, with specials in some of the stores at higher prices.

I never, in all my experience, saw the stores cleaned up so early on blooming plants and at prices that are certainly in keeping with the high cost of living. Another significant thing is that this year high prices seem to be taken as a matter of fact. I have heard no grumbling, either on the part of the public or the retailer, and I am sure that it is safe to say that the grower was well satisfied with what he received for his stock. It is true that there were a good many plants that could not be classed as first grade, yet everything was sold. If a plant could not stand alone, it was used in basket work, the popular price being $8 and $10. There was a big supply of cut stock of all kinds.

I heard some complaints of shortage in special lines. For instance, one wholesaler told me that he would not be able to fill all orders on first-grade sweet peas for corsage work; another said he would run short on valley, and a third was short on medium roses. There was, however, no real shortage on any single item.

I don't think that finer roses were ever seen on the Baltimore market; carnations could not have been better; sweet peas were fine; violets, which were depended on from out of town, were slow in arriving. No one seemed to know whether they would come at all, although the orders had been placed early on condition that they be good stock. One shipment of them from New York state was all that could be desired.

There was plenty of bulbous stock of all sorts. In fact, I think that there was plenty of cut stock to meet all demands, in spite of an unusually heavy week in funeral work. Dr. John D. Blake, the former commissioner of health, was buried Holy Thursday and Ex-governor Warfield Good Friday morning. Both of these men were well known in all walks of life and every florist in town had something to do for the funerals. One florist's orders for the Warfield funeral amounted to $1,000 alone. To sum up, it was a big floral Easter and, as is usually the case, the florists were meeting every emergency in fine style.

Various Notes.

A visit to Sieck & Glick Friday, April 2, found them entirely cleaned out of plants and busy filling their cut flower orders. They told me that they would be in a position to take care of all of their orders, but said they might have had many more had they taken them. These young men had calculated closely on what stock they would have and would not book orders after this had been exhausted.

At the S. S. Pennock Co. I found J. J. Perry and his staff hard at work getting the cut flower and especially the shipping orders out of the way. Mr. Perry said that he felt he would be able to fulfill all promises, except perhaps on valley and violets. This establishment, which had been full of plants the entire week, did not have a salable plant left. I was assured that everything was going finely and that there were virtually no complaints as to prices.

At the Leo Niessen Co. everyone was so busy that I did not have an opportunity to get much information, but the appearance of the store was all that was necessary for a florist to understand the volume of business it had done and was doing. In the first place, there was not a plant left, the floor being piled high with boxes ready for the express office, and at one of the desks a clerk was sorting over a bunch of local orders that would mean an all-night seance for the staff. Mr. McKissick, the manager, was here, there and everywhere. He said that he would be able to meet all requirements; that stock was in A-1 condition and that altogether it was a great Easter.

Lehr Bros., whose aim it is to have a steady crop of roses throughout the season, never cropping their plants, have certainly got the goods at the right time this year. Their Double White Killarney, Hoosier Beauty, Columbia, Premier and Prima Donna are as fine roses as I have ever seen. They are shipped in the regulation bundles of twenty-five and it is almost impossible to pick one of these up and not find it stamped special or extra.

Jesse P. King is sending in some wonderful snapdragons and his sweet peas are fine.

Andrew Anderson had a fine cut of roses and his snapdragons were the talk of the town.

Arthur Richmond has carnations that for quality and quantity cannot be beat; his snapdragons also are fine.

William Paterson is sending in fine Radiance roses and next year he is going to grow two new houses of Columbia. Tate.

The first move of this firm was to lease a downtown store and open it in time for the Easter business. It intends to operate the most up-to-date flower shop in northern Texas. It is a member of the F. T. D. Three members of the firm were students of Prof. H. B. Dorner, at the University of Illinois, and graduates of the 4-year course in horticulture there. Robert Bebb, M. R. Bebb and Forrest Bebb have operated the Muskogee Carnation Co., at Muskogee, Okla., for the last ten years and Edwin A. The Easter demand was greater this year than ever before. The retail florists were paying 20 and 25 cents per bloom for lilies only to find that the department stores were selling them at 20 cents per bloom. However, the florists disposed of theirs without trouble at 35 to 50 cents per bloom.

There was a good supply of the lower-priced plants, but a shortage of the

Various Notes.

Recently the retail department of John H. Dunlop's was incorporated into a limited company with the name of Dunlop's, Ltd. The growing end of the business has also been incorporated, under the name of John H. Dunlop & Son, Ltd. This company will take over the greenhouses of John H. Dunlop, at Richmond Hill.

The Toronto Retail Florists' Club has arranged for a dinner and meeting with the growers April 19. It was long ago realized that for the best interests of the florists' trade the growers and the retailers must pull together. A meeting was proposed, but the illness

Get the knowledge you need, hints and practical suggestions that will help in your work, by buying Bailey's new "Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture"—the florists' 6-volume library. 4,000 engravings, 96 full-page cuts, fine color work.
Take advantage of the present easy payment plan of $3.00 per month, or send $42.00 for the complete set of six volumes. This is the best book buy any florist could make—an investment that will pay a life-time of dividends.

The Market.

The Easter trade turned out satisfactory, although Good Friday was wintry, strong gales blowing and snow falling during the day, which was contrary to all expectations for the Easter weather. Easter Saturday was much better, being a bright, sunny day, and a large volume of business was done during the day.

Blooming plants were the strong demand with flower buyers for Easter and there was a large and fine assortment to choose from. There were hydrangeas, which were extra fine; rambler roses, fine, well flowered stock; hyacinths in all colors; daffodils; cinerarias; genistas; primulas; begonias; calceolarias, and Easter lilies, which were well grown, bushy stock, with from three to seven blooms to a plant. There were few lilies left in any of the stores Sunday morning.

In cut flowers there was plenty of everything, including roses, carnations, Easter lilies, callas, mignonette, calendulas, sweet peas, daffodils, tulips, freesias, violets, valley and orchids.

Various Notes.

J. J. Le Borious was busy right up to Saturday in the wholesale and shipping department, his stock consisting of hydrangeas, lilies, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, rambler roses and primulas. He also had a large cut of carnations.

William Jaap sent in some fine lilies, bulbous stock and primulas.

The Quality Flower Shop reported good business for the Easter trade, both in plants and cut flowers.

The Alpha Florist had a good showing of rambler roses and hydrangeas, and a good display of bulbous stock.

A. F. Longren, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, was a visitor to Duluth during Easter week and reported business exceedingly good.

The Duluth Floral Co. had a busy week with plants and cut flowers and had an extra large number of corsages for delivery Sunday morning, which kept the staff busy most of Saturday night. J. E. S.

Lincoln, Neb.—Damage estimated at about $5,000 was done to florists' establishments March 23, as a result of a hail storm. Hiltner Bros. had the heaviest loss, about one-third of their glass being broken, besides heavy damage done to plants. Frey & Frey report a loss of $1,500. The Eiche Floral Co. escaped with little loss, the total being estimated at $200. F. G. Yule lost $600 worth of glass and the greenhouse at the state farm reported $300 loss.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, E. O. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.;
secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

RETAIL stores have a problem in securing sufficient help to handle the spring rush adequately.

THE Poole Implement & Seed Co., of Tacoma, Wash., has been experiencing a heavy demand for seeds this season.

SEEDSMEN can save a lot of paper and presswork by editing their mailing lists. It is the exceptional list which does not contain many dead names and duplicates.

CONFIDENCE has succeeded suspicion in the attitude of buyer toward seller in the business world and only those continue prosperously who develop that feeling by their transactions.

THE call for tomato seed is not expected to be so large this season as in other years, since the packers are closing their factories and growers curtailing production because of the present overstock of canned goods.

CATALOGUE houses have an interesting problem in the purchase of paper for 1921 books. Under present conditions orders must be placed months in advance of delivery and the price today is more than fifty per cent higher than a year ago. The question is, should one insure his needs by contracting now at market price time of delivery or take a chance by waiting?

WHEN 147 cases of valley arrived in Chicago badly sprouted as the result of delays in transit, H. N. Bruns refused to accept them and they were sold by the government for duty for a total sum of $59 to a farmer. Though the insurance covers Mr. Bruns' monetary loss, he is still the loser, for the stock was of excellent quality and such as is much in demand now.

THE seed warehouse of the Livingston Seed Co., at 59 East Chestnut street, Columbus, O., was damaged by fire early in the morning of April 1. There was no interruption in the routine of business, as all orders were handled from the retail store on High street and all stock was brought in from the warehouses on the farms at Kirkersville, O., and the True Blue trial grounds, near Columbus, O.

FREE SEEDS FIGHT AGAIN.

Once more the tussle is on to see whether economy and good sense will end the time-worn and joke-ridden custom of the congressional distribution of free seeds or whether the ancient prerogative of the federal legislator to send his constituents a few packets of beans, etc., will be continued. So little does this custom hold the serious attention of any but members of the lower house of Congress that its annual appearance evokes almost no serious argument, but merely treatment such as that in the editorial columns of the New York Tribune, which, says S. S. Skidelsky, of that city, will give the trade an idea of others' attitude toward this long-standing irritation of seedsmen:

THE FREE SEED COMEDY.

In all the high resolves at Washington to cut out superfluous expenditure the existence of one ancient eleemosynary custom seems to have been overlooked. The free seed distribution has been one of the cherished perquisites of members of Congress. The receipt, postage free, of a seed package is supposed to be the most magical reminder possible to a constituent that a benevolent government is still functioning on the banks of the Potomac. That one direct route to the heart of the voter is prized by many congressmen above all other methods of publicity. So Congress has gone on appropriating money in the agricultural bills for garden seeds, which, if they will not root in the soil of a pot or a bed in the back yard, are at least available as provender for the chickens.

Millions of words have been written in ridicule of the seed package fetish. But it has held its own, chiefly because of the human relation which it has helped to establish between a congressman and those who send him to Washington. Even in this year of herculean retrenchment the House of Representatives voted an appropriation of $239,416 for the seed handout. The Senate, which holds a little more aloof from petty electioneering devices than the House does, has stricken out this allowance. For that matter, the Senate became educated years ago beyond the theory that seeds are sure gatherers of votes. It has repeatedly challenged the House's efforts to continue the distribution. But the House has succeeded in conference committee in keeping alive the genial comedy of solicitude for the kitchen gardeners.

Now is the opportune occasion for displacing that comedy from the boards. The government needs dollars more than the amateur horticulturists or their poultry need seeds.

IMPLIED WARRANTY OF BULBS.

Cold Storage Bulbs Substituted.

A court decision of special interest to florists was handed down by the North Dakota Supreme court recently in the case of Ward vs. Valke, 176 Northwestern Reporter, 129. The decision is based upon provisions of the uniform sales act, which is in force in numerous states and which is in the main simply a codification of generally recognized legal principles, and covers an important point concerning implied warranties in the sale of goods.

The plaintiff, a wholesale dealer and importer of bulbs, received an order from the defendant, a florist at Minot, N. D., for certain bulbs. With a few exceptions the orders were filled, but the plaintiff failed to furnish an item of lily bulbs as ordered, some cold-storage bulbs being shipped as substitutes.

The plaintiff sued to recover a balance on account. The defendant filed a counterclaim based on asserted inferiority of the bulbs substituted for those ordered, claiming damages for the failure of the flower crop. The trial of the suit resulted in a judgment in favor of the defendant on his counterclaim and the plaintiff appealed to the North Dakota Supreme court, which has affirmed the judgment.

Warranty Questioned.

The principal argument made by the plaintiff's attorneys on appeal was that the damages claimed in the counterclaim were not recoverable, for the reason that the goods were sold without warranty. It appears that the orders which the plaintiff signed contained, among various reservations, the following sentence:

All bulbs and plants are carefully selected and packed, but on account of the goods having been imported and of many other circumstances entirely beyond our control, no guaranty of the character of the goods, sizes or flowering results is given under any circumstances.

On receipt of a shipment of formosum lily bulbs under the contract, the defendant complained that the stock was small and poor. In response, the plaintiff wrote that cold-storage giganteum bulbs would be shipped, suggesting that it was then too late for the flowering of formosum.

The court found that the cold-storage giganteum bulbs which were shipped as a substitute for the formosum were planted as soon as they were received and that the flower crop from them was a failure, due to the quality of the bulbs. Under these circumstances, the North Dakota Supreme court said:

When Implied.

"The question that arises from the foregoing facts is whether or not the plaintiff is liable for the breach of an implied warranty of the quality of the goods sold. The first contention is that the plaintiff is not liable by reason of the stipulation in the written order hereinbefore quoted. But it is clear from the testimony and the correspondence in evidence that the damages claimed did not result from a breach of warranty concerning any goods embraced within the written order. On the contrary, it appears that the claim is based upon the inferior quality of the bulbs sent as a substitute for an order which the plaintiff admitted was not properly filled by it. Section 15 of the uniform sales act provides that there is an implied warranty or condition as to quality or fitness 'where the buyer, expressly or by implication, makes known to the seller the particular purpose for which the goods are required and it appears that the buyer relies upon the seller's skill or judgment, whether he be the grower or manufacturer or not,' and 'where the goods are bought by description from a seller who deals in goods of that description, whether he be the grower or manufacturer or not.'

"Under the sales act the implied warranty arises out of the reliance of the buyer upon either the skill or the judgment of the seller, and the relative position of the parties, due principally to the character of the business or occupation of the seller, which was once deemed practically conclusive in determining the existence of an implied warranty, is not conclusive under the act.

Printed Warning Inadequate.

"It is also contended that a printed statement upon the various invoices sufficiently negated the implied warranties as a matter of law. The observation of Justice Holmes in a parallel case is a sufficient answer to this contention and we are content to adopt it as such:

"The general printed warning on the billhead that the defendant did not warrant seeds could have no effect unless it led to the inference that the old contract had been rescinded and a new one substituted by mutual agreement. Even if the bill had been receipted, it would not have excluded proof of warranty and, whether it was evidence of a re-warranty, we cannot say that the printed statement on the invoice operated to extinguish it as a matter of law.

Different Variety Substituted.

"Under the facts in the present case there can be little or no question that the purchaser relied upon the judgment of the seller in supplying bulbs that would take the place of the ones previously shipped, and which would be capable of producing a flower crop for the market intended to be supplied by the first order. It is apparent, too, that the seller exercised his judgment in this particular by changing from one species to another and shipping from a different source of supply, to wit, cold storage from Omaha, instead of Chicago."

It is to be specially noted that the court did not hold that there would have been an implied warranty of bulbs, had they been of the variety provided for in the orders. It is to be inferred from the opinion that the provision in the orders that the seller did not guarantee the character of the goods, flowering results, etc., would have been sufficient to protect the seller, had bulbs of the kind provided for by the orders been shipped. The decision rests on the fact that the original contract was not executed, the buyer trusting to the seller's judgment to substitute proper bulbs for the variety previously agreed upon. S.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE demand for perennials is reported to be exceptionally heavy this spring.

THE Amawalk Nursery, Eddyville, N. Y., was recently reorganized to carry on business with $140,000 capitalization.

THERE is little danger of overproduction so long as nurserymen are as short-handed as they are this spring.

ELABORATE nursery catalogues are not numerous this season; it has been found that they are costly and, under present conditions, more or less unnecessary.

THE Easter snow interrupted a period of fine weather that was of great help to nurserymen. Reports indicate that no serious damage will result unless the cold continues.

THE W. & T. Smith Co., one of the pioneers in the business in western New York, next season will celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the nursery at Geneva.

THAT the promotion work of the American Association of Nurserymen is working in the way it was hoped it would is well illustrated by the circumstance that Secretary John Watson received an unsolicited invitation to address the national organization of editors of agricultural papers in convention at Chicago April 6. Of course he accepted and told the editors all about the high aspirations of the nursery trade.

THE John W. Baker Nursery Co., at Higginson, Ark., has purchased 110 acres of land, one and one-half miles south of Searcy, Ark., and will install one of the most complete and modern nursery establishments in the south. The consideration for this acreage was $11,000. The officers of the company are: President, John W. Baker, of Higginson, Ark.; vice-president, C. E. Yingling, of Searcy, Ark.; secretary-treasurer, R. E. Baker, of Higginson. J. V. Smith, of Sherman, Tex., who has had twenty years' experience in this business, will have charge of the planting.

BAR ORIENTAL FRUIT STOCKS.

The Secretary of Agriculture has issued a quarantine, effective June 1, prohibiting the importation of fruit stocks, cuttings, scions and buds from Asia, Japan, the Philippine islands and Oceania. This quarantine was issued in response to a hearing held at the department in Washington, March 9, and is for the purpose of excluding from the United States diseases and insects which are known to infest such materials in various oriental countries. These pests include cankers, blister blights and rusts, the oriental fruit moth, the pear fruit borer and the apple moth.

This quarantine has little commercial significance, as the importations involved are limited in quantity and of minor importance. Such imported fruit stocks and cuttings have hitherto come chiefly from France or other European countries, and only recently have some requests for permits for the importation of such stock from Japan been received.

Enough is known of the insects and diseases which attack such trees in the orient, state government experts, to indicate the extreme undesirability of opening up general commercial importation of such articles. Furthermore, no adequate survey of these countries has been made and the diseases which are not known probably outnumber those which are known. It will still be possible under Quarantine No. 37, to which this action is an amendment, to import the articles prohibited, through the agency of the Department of Agriculture, and under full departmental disinfection and control to meet all legitimate needs for the introduction of any new varieties or strains of necessary stock which would otherwise not be available for horticulturists in this country.

PEONY DIVISIONS.

I have some peonies which are 7 and 8 years old and some of the roots seem to decay. They have not been cultivated for a year. I do not know where each variety is located; I bought the lot in about five acres. They will make six or eight divisions to the plant. Most of them are Marie Lemoine and festiva maxima. I think they need changing and I want to get them in healthy condition to sell or replant on my own place. I want to sell blooms if they open for Memorial day. I also should like to know about rooting or propagating and how it is done.

— M. F. J.—Va.

I would suggest that you give the peonies a top-dressing of a good kitchen garden fertilizer as they start to grow, at the rate of 1,200 pounds per acre, and harrow it in. If they have not been cultivated for a year, they cannot be in good condition and are probably weedy. I should keep the cultivator going among them right through the growing season. It will make a great difference in their growth. As they have been planted seven or eight years, it is time they were taken up, divided and replanted. In your state late September would be a good time to do this work. You can make the divisions large or small. If you want your plants to produce flowers rather than roots for sale, I would not make the divisions smaller than four or five eyes each. If possible plant on new land, giving it a dressing of well rotted manure before planting. If this is not done, use fertilizer in spring to give them a boost. C. W.

PAINESVILLE, O.

The busy season for nurserymen in this section is at full blast and, with help still scarce, the exceptionally fine weather has been a valuable asset.

R. E. Huntington has taken up his abode in Mentor, O., where he is manager of the Good Hold Farms.

Fred Braid has returned from England and is again in the employ of the Storrs & Harrison Co.

J. J. Hedderman, who has been growing asters and other annuals for the Cleveland market, intends to grow sweet peas as a specialty.

William Dwyer has an excellent stock of geraniums and other bedding plants.

The demand for perennials this spring is heavy and the smaller growers are having no trouble in disposing of their stock.

T. R. Norman & Sons intend to grow perennials more extensively the coming season and have taken much of the stock of Martin Kohankie, who dropped out of the race last fall.

The Wayside Gardens, Mentor, O., report business better than ever. This firm is rapidly coming into prominence.

Alva Smith, in charge of the perennial department of the Storrs & Harrison Co., has purchased a new Dodge car.

Wilson the Florist has purchased a new delivery truck. T. J. M.

The Market.

After a winter almost unprecedented in its drawbacks, Easter was ushered in with fine weather for shipping. The stock of lilies, orchids and Beauties, particularly, found a wider outlet than in any previous year. Everything that could be cut was sold without any difficulty whatever and the market was keen throughout the Dominion.

Wages have made another increase, but this is not begrudged when good work is the result. Labor is still scarce and the house problem is as irksome here as elsewhere.

Various Notes.

It is hardly likely that there will be any greenhouse building done in this neighborhood this season, owing to the high cost of materials, but the repair work will keep everybody busy from now on.

T. W. Duggan, manager of the Dale Estate, returned last week fully recovered, after a three weeks' stay in the hospital, where he underwent a serious operation. W. G. P.

WESTERLY, R. I.

Farquhar Smith has just finished his third greenhouse, which is almost double the capacity of the other two.

Munroe's Flower Shop reports a big sale of potted tulips and Easter lilies.

George L. Stillman is busy preparing for his spring deliveries and propagation of dahlias. He expects to have a larger field than ever this year.

Smith had a large supply of lilies and other potted plants. He has over 7,500 geranium plants for bedding purposes. W. H. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The Market.

It will be a long time before Easter, 1920, is forgotten by the florists and greenhouse men of Newport. They were simply deluged with demands. The majority had anticipated a big trade and had, as they thought, fully entrenched themselves with unusually large supplies, but they were left long before closing time Saturday night with depleted stocks. Prices ruled somewhat higher than usual, but this made no difference, as potted plants and blooms went as fast as they could be brought to the front. It was a clean-up never before experienced in this city.

Various Notes.

Eugene D. Hughes, 18 Holland street, is heavily booked for landscape work. "Biggest business I ever had," was the report of Oscar Schultz about his Easter trade.

Smith the Florist had all that he could do both at the store and at the greenhouses.

John D. Martin, 20 Narragansett avenue, says that the demand for ornamental trees and shrubs is unusually brisk.

Leikens, Inc., has leased a store at 110 Bellevue avenue for one year.
 W. H. M.

Chillicothe, O.—Huizinga & Bjorklund have succeeded Louis Elsass in business.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

FOUR HOUSES, ONE BOILER.

I should like to know the size of a boiler required to heat the following greenhouses to a temperature of 55 degrees at 4 degrees below zero: One house, 30x175 feet, with four feet to the gutter and thirteen feet to the ridge; one, 22x100 feet, with twelve feet to ridge and five feet of wall; one, 9x75 feet, with seven feet to ridge and five feet of wall; one, 28x130 feet, with fourteen feet to the ridge and seven feet of walls and four feet of glass. The first three houses have no glass in the walls.

I have a tubular boiler 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ x9 feet. It has a steam dome and thirty-two 3-inch flues. What size should the fire-box be and how high and what size should the chimney be? I want to use the hot water system.

What size of flows and how many 2-inch returns are required to heat these houses? All the houses are connected.
G. B. & S.—Ore.

To heat the four houses described to 55 degrees when it is 10 degrees below zero, about 4,000 square feet of radiation will be required and, if one boiler is to be used, it should have a rating of about 5,000 square feet of hot water radiation, with twelve square feet of grate.

The boiler described is, as surmised, only about one-half large enough. Such a boiler should have a grate about thirty inches square. It requires a chimney fourteen inches in diameter and thirty feet high.

For the house 30x175 feet, use five 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch overhead flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. In the house 22x100 feet, three 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch flows and nine 2-inch returns will suffice. One 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch flow and four 2-inch returns will answer for the house 9x75 feet. The house 28x130 feet, with four feet of glass in the side walls, should have five 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns.

FOR OVERHEAD HEATING.

I have a house 18x75 feet, with thirty-six inches of 14x18-inch glass in the side walls and 16x24-inch glass in the roof. The side wall is of boards and waterproof paper. I am using 3-inch boiler tubes. I have two flows and two returns on each side under the benches. I should like to carry some of the pipes overhead. Can I use the four pipes under the benches for returns? What size of pipe should I use for the flows and what distance should they be from the glass? I have a tubular boiler with a 28-inch grate. The pipes are all running uphill and all the returns are above the top of the boiler. I can keep a temperature of 60 degrees at 20 degrees upon each plate and the others on the purlins, or under the ridge. Run the flows at the purlins about one foot below the glass, or two feet from the glass if under the ridge. The boiler is amply large for a house 18x75 feet.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

Would you advise me as to the capacity of the boiler and the size and quantity of pipe necessary to heat three greenhouses, 15x60 feet each? The side and end walls are four feet high and it is ten feet to the ridge cap. One house, disconnected, has ten feet of cement wall; the others have walls of wood covered with asphalt. There are sheds at the north end of all the houses. At present we have flue heat in each, but wish to install hot water heat, with sufficient temperature to grow carnations. Can cut flowers be grown with flue heat? J. K. H.—Pa.

The hot water boiler for the three houses should have a rating of about 1,050 square feet of radiation for hard coal, or 1,200 square feet for bituminous coal, and the grates should be respectively twenty-four and twenty-six inches in diameter for most makes of heaters. This, however, is not uniform.

For radiation, use two 2½-inch flow pipes either on the plates or purlins and three 2-inch returns on exposed walls and two returns on each inside wall of each house. This calls for six 2½-inch flows and sixteen 2-inch returns for the three houses. While hot water or steam heat is by all means preferred, cut flowers may be grown successfully in greenhouses heated with flues.

Alliance, O.—A. C. Eastwood, of 15 South Arch avenue, has purchased the Barber greenhouses at Beloit, O. The purchase includes twenty acres of land, six greenhouses and all of the equipment. He intends to add other greenhouses to the range this summer.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

The Easter business was without question the best in the history of this city. The outstanding features of the business were the perfect weather conditions, shortage of good roses and the poor condition of the lily stock. Those who had their lilies timed to a nicety were given a severe setback by two hot days, the result being that the stock was wide open and without buds. This was true of plants as well as cut blooms.

One of the sights of Easter Saturday was the steady stream of people leaving the Sixth Street Market with plants and bouquets of assorted spring flowers of every description. If there was any doubt about the people being willing to buy if the price is right, this was an opportunity for disillusionment.

In the wholesale market lilies moved up to expectations, the warm weather bringing on plenty of stock. The prevailing price for the best stock was $25 per hundred. Sweet peas ranged in price from $1 to $2.50 per hundred and they were not up to standard. Early-flowering ones are about out and there is too much short-stemmed stock. Full-bloomed stock had to be used to fill orders. The lasting qualities of stock of this kind are a great hindrance at holiday time when stock must be bought a day or so ahead. Carnations brought $10 for the best stock and other grades sold according to quality. Violets were scarce; Governor Herrick was the most satisfactory.

The retailers all did a big business, which was foretold by the increased business of the earlier days preceding the rush. F. T. D. orders were in greater volume than ever.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Easter Business.

With the exception of carnations and some bulbous stock, Easter was a grand clean-up on everything. The sale of plants was unprecedented, everything salable finding a ready market. There was an abundance of stock to take care of all orders, but the heavy call for sweet peas and high-grade roses made these items short of demand. In plants, lilies, as usual, took the lead, with rambler roses and hydrangeas a close second.

"Say It with Flowers" is surely making an impression and few homes were without some flowers or plants at Easter.

The weather was not favorable for delivery, high winds and cold weather making it necessary to protect all plants and causing considerable additional work in getting out orders. With plenty of stock to meet the heavy demand, there is no doubt that this Easter surpassed any previous one here. Shipping trade was heavy, the call being mostly for roses, sweet peas and lilies. Greens were scarce. The southern asparagus arrived almost in worthless condition and the local stock was inadequate to meet the demand.

A. McDonald, who places the advertisements for the publicity committee, did some excellent work in the advertising line and, without a doubt, publicity was a great factor in stimulating the demand.

The stores all made beautiful displays in the downtown district. The windows of the Baumgarten Floral Co., J. M. Fox & Son, M. A. McKenny Co., Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., Maas & Co. and A. Currie & Co. had fine displays of genistas, roses, lilies and hydrangeas, all effectively arranged, which buyers could not resist.

At Gimble's the display was excellent and in great variety. P.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Easter business exceeded any holiday trade that was ever experienced by the florists of this city and vicinity. Everybody not only cleaned up, but many went shy. Lilies and violets were far short of the demand. Prices ruled about the same as last year, being slightly higher if anything.

Regular business has been somewhat better than for some time. With the return of the pleasant days, the demand for corsage bouquets has become heavy and the stores have been kept busy, violets and sweet peas being the favorites. Funeral work has also kept above the average.

Easter Business.

The Quidnick Greenhouses threw a bomb into the Easter camp by advertising lilies at 25 cents per bud and bloom retail, at the houses at Quidnick, R. I.

The Flower Growers' Store, at the Crown hotel, made a specialty of violets, handling several thousands of them.

The Boston Store handled 10,000 Easter lily plants at 50 cents per bud and bloom.

T. O'Connor had some of the finest lily plants in town from his own houses, some with ten and twelve buds and blooms. He had to close his doors early Saturday, so great was the demand.

William A. Bowers had fifteen extra employees. He reports a big business. He handled several hundred bougainvillea plants.

Johnston Bros., with an augmented force, required from Good Friday noon until Sunday noon, working practically all of both nights, to get their orders out.

Macnair had more than triple his usual large force at his two stores and all the deliveries he could get and then had to turn away customers.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

The market for last week was a record-breaking Easter rush. Favored with ideal weather for this time of year, the week opened Monday, March 29, with a rush and closed with a runaway. Although more stock could be had at the greenhouses, especially in the plant line, Sunday noon found all the shops sold out. Whether it was conservatism on the part of shop managers or not, every report is that big business was done and all are well satisfied.

In the cut flower line there was none too much stock and many more sweet peas and violets could have been sold. By all indications, the Easter corsages were an important item with the retail shops, and for these the most popular flower is the sweet pea. Roses were also short of the demand, the only plentiful flowers being daffodils and carnations. The carnations have been more than plentiful during the last two weeks.

SEATTLE NOTES.

on Easter lilies in good style and cleaned up considerably more stock than a year ago.

Growers are finding it difficult to maintain a large enough supply of small ferns, is the statement of C. S. MacManus, of the Madison Park Greenhouses. He states that the crop of lilies was all that could have been desired as to quality, despite some trouble in the early part of March with an inclination to bloom too soon.

A fine 2-color illustration of the lily house at the Hollywood Gardens was used as the cover piece for the Town Crier, a local weekly, Saturday, March 27. This was handled in green and white and made a fine showing. Additional motion pictures of the gardens and city store were taken during the week and Dr. Walter A. Moore expects to show these pictures shortly.

William Goldsberry, of Kenney's Home of Flowers, spent several days in Vancouver, B. C., last week on a combined business and pleasure trip. M.

Why Spend Money for Repairs

when through the use of concrete benches all such expenses are eliminated? Concrete improves appearances—the first cost is the last cost.

READY-SET CONCRETE BENCHES

are easily, quickly and inexpensively built—you can build them yourself. Send for information that will prove conclusively they are better and cheaper than wood.

Here's How C. & J. Hold Down the High Cost of Hose Holding

You know how the frames drink up water these spring days, when Old Sol begins to get his strength back.

It's water—water—water, all the time.

Men hauling and holding hose, just when you need everybody every minute to fill orders, and move plants, and repot, and transplant.

It's enough to frazzle one's nerves—and expense account—completely!

This hose-holding expense got so serious at the plant of Conard & Jones, at West Grove, Pa., that they decided to buy the Skinner System.

Now one man turns a valve and waters a whole string of frames at once. Waters them better. And then goes on with his other work too, because the Skinner System of rain when you want it, works by itself.

You can have a line like the one above working in a couple of hours after you receive it.

Send for our new book; tells all about the Skinner System.

Federal Elastic Cement

"The glazing cement without an equal" to tighten your greenhouse

Federal Elastic Cement is put up in all sizes from 1 gallon cans to barrels—one gallon is equal to three gallons of putty. It is cheaper than putty and will last at least from two to five times as long. It holds the glass, thus reducing breakage. These are just a few of the many reasons why you should use Federal Elastic Cement for your glazing work. Placing your order now assures you of having your supply when needed.

Our advice on all glazing problems is free to you.

HERE'S A GOOD ONE

Everyone who grows single Pompons knows Mrs. E. D. Godfrey. It has been the best late pink variety. Now comes a sport of Godfrey, its name is:

ANNABEL

It is a sturdier grower with exceptionally good foliage. Has long stiff stems, well branched. Have cut stems with seventeen flowers and buds running up to 3 1/2 in. across. Unusually good keeper in bench or when cut. Color, a beautiful cerise, tending toward lavender. Flowers of anemone type with several rows of petals, and yellow center. Season of blooming, Thanksgiving to Christmas. It is better than parent or any other Pompon and will bring more money. It is later than any variety we know of. 2 1/2-in. plants for delivery April and later. Orders filled in rotation. Order early. Sold under agreement that you dispose of no stock to any person until 1922. Prices, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000. Rooted cuttings, $15.00 per 100, delivery May and later. Strong plants and careful packing guaranteed.

DAHLIAS

Mr. Florist, grow Dahlias for profit. Be sure you have the right varieties, then you will be sure to get the profit. We can offer you a hundred varieties of our own growing, but offer you here 7 varieties that will assure you profit. Each variety produces freely, high quality, perfect, long stem, good keeping cut flowers, absolutely true. Last year we grew 2½ acres of these 7 varieties alone for our local trade and did not have enough. This year we will grow 5 acres of these 7 varieties. Arabella, show, gold, lavender with old rose sheen.

Jack Rose, decorative, rich velvety crimson. Sylvia, decorative, rich pink, white center. Strong field divisions, $12.00 per 100; sample order of 12 each of these 8 varieties at 100 rate.

Delice, decorative, glowing rose pink. Mina Burgle, decorative, dark scarlet. These 2 varieties, strong field divisions, each 25c. doz., $2.50.

Golden Gate, cactus, gold, there is no better cactus Dahlia grown, field divisions, 35c each, doz., $3.50.

Neff's White, show, there is no better white cut flower Dahlia grown. Long stiff stem, free and perfect, likes rich soil and a little shade. You will do well to try this variety and try it freely. Each 35c, $4.00 per doz. Cash with order. Our list of other varieties ready March 1st.

ROSE AND CARNATION RAISING.

Please describe the usual methods which rose and carnation hybridizers use to try out their seedlings, in order to weed out the worthless ones.
J. D.—Pa.

The usual custom with rose and carnation raisers is to plant some of each new variety which shows merit in beds or benches for two or three seasons. With both flowers, it is possible to eliminate a large number as soon as they flower. Undesirable colors, poor calyxes (in the case of carnations), weakness of stems, lack of productivity and poor foliage are to be considered. It is not possible until after two or three years of fair trial to determine whether or not seedlings will be of value. Sometimes varieties which seem unlikely to be valuable develop good qualities as they are further tested, and vice versa. Careful selection of cuttings is also of great value.
C. W.

Tampa, Fla.—The Knull Floral Co. is developing a 5-acre tract near here and has 3,000 rose bushes on it now. At Nebraska and Twenty-seventh avenues the company has five glass houses and 100,000 square feet of slat houses, cold-frames and open beds, covering altogether fourteen city lots.

The Center Distance Between Columns In This 78-Foot House Is Wider Than the Widest Houses Used To Be

WELL do I remember going into one of our first 40-foot houses on a winter's moonlight night, and the owner calling attention to how wonderfully light it was.

Early the next morning when we again visited it, the air was so noticeably fresh in contrast to his narrow 28-foot houses. Comparison of the coal used, proved the 40-foot one took practically no more to heat it than the narrow one.

That 40-foot house would just about fit in nicely between the two columns of this 78-foot house of Willig's, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

If the 40-foot house was so much lighter and heated so economically, it's plain to be seen that this 78-foot one had proportionate advantages over the 40.

Consider the reason for the increase in lightness. The roof framing members are so far from the plants that any shade they do cast is so thinned out, or diffused, that its effect on the plants is next to nothing.

When it comes to the heating, the big volume of air, when once it's warmed up, holds the heat and acts as an insulation against sudden changes of temperature. Willig says it will protect the plants for over an hour against even a severe drop in the mercury.

When it comes to the ventilation, growers long ago found they could open a ridge vent practically any day without injury. The freshness and buoyancy of the air in such houses is one of the vital reasons for the vigor of the plants and quantity and quality of blooms.

As for working these big houses, it's as plain as the nose on your face that it costs less than running in and out and up and down several small ones.

When it comes to proportionate cost of the first building and the after cost of keeping it up, the big house covering the same ground space has the small houses backed off the boards. There is simply no comparison.

All of these facts and figures, of course, apply to our iron frame construction. In the next two ads we will tell you some direct construction points about this 78-footer.

Be on the lookout for them. And remember that we go anywhere for business.

Is the wide house best?

The AGMCO has had three modern types of greenhouses built in Pana, Ill., where the AGMCO factory is located.

There is the wide detached house; the medium width detached house; and the connected range style.

ALL are planted to roses.

ALL are subject to the same conditions of weather and of ventilation, and,

ALL have the same heating plants.

ALL are operated for ONE PURPOSE and on ONE SET of principles.

Experiments are conducted in these houses on a basis of known facts. Here we have the whole subject of greenhouse performance right under one microscope, as it were.

A daily record is kept of every important detail of performance: the heat; the coal pile; the ventilation; the quality and quantity of stock grown under the varying weather conditions.

At the end of a year of thorough, scientific tests, all these data are carefully tabulated.

And for what purpose?

To enable the AGMCO to answer with facts a lot of questions that the greenhouse world has heretofore been answering with guesses. With the AGMCO there will be no necessity of making allowances for variations in conditions from one point to another, for different growers, for different heating, different builders, etc. The AGMCO will know what every type of greenhouse can do under identical circumstances and conditions.

AGMCO acts have always been based on facts, but now AGMCO acts will be based on scientific data.

And now, Mr. Grower, all this investment of money and time has but one object——your advantage.

Our All Steel Greenhouse Is a Lasting Investment

In 1914 we furnished Mr. Neil Nielsen of Mankato, Minnesota, two of our all steel greenhouses, 34 x 240 ft., and now he has ordered another house, to be attached to the present ones.

Mr. Nielsen paid more money for these all steel greenhouses than the ordinary pipe frame style would have cost him, but in the long run he will be money ahead, for they are much stronger and a better permanent investment.

One Good Thing Leads to Another, says Bartleson, of Shawnee, Kansas

Shawnee is about a half hour's ride from Kansas City. A ride long to be remembered for its beauty, especially if taken on a crisp, sunny fall morning, as I did.

Bartleson is one of those men looking further forward. He is establishing a business for his two sons, who soon will be through their studies and back home, keen to do something to make a noise like money in the bank.

With this in mind, Bartleson put up a couple of our pipe frame houses and started growing vegetables.

Mrs. Bartleson is one of those wiry, wide-awake women who takes hold and does her bit, and then some.

In fact, she told me the things I have just told you.

To which she added, "We are going to build more of your houses soon. My husband says 'one good thing leads to another.'"

Which, after all, is about as good a thing as we could wish to be said of our houses.

If you want to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

PANDANUS VEITCHII

Well colored plants.

6-inch pots, $24 and $30 per doz.

7-inch pots, $3.50 and $4 each; $36 per doz.

GARDENIA VEITCHII

We have an exceptionally fine stock for growing on and for spring flowering.

2½-inch pots, $15 per 100, $140 per 1000.

4-inch pots, in bud, $9 per doz.

6-inch pots, $18 per doz.

PHOENIX ROEBELENI

8-inch tubs, $5 each.

10-inch tubs, $10 and $12.50 each.

(In Variety.)

We are the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country; in fact, we are headquarters for them.

Nephrolepis Verona

Makes a good plant in all sizes. Much finer frond than any crested sort outside of N. Smithii. The fronds are carried on a heavy, wiry stem. We consider it one of the best of the newer introductions.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $9 and $12 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, Dwarf

This is a dwarf form of the old Boston Fern, same character, form and graceful habit.

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $12 per doz.

8-inch pots, $30 and $36 per doz.

11-inch tubs, $5 and $6 each.

Nephrolepis Scottii

Our stock is in superb condition.

2½-inch stock, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

4-inch stock, $35 per 100.

6-inch stock, heavy, $12 per doz.

8-inch ¾ pots, heavy, $24 per doz.

10-inch ¾ pots, $36 per doz.

11-inch tubs, $4 and $5 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantisima Compacta

A dwarf, compact form of Nephrolepis Elegantisima, each plant making an ideal shape.

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

Nephrolepis Smithii

The greatly improved Amerpohlil. It is a compact form, much finer than Amerpohlil, and does not break down in the center. The fronds are carried on wiry stems. This variety will have a wonderful sale up to a 6-inch pot, being particularly showy for basket work.

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

Teddy, Junior

A Grand, New Dwarf Fern

Fine young plants from 2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $100 per 100.

7-inch pots, $18 per doz.

8-inch pots, $2 each.

11-inch tubs, $5 and $6 each.

Nephrolepis Harrisii or Roosevelt

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $100 per 100.

8-inch pots, $2 each.

10-inch pots, $3 each.

11-inch tubs, $5 and $6 each.

ADIANTUM GLORIOSA

Same as Farleyense, but as hardy as Nephrolepis.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

We are booking orders for both rooted cuttings and pot stock for delivery now and later. Our stock is perfectly healthy and absolutely free of mildew or other diseases.

ENGLISH IVIES

We have a large stock of both the large and small-leaf varieties for growing on.

2½-inch pots, 2 and 3 runners to pot, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000.

CYCLAMENS

We are growing 100,000 plants this year and our stock was never in finer condition at this time of year. Grown from the best seed obtainable. Home-grown seed plants from the best German strain. Booking orders for May and later delivery. Suggest placing orders at once to insure prompt delivery.

2½-inch pots, equal to 3-inch stock, $20 per 100, $175 per 1000.

BEGONIA MRS. PATTEN

Dark Sport of Chatelaine.

Blooms continually the entire year.

4-inch pots, $6 per doz., $40 per 100.

6-inch pots, $12 per doz., $90 per 100.

SPRING PLANTS

We will offer this year an immense stock of Spring plants, all of the same high quality as other Craig Specialties.

Geraniums, strong plants, 8 varieties, 4-inch pots, $18 per 100.

Verbenas, best strain, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Snapdragon, Sutton's Prize Winners, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Sweet Alyssum, Little Gem, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Lobelia, double, Kathleen Mallard, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Phlox Drummondii, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Thunbergia, Black-Eyed Susan, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Ageratum, Little Blue Star, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Ageratum, Stella Gurney, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Begonias, Luminosa, red; Prima Donna, pink, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Nasturtiums, yellow and red, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Celosia, Sutton's large asst., Thompsonii and Plumosa, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Torenia, blue, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Petunia, California Giant, 4-inch pots, $18 per 100.

Petunia, double, Dreer's, 4-inch pots, $18 per 100.

Heliotropes, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Petunia, Rosy Morn, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Petunia Star, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 and $8 per 100.

Coleus, five varieties, 2½ and 3-inch pots, $6 per 100, $50 per 1000.

Coleus, large-leaf seedlings, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Coleus, Brilliancy, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Alternanthera, red and yellow, 2½-inch pots, $5 per 100.

Cannas, eight varieties, asst., 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Cannas, King Humbert, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Lantanas, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Fuchsias, heavy, 4-inch pots, $15 per 100.

Periwinkle, variegated, heavy, 2½-inch pots, $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $20 per 100.

Salvia, America, 2½-inch pots, $8 per 100; 4-inch pots, $12 per 100.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to the very great increase in price of all materials used in packing of plants, we find it necessary to make a small charge for same, as follows, much lower than the percentage plan:

Full size cases.....$1.50 each

Three-quarter size cases..... 1.00 each

Small size cases..... .50 each

Would suggest taking plants in paper pots whenever possible. It is a big saving in both packing and express charges.

New Sweet Pea Mrs. Rudolph Nagel

The Sweet Pea Grower who is no longer content with a "mere white," who has been dreaming of a variety that would come into the market early, bloom continuously throughout the winter and late into the spring season, should by all means invest in an ounce or more of Mrs. Rudolph Nagel, the new black-seeded White Sweet Pea, originated and grown for the past two years by Mr. Rudolph Nagel, of Lancaster, Pa.

The concensus of opinion of growers who "watched it grow" is that Mrs. Rudolph Nagel is without a doubt the best variety in sight today.

In a letter under date of March 29, 1920, the Leo Niessen Co., the well known commission house of Philadelphia, writes us as follows:

S. S. Skidelsky & Co., 50 Park Place,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Referring to the new White Sweet Pea introduced by Mr. Rudolph Nagel, of Lancaster, Pa., would say that we have handled the flowers this and last season, and we consider this variety has many good qualities.

It blooms early in the season; in fact, Mr. Nagel was cutting good Peas in November. They bloomed all winter and the same vines are still producing good flowers at this date. We do not hesitate to recommend this Pea very highly. Respectfully yours,

THE L. O. NIESSEN CO. (signed) A. A. Niessen.

In its issue of February 21, 1920, the Florists' Exchange has this to say about Mrs. Rudolph Nagel:

"The flowers arrived in good condition and kept well after they arrived; in fact, unusually well. These new Sweet Peas are of the Spencer type, very large, and the long, stout stems carry three and four blooms each. The white variety looks to us like a desirable addition to the present list of Sweet Peas of that color."

A Certificate of Merit was awarded this variety by the expert Sweet Pea judges at the recent International Flower Show held in New York.

So, lest you forget, we say again, invest in an ounce or more of Mrs. Rudolph Nagel, the Black-Seeded White Sweet Pea.

Begonia Pride of New Castle

Here is another meritorious acquisition, that should and undoubtedly will command the attention of the plant grower, namely, the New Begonia Pride of New Castle, a genuine red sport of the well known Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine. Those who grow Begonia Chatelaine know full well its merits. A real red Chatelaine as a Christmas plant is especially desirable.

WINDOW BOXES WIN BUSINESS

With the arrival of warm weather comes another opportunity for the florist, that of filling window and porch boxes. In this lies the means of adding to present profits and also of developing a dependence upon flowers that will redound to florists' advantage in other sales when winter returns.

WINDOW boxes confer their favors alike on the out-looker and the onlooker. Window sills are the thresholds of the doorways through which those who live or work within look at the outside world; because of the approximate height of window boxes, the eye easily rests on them before going farther. In a dwelling, the family gains constant pleasure from watching the growth of the plants and caring for them. In an office building, the wheels of business turn more smoothly when there are flowers blooming just a few feet away. In a factory, the strain of speeded-up work is lightened and the wearisome monotony is brightened by flowers in boxes where the workers can readily enjoy them.

On the other hand, the passer-by outside is attracted by any building which has the touch of life and beauty given to it by window boxes. They provide an element of finish, of distinction, to home, store, factory and office building alike. If used to adorn a home set in carefully landscaped surroundings, they serve to connect the house with its environment and so enhance the total decorative effect.

Presenting Plants.

In the case of dwellings particularly, the same principles would apply to porch boxes, which add both to the livableness of the house for those who inhabit it and to its pleasingness as a part of other people's scenery. Carrying the idea still further, plant boxes for the railings or side walls of bridges, especially of concrete bridges, and concrete vases for the safety islands between the streams of street traffic are additional ways in which plants, whether blooming or foliage, can be attractively presented to the public.

Clearly there is a large possible demand, which florists may profitably cultivate. Whether they simply sell the plants or seeds and the soil and fertilizers, or make up the box and deliver it complete, it will not only be worth while doing in itself, but will stimulate a love for flowers and a dependence upon them which will lead to an increase in the cut flower trade. The retailer may assume a continual charge over the boxes of a customer, changing the plants with the season and making any recommendations for their care which periodic inspections may suggest.

Developing the Demand.

Public interest in the increased use of window boxes may be aroused in at least three ways. Newspapers have successfully carried out window gardening contests, providing additional publicity for both themselves and the boxes. In most cities there are improvement societies, which may organize a home gardening campaign. Florists' clubs themselves can either include the idea of window decoration in their flower weeks or undertake separate campaigns to stimulate that particular demand. And, of course, the individual retailer may have, in addition, his own line of attack on the empty window sills of his customers.

A letter from Ohio, called forth by a paragraph on the editorial page of The Review for March 25, says: "In this town of 6,000 I don't think there are a half-dozen window boxes. In another town in which I lived, almost every other house had a porch box and many had vases on the lawns. How can I get them started here and how can I learn to fill the boxes properly?" The preceding paragraph offered a few suggestions in answer to the first part of that question. Whether the florist fills the box himself or simply supplies the prospective gardener with plants, soil, fertilizer and advice, he will wish to know what the proposed location of the boxes is to be, in order that the plants may be properly chosen and the boxes appropriately made.

The Box Itself.

Window boxes may be bought ready-made, with pattern tiling or made of highly finished wood and supported by fancy brackets, but a strong pine box of the necessary length, from ten to twelve inches wide and at least six inches deep, will serve quite satisfactorily, if painted a suitable color. After the plants are growing well, especially if vines or drooping plants are included, the appearance of the box itself will make little difference. Good drainage is particularly desirable and may be provided by

After the plants are growing well, especially if vines or drooping plants are included, the appearance of the box itself will make little difference. Good drainage is particularly desirable and may be provided by boring several half-inch holes in the bottom of the box and covering them with coal cinders, gravel-stones or pieces of broken pots, placed with the convex side up. This arrangement will allow water to escape, but retain the soil. If the box is to be located where water dripping from it will be objectionable, it may be set in a galvanized drip pan, which should be about two inches wider than the box. The box should be raised from the bottom of the pan by means of cleats, so as to permit free drainage.

Because of the restricted space in these boxes, the soil should be one which is quite rich in plant food, yet one which neither packs hard when watered nor contracts much when dry, but remains porous and springy. Such soil may be made by mixing two parts of garden loam, one part of leaf-mold or wood-earth and one part of sand, with the addition of well decayed manure, preferably cow manure, at the rate of one peck to two bushels of soil. About one inch of space should be left between the surface of the soil and the top of the box, to afford room for watering, which should be done as late in the day as possible. After the plants have filled the box with roots, more plant food must be worked into the soil; a weekly watering with dilute liquid manure is best, but a light coating of bone meal, a thicker layer of well rotted manure, or an application of a complete commercial fertilizer will prove adequate.

Potting for Seasonal Changes.

When plants grow together so compactly as is the case in window boxes, if one plant dies the desired effect is lost and it is practically impossible to dig it out without injuring the other plants or to cut it out without leaving a space. This difficulty may be overcome by using pot-grown plants, setting the pots containing the plants in the boxes and filling in around the pots with earth or moss; with that method, any one plant can be removed and another substituted without danger of injury to the others. This also makes it possible to change quickly from winter material to spring-flowering bulbs, from bulbs to pansies, then to summer-blooming annuals and, once more, to autumn-blooming plants, or to make whatever other changes may be desired. With few exceptions, a 4-inch or 5-inch pot is sufficiently large for this purpose. In using potted plants in this way, it is best to have two or three inches of rich earth in the bottom of the box, on which to place the pots; the roots of the plants will escape through the hole in the bottom of the pot and find sufficient food for their development.

In selecting the plants, attention must be paid to the exposure of the windows, the color of the walls and the general style of the exterior decoration. The plants should harmonize, not only with one another, but with the color of the building; if that is a neutral tint, like the gray of concrete or of most stucco, less care will be required than if it has a distinct character, like the red of brick.

Selection of Plants.

If the exposure is northern, the choice is practically confined to foliage plants; these will be of the more delicate types than would be desirable if the boxes were to be in full sunlight. For sun-loving plants, geraniums, coleus, achyr-anthes, Paris daisies and double petunias may be used, or, if more display is desired, crotons, colored-leaved dracænas, acalyphas, aspidistras or small palms. Possible low-growing plants for the front of the box are the dwarf white-leaved geranium, Madame Salleroi; the golden feverfew, lobelia, sweet alyssum and the white-leaved cineraria. Excellent drooping vines are the variegated-leaved vinca, nasturtiums, tradescantias and German ivy. For window boxes in shady locations, vigorous-growing ferns, like the nephrolepis, a few of the pteris and the hardiest of the adian-tums; narrow-leaved dracænas; grevilleas, and Rex begonias are good plants to use.

No set of rules can be given for the combining of these or other suitable plants into appropriate box groups, but, as a suggestion, the following arrangements of common plants are enumerated:

FOR SUNNY LOCATION.

1. Vinca major—front.
Petunia—filler.
Ageratum—filler.
Vinca rosea—points.
2. English ivy—front.

3. German ivy—front.
Asparagus Sprengeri—front.

After Summer Comes Winter.

The matter of seasonal changes in the plants has already been touched upon. In the fall evergreens may be substituted for the summer selection and with these early spring-flowering bulbs may be planted, such as tulips, daffodils, crocuses and snowdrops. The winter group may include a choice of small conifers, broad-leaved evergreens, small Irish junipers, low-growing junipers, arbor-vitæ and young trees of spruce, hemlock or pine. Of broad-leaved evergreens, dwarf box, mahonia, Evonymus radicans and pachysandra or Vinca minor are good. To relieve the somber effect of the dense green, small shrubs bearing bright-colored fruits may be introduced, such as dwarfed plants of Berberis Thunbergii, with its bright scarlet berries borne along the gracefully bending branches. Privets, either Ligustrum vulgare or L. Regelianum, are good for berries, both bearing clusters of blue-black fruits, which contrast well with the green of the conifers or the reds of the barberry; these fruits are held through the winter without change of color. Hardy strains of English ivy or drooping plants of Evonymus radicans may be used to hide the boxes in winter. Evergreens used for winter may be arranged to produce a hedge-like appearance or some points may be introduced either at the ends or in the center or at both ends and center. Customers to whom the prospect of all-the-year-around window boxes is presented are likely to invest more heavily than if they were expecting to have only some flowers for the summer.

Flowers for Factory Workers.

How a Firm of Florists Sets an Example in Window Boxes for Customers to Follow."

New Arrangements.

The plant arrangements for filling window boxes suggested in this article are those which have found wide favor with florists who do this work and are therefore likely to be of most value to others who wish to undertake it. As in other things, however, there is a constant search for something new. So florists who have tried out new arrangements which have been successful will contribute to fellow tradesmen's success in other towns if they send suggestions on this score to be printed in these columns. In this interchange of novel ideas comes the trade's rapid advancement.

BALDWIN ON BUILDING.

"The building outlook, especially in the west and in the middle states, is promising. The east is more conservative and the high prices of building materials are not looked upon as being an incentive to erect ranges. The western growers are looking to the present prosperity, good prices and brisk demand to compensate them for the cost of building and labor and are willing to take a chance on the cost of construction becoming lower," is the opinion of Harry Baldwin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., salesman in the Boston office of the Lord & Burnham Co.

His observations lead him to think that there will be no let-up in the erection of houses and, although no one knows whether building costs will go higher or come down, the growers are willing to take a risk.

Mr. Baldwin, in addition to his position with the greenhouse builders, is a manufacturer of lath sun blinds that work with ropes and pulleys. These blinds, it is claimed, will reduce the heat by 10 degrees and are especially valuable to orchid growers. The A. C. Burrage estate, at Beverly Farms, Mass., gave him an order for 11,000 of the blinds. He also operates a greenhouse, with the aid of a brother. He, with his brother, came from Bradford, Yorkshire, England. E. E. R.

Lompoc, Cal.—A. C. Zvolanek has taken his sons into partnership and the firm is to be known hereafter as Ant. C. Zvolanek & Sons.

Dubuque, Ia.—W. A. Harkett had the best Easter trade in the history of the business, although handicapped with freezing weather and a car strike. It was almost impossible to make deliveries at first, but he succeeded in spite of the conditions.

The box should be raised from the bottom of the pan by means of cleats, so as to permit free drainage.

Because of the restricted space in these boxes, the soil should be one which is quite rich in plant food, yet one which neither packs hard when watered nor contracts much when dry, but remains porous and springy. Such soil may be made by mixing two parts of garden loam, one part of leaf-mold or wood-earth and one part of sand, with the addition of well decayed manure, preferably cow manure, at the rate of one peck to two bushels of soil. About one inch of space should be left between the surface of the soil and the top of the box, to afford room for watering, which should be done as late in the day as possible. After the plants have filled the box with roots, more plant food must be worked into the soil; a weekly watering with dilute liquid manure is best, but a light coating of bone meal, a thicker layer of well rotted manure, or an application of a complete commercial fertilizer will prove adequate.

Potting for Seasonal Changes.

When plants grow together so compactly as is the case in window boxes, if one plant dies the desired effect is lost and it is practically impossible to dig it out without injuring the other plants or to cut it out without leaving a space. This difficulty may be overcome by using pot-grown plants, setting the pots containing the plants in the boxes and filling in around the pots with earth or moss; with that method, any one plant can be removed and another substituted without danger of injury to the others. This also makes it possible to change quickly from winter material to spring-flowering bulbs, from bulbs to pansies, then to summer-blooming annuals and, once more, to autumn-blooming plants, or to make whatever other changes may be desired. With few exceptions, a 4-inch or 5-inch pot is sufficiently large for this purpose. In using potted plants in this way, it is best to have two or three inches of rich earth in the bottom of the box, on which to place the pots; the roots of the plants will escape through the hole in the bottom of the pot and find sufficient food for their development.

In selecting the plants, attention must be paid to the exposure of the windows, the color of the walls and the general style of the exterior decoration. The plants should harmonize, not only with one another, but with the color of the building; if that is a neutral tint, like the gray of concrete or of most stucco, less care will be required than if it has a distinct character, like the red of brick.

Selection of Plants.

If the exposure is northern, the choice is practically confined to foliage plants; these will be of the more delicate types than would be desirable if the boxes were to be in full sunlight. For sun-loving plants, geraniums, coleus, achyr-anthes, Paris daisies and double petunias may be used, or, if more display is desired, crotons, colored-leaved dracaenas, acalyphas, aspidistras or small palms. Possible low-growing plants for the front of the box are the dwarf white-leaved geranium, Madame Salleron; the golden feverfew, lobelia, sweet alyssum and the white-leaved cineraria. Excellent drooping vines are the variegated-leaved vinca, nasturtiums, tradescantias and German ivy. For window boxes in shady locations, vigorous-growing ferns, like the nephrolepis, a few of the pteris and the hardiest of the adian-tums; narrow-leaved dracaenas; grasses, and Rex begonias are good plants to use.

No set of rules can be given for combining of these or other suitable plants into appropriate box groupings, but, as a suggestion, the following arrangements of common plants are enumerated:

FOR SUNNY LOCATION.

1. Vinca major—front.
Petunia—filler.
Ageratum—filler.
Vinca rosea—points.
2. English ivy—front.
Asparagus Sprengeri—front.
Geranium—filler.
Lantana—filler.
Hibiscus—points.
3. Wandering Jew—front.
Asparagus Sprengeri—front.
Verbena—filler.
Petunia—filler.
Marigold—filler.
Croton—filler.

FOR SHADY LOCATION.

1. Asparagus Sprengeri—front.
Dracena terminalis—points.
Boston fern—filler.
2. English ivy—front.
Coleus—filler.
Boston fern—filler.
Pandanus Veitchii—points.
3. German ivy—front.
Asparagus Sprengeri—front.
Hibiscus—points.
Whitmanii fern—filler.
Croton—filler.

After Summer Comes Winter.

The matter of seasonal changes in plants has already been touched upon. In the fall evergreens may be substituted for the summer selection and with these early spring-flowering bulbs may be planted, such as tulips, daffodils, crocuses and snowdrops. The winter group may include a choice of small conifers, broad-leaved evergreens, small Irish junipers, low-growing junipers, box-vitae and young trees of spruce, hemlock or pine. Of broad-leaved evergreens, dwarf box, mahonia, Evonymus radicans and pachysandra or Vinca minor are good. To relieve the somber effect of the dense green, small shrubs bearing bright-colored fruits may be introduced, such as dwarfed plants of Berberis Thunbergii, with its bright scarlet berries borne along the gracefully bending branches. Privets, either Ligustrum vulgare or L. Regelianum, are good for berries, both bearing clusters of blue or black fruits, which contrast well with the green of the conifers or the reds of the barberry; these fruits are held through the winter without change of color. Hardy strains of English ivy or drooping plants of Evonymus radicans may be used to hide the boxes in winter. Evergreens used for winter may be arranged to produce a hedge-like appearance or some points may be introduced either at the ends or in the center or at both ends and center. Customers t whom the prospect of all-the-year-around window boxes is presented are likely to invest more heavily than if they were expecting to have only some flowers for the summer.

New Arrangements.

The plant arrangements for filling window boxes suggested in this article are those which have found wide favor with florists who do this work and are therefore likely to be of most value to others who wish to undertake it. As in other things, however, there is a constant search for something new. So florists who have tried out new arrangements which have been successful will attribute to fellow tradesmen's success in other towns if they send suggestions on this score to be printed in these columns. In this interchange of novel ideas comes the trade's rapid advancement.

BALDWIN ON BUILDING.

The building outlook, especially in the west and in the middle states, is promising. The east is more conservative and the high prices of building materials are not looked upon as being an incentive to erect ranges. The western growers are looking to the present prosperity, good prices and brisk demand to compensate them for the cost of building and labor and are willing to take a chance on the cost of construction coming lower," is the opinion of Harry Baldwin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., salesman in the Boston office of the Lord & Burnham Co.

His observations lead him to think that there will be no let-up in the erection of houses and, although no one knows whether building costs will go higher or come down, the growers are willing to take a risk.

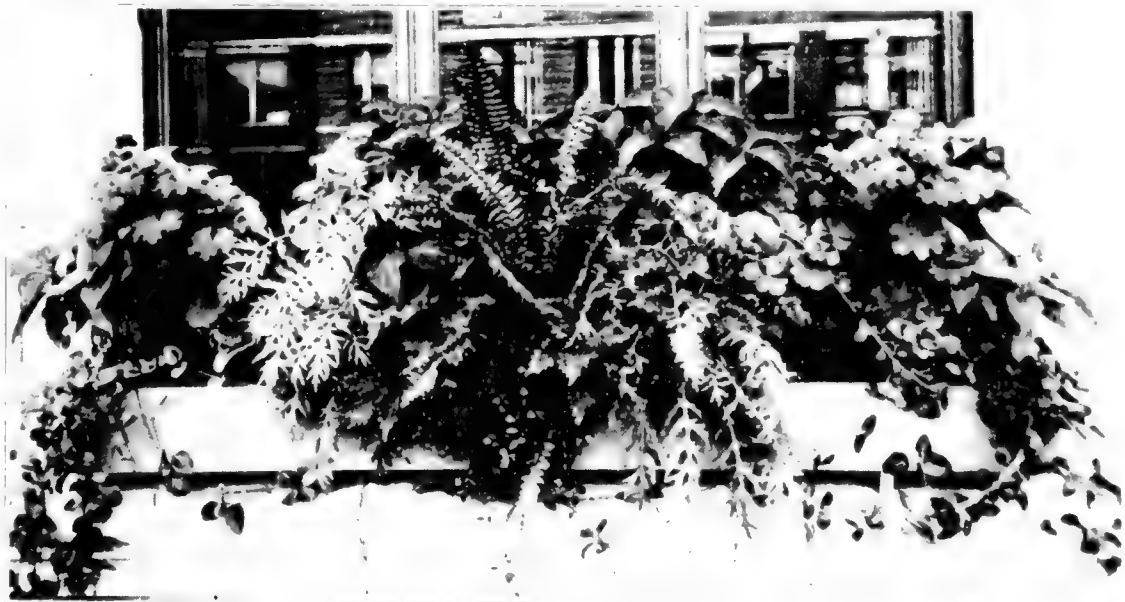

Mr. Baldwin, in addition to his position with the greenhouse builders, is a manufacturer of lath sun blinds that work with ropes and pulleys. These blinds, it is claimed, will reduce the heat by 10 degrees and are especially valuable to orchid growers. The A. C. Burrage estate, at Beverly Farms, Mass., gave him an order for 11,000 of the blinds. He also operates a greenhouse, with the aid of a brother. He, with his brother, came from Bradford, Yorkshire, England.

TROUBLE WITH BEACONS.

I am sending you a Beacon carnation plant and some of the soil that it grows in. I have a large number of plants in the same condition as this one and should like to know if it is fungous disease working on the plants and if there is a fungus in the soil. The large majority of the plants are doing well, but here and there one is like the sample. Is Beacon more subject to disease than Nebraska?

Is Alice a better pink than Cottage Maid?
D. F. C.—Colo.

The Beacon plant and the sample of soil failed to arrive, so we are unable to give you any information on the subject in question. If you will send another sample, I shall be glad to examine it.

Beacon is not more subject to disease than is Nebraska; in fact, I think it is healthier. Nebraska seems susceptible to branch-rot during the winter, while Beacon's greatest fault is its tendency to split the calyx after the holidays.

Alice and Cottage Maid have both been tried and found wanting. Alice does not keep after being cut. Cottage Maid goes off color in the winter, but is beautiful during the fall and spring. It is also shy in blooming.

EELWORM ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending you a specimen of our carnations, which seem to be affected with the yellows. The plants started out well after coming in from the field, but since November they have hardly done any growing. We have tried all the spraying solutions, but they do not seem to be able to check the trouble. It is also in the young stock, which we had difficulty in striking. Could you give us any information concerning this trouble?
J. W. H.—Mich.

Your description of the behavior of your plants suggests, more than anything else, the presence of eelworm. Dig up one of these affected plants, wash the soil from the roots and see if they are not matted with a number of small nodules or globular knots. If so, you would do well to discard the entire lot and purchase new stock. The soil you are using may be infested with these nematodes and you should procure your next year's soil from a different location.
A. F. J. B.

CHECKING LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending you specimens of Nebraska and Enchantress carnations and a sample of the soil in which I planted them about three weeks ago. The Nebraska is one that I rooted, having received about 2,000 unrooted cuttings November 19, 1919. These cuttings were on the road five days from the time of shipment and I only succeeded in rooting fifty per cent of them. When they were rooted I put them in flats and, after a month and a half, planted them in raised benches containing the soil which I am sending you wrapped in paper. The loose soil I am sending you to find out if it is good for carnation culture. What is the trouble with the enclosed plants and what is your opinion of the soil? I am located in southern California.

The carnation plants are badly affected with bacterial or leaf-spot. Nebraska is one of the varieties of carnations that seem particularly susceptible to this disease. Clean culture in every detail is the surest method of combating the disease that is known. Allow the plants ample room for development and maintain a moderate moisture, both at the roots and about the foliage. Watch closely to keep the plants free from thrips and other insects. Dusting with air-slaked lime or spraying with Bordeaux mixture every week or ten days will help to check the disease.

The tips of the plants also showed signs of being affected by some soil condition. Judging from the sample, the soil that you are using contains alkali or some mineral substance that is not favorable to carnation culture and I would suggest a change of soil for your plants.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—M. M. Strong suffered a loss of about $4,000 from a fire which started in a barn on his property about noon Saturday, April 3. The fire for a time threatened to destroy both his residence and his entire range, but the fire department responded in time to save these. The barn contained a carload of corrugated pasteboard boxes, which had arrived only the day before, also fertilizer and other supplies not covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is not known.

BARGAIN SALE

CHICAGO CONDUCTS SALE.

Of Carnations Cooperatively.

Coöperative selling is the latest idea to be established in Chicago. Monday evening and Tuesday morning, April 12 and 13, there was an advertisement in the leading newspapers, ten and a half inches by three columns wide, announcing a sale of choice, fresh carnations at 75 cents per dozen or three dozen for $2, by all members of the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois, to be held Tuesday to Thursday, April 13 to 15.

The advertisement, which displayed a picture of a bunch of carnations at the top and a few carnations at the bottom, said that at all flower shops in and about Chicago, where the sign of the Allied Florists' Association was displayed—a picture of the sign was reproduced—fancy high-grade carnations, fresh from the greenhouses, would be sold at the aforementioned prices. It said that the identical quality is being sold every day at double the price and more. The purpose of the sale, it said, was to encourage the wide use of flowers and to demonstrate the benefit of their presence wherever they go, as no man-made gift or article spreads so much cheer and happiness as flowers do.

Benefiting the Retailer.

In getting the trade to coöperate and make the sale a success, the following letter was sent out to all retailers by Secretary Hilmer V. Swenson, of the Allied Florists' Association:

A CITY-WIDE SALE

BY ALL A. F. A. MEMBERS.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this Week. Read this—then coöperate and let's put it over. To a certain extent, this sale is an experiment. If it proves successful, flowers won't have to be dumped and sold to department stores. The retailer is the natural distributor. Let's see, then, if we cannot sell all the flowers through him. The purpose of this sale is to encourage selling of flowers through retailers exclusively. The success of this endeavor depends on you, Mr. Retailer.

Big ads will appear in the News Monday and in the Tribune Tuesday, advertising fancy fresh carnations at 75 cents per dozen—three dozen for $2. A lower price was suggested, but the committee believes the price low enough, considering the public has been paying anywhere from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Furthermore, this ad advertises high-grade stock, the best you can offer. The Allied Florists' Association is not only going to develop new flower business, but it is going to endeavor to maintain fair prices.

Everybody will coöperate. The wholesalers have agreed to stick by a price of no more than 3 cents on all carnations, regardless of how great the demand will be during this sale. This includes fresh stock—no splits or seconds; 500 or more carnations to each retailer.

HOW TO CONDUCT THE SALE.

Your main attraction will be carnations; so fix up your windows, put in a big display and don't be afraid to put up big cards announcing the prices and, whatever you do, give them the best stock that you have got. Give them an "honest-to-goodness" bargain and your customer will leave the store well satisfied, which means he will come back. Now, don't be afraid that the sale price will hurt your future business. The ad states the reason for the lower price and the public will understand it. Your benefit from this sale will not be on the profit you make from the sale of carnations. The benefit will come in getting a lot of new people into your store, which also results in a few more new steady customers. Not only that, you will find that a lot of people will come in to buy the bargain and turn around and buy a $5 plant besides. The big aim of the sale is to attract people. That is where a sale benefits—the reason why Marshall Field & Co. and other big merchandisers have them. The success of this sale, as far as you are concerned, depends entirely on how hard you go after it. The newspaper ads will bring a certain number of people into your store, but you have got to do some pushing also. Display your ad in all the windows—announce it to your trade in every way that you like. The writer will be glad to offer suggestions on how to conduct the sale if you will call him up at Harrison 6075.

The plan is not theoretical. It has already been proved successful by individual concerns. In Chicago several weeks ago, one florist sold 3,000 carnations through a sale.

Yours very truly,

ALLIED FLORISTS' ASS'N OF ILL.

P. S.—Under separate cover we are sending you a sign showing that you are a member of the A. F. A. Hang it up on your door so people can see it just as they come in. The ad tells the public that this sale is being conducted by members of the A. F. A. Cash in on it.

ECHOES OF EASTER

WINTER'S FAREWELL.

The sketch on this page illustrates just how a good many florists felt when the snow descended Easter morning. H. C. Pfeiffer, of the Mount Saint Mary's Greenhouses, just opposite that cemetery in Kansas City, Mo., in sending it, facetiously explains, "This is reproduced from a photograph taken in the cemetery Easter morning. The boy was attempting to deliver an Easter lily to a grave. This was one of over 200 orders we had to place on graves Sunday morning. The boy quit!"

HERE'S REAL CO-OPERATION.

When a coöperative advertisement is placed in the Minneapolis newspapers the coöperation is not only on the part of the florists, as was testified by an article in the Minneapolis Journal, Easter Sunday. Before Easter an advertisement of sixteen inches four columns wide was published, using the same copy which the St. Louis florists used in their advertisement reproduced in The Review of April 1. On Easter the Journal, on the first page of its city life section, devoted four columns, thirteen and a half inches long, to a story and a large picture about flowers and the Easter floral display. The article could not have been more pleasing or helpful to the florists had they written it themselves.

The illustration, which occupied almost three-quarters of the space, was of a corner of a florist's shop, showing many offerings in plants, cut flowers and fancy baskets.

The story told of the largest display of flowers that had ever been seen in Minneapolis, of the love of flowers growing from the war and the increased demand for them, stating that contact with the French had taught young America to appreciate flowers. Miss Cecile James, a saleslady in one of the stores, told how prospective flower buyers were treated on their entrance into the store and how they were helped in their choice. The article said the increased popularity of flowers would affect the life of the nation. As the final reason for the increased demand, the low cost of flowers was given. The prices of former years were compared with those of this year and the present prices were stated to be much lower.

FORT SMITH, ARK.

George Rye's report of Easter business was: "I cannot say that Easter business was the best in the world, nor can I say I did not make any money, but it seems that I am an unlucky cuss after all. Saturday prospects were grand for a clean-up, but that night it turned cold and Sunday the thermometer went down to 25 degrees and it snowed all day." You can imagine how a fellow felt with about $1,000 worth of stock on his hands. Then, too, the glass in my house that was broken March 21 was still out, since I was unable, in the rush of business, to get it in. With a big spring stock in the house, you can guess just how I felt and just what I thought. But with all that I cannot kick on the Easter business, for it was good. Yet just think what it would have been if the weather had been good! I lost a number of plants in the greenhouse April 4, for the temperature dropped to 20 degrees, and though I kept the boilers going hard, considerable stock was frozen."

WATERBURY, CONN.

Easter Business.

From reports received from the various florists, business ran ahead of last year for Easter. There was plenty of stock of all kinds, both plants and cut flowers. Prices were approximately the same as a year ago, Easter lilies selling for 50 cents a bloom retail, although one florist sold them for 40 cents if the customers carried the plants with them and 50 cents if delivered. Bougainvilleas sold well. They seemed to take the place of azaleas. Roses sold from $2.50 to $8 per dozen; carnations, $2 to $3; valley, $4 per bunch; orchids, $2 to $3 apiece, and American Beauties, $12 to $24 a dozen. Violets sold well, but were poor in quality.

A campaign to reduce the high cost of living was started about two weeks before Easter. It affected somewhat the trade of the wealthier class, but the middle and working classes did not seem to pay much attention to it.

Good Friday rain fell all day and trade ran behind a year ago. Everyone was more or less discouraged, but Saturday was a beautiful day, and brisk trade more than made up for the loss on Friday.

G. T. Ryan, of Ryan & Powers, thinks that if sweet peas were grown in larger quantities, so that the demand for corsages could be supplied, they would take the place of violets, as the public is becoming tired of buying the inferior violets that are sent out at Easter. On Saturday before Easter this firm's sales were fifty per cent ahead of those a year ago.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Easter Business.

Everyone is more than satisfied with the amount of business that was done. The weather preceding Easter was regular New England weather. It rained hard Good Friday, but that made little difference in the amount of business done on that day. Saturday was ideal and the stores were filled with buyers all day long and in the evening. Easter of 1920 was the best one the florists of Hartford have ever had.

The Florists' Club did some newspaper advertising which helped to boom the sale of flowers. There were full-page advertisements in all the local papers and, as the papers sold in the surrounding towns, it helped the out-of-town florists also. The advertisements were the subject of many favorable comments.

In speaking of the Easter trade, George F. Lane, doing business as Lane the Florist, said that this was the best Easter he has ever had and that he was unable to meet the demand for corsages. Potted plants were also in good demand.

E. M. Welch's Flower Shop reported that business was the best yet. It was completely sold out of potted plants and cut flowers. The supply of violets and sweet peas gave out early, as the demand was so great.

"Our potted plants were in greater demand than cut flowers," was the report from John Coombs. The call for corsage bouquets was greater than the supply. Funeral work has kept his force jumping most of the time. Newton Osborne, the carnation grower for Mr. Coombs, went to the Boston flower show recently and brought home the bacon in the shape of eight prizes.

Robert Marchant & Sons stated that business was the best yet and that their supply of potted plants gave out too soon. Their supply of cut flowers was large, but they were all in fine demand.

Spear & McManus were busy, as usual. Their trade was larger than ever. Cut flowers and plants sold about evenly.

Albert Brodrib's store was decorated for the week and business was great. His new delivery car is attractive. He believes in advertising.

George G. McClunie reports that business was a little better than last year. Everything sold well, but plants were in the lead.

The Whiting Greenhouses were sold out of lilies on Good Friday. Business was the best they ever experienced. The spring bedding stock is in fine condition.

Hallgren Bros. were unable to get all their lilies in bloom for Easter, but they had a fine lot of bulbous stock.

Edmund Pehl was completely sold out.

The Cedar Hill Greenhouses were successful with their lilies and bulbous stock and found ready sale for them all.

WINDOW DECORATIONS.

As Silent Salesmen.

Aside from your best salespeople, your window is the most important part of your store. I do not mean by this statement that the rest of your store should not be in keeping with the window, but while your salespeople have only one important function to perform, namely, the sale of stock, the window has two. Did you ever stop to think that a window of well arranged stock, while silent, is one of the best salesmen you could possibly have? A good floral decorator might be deaf and dumb and yet be a good salesman and, at the same time, be one of the best local advertising experts you could obtain. Now, the first thing we are going to talk about is a few "don'ts" to be observed in decorating the window.

The only thing with which I can compare the idea that I am trying to convey is the cook who has a fine assortment of victuals and cooks them in such a manner that you are obliged to mix two or three vegetables together to make them palatable. They are not cooked at all; they are just boiled. Don't try to see how much you can crowd into the window, as though you were trying to impress upon the passing public the amount of stock you carry. Don't try to see how many different colors you can get into one window decoration. I have seen windows which made me think of but one thing, Joseph's coat. Stick to some such color scheme as green, pink and white; three, or perhaps four, colors that will harmonize are sufficient. You will always have foliage as a green basis. Then have whatever flowers you intend to feature in the window as fine as you can possibly get them and have them arranged in glass vases or in baskets with metal linings, with ribbon to harmonize with the flowers. A border of small ferns around the outer edge of the window will always add a good finish. Any plants that may be displayed should be specimens.

Let everything that finds its way into the window be in a position to stand on its own merits. In other words, let each article displayed have the appearance of being in competition with its neighbor and let all be light and airy. Spring is here and from time to time outside shrubbery will be in bloom. Then there will be fruit blossoms and even dogwood to use; any of these can be worked into an artistic and attractive window. While they will not last long, yet, if properly handled, they will bring with them a breath of the season they represent and be appreciated by those who pass by.

Recalling Pleasant Memories.

I have often heard of a slogan used by a well known lunch room, "Come in and try a cup of coffee like your mother used to make." I have heard all sorts of claims about what a business getter it is, carrying one back to the old home and making one long for a cup of that coffee. At least fifty per cent of our captains of industry were at one time boys on the farm; let them see a window on our downtown streets in which dogwood is featured. It may have been a long time since they have seen a tree of it in bloom and the novelty of the thing will compel them to stop and look. Their thoughts will drift back over a span of years and for a moment they will be boys again, driving the cows to pasture. But my readers will be asking, "What has all this to do with a florist's window?" My reply is just this: You are "Saying It with Flowers" to this man in a manner more impressive than a page in a magazine could say it. In the moment he stands and admires your window a mental note is registered; the time will come when that man will need flowers and, when it does, the thought of your dogwood window will come with it.

Our next big flower day is Mothers' day. Start at least ten days before to have the window well dressed. Then depend upon neatly printed signs, posters, stickers and folders to do the rest. These can be had from the publicity service bureau. Be sure to emphasize the fact that no matter in what part of the world mother may be located, you can "Say It with Flowers" to her in a few hours.

We are going after big fish; the season is here and all we have to do is to have the right bait. There will be many weddings this spring and early May would be a fine time to feature a bridal window for a week. You must have your window decorated and it will be just as inexpensive and attractive to have this feature as anything else. For such a decoration a well worded advertisement in your local paper would be a big help. Have something that is readable and catchy and mention the fact that those who cannot find time to see it during the day can see it in the evening, stating that all floral necessities for the wedding will be on display in your window every evening during the week. Remember that weddings are being planned every evening, and on these fine spring evenings what would be more natural than a walk for the prospective bride and groom past your store for a look? Then live up to your advertisement. Have a well decorated kneeling stool for a central feature. Outdoor valley will be in bloom; have a shower bouquet of it and one of Double White Killarney. Show several bridesmaids' bouquets, a spray of valley for the groom, the boutonnieres for the ushers and a basket or two for the flower girls. Have each article labeled with a neatly printed card. These are just pointers. You can work out the decoration for yourself. In every city some photographer will have a number of photographs of brides. He will be glad to cooperate with you for the advertisement and lend you the photographs. I have seen this done most successfully. This is the next best thing to having the bride herself in the window.

ATTACK COAL PROFITEERS.

Perhaps growers will not have to pay the exorbitant prices which face them if the attack on coal profiteers at Washington achieves the results it aims at.

The government, it was reported last week, has compiled a list of coal profiteers and, under the president's direction, Attorney General Palmer is preparing to act against them.

Present high prices of bituminous coal were characterized as inexcusable on any theory of supply and demand or on any economic principle, in a formal statement issued by Herbert N. Shenton, secretary of the United States bituminous coal commission, which adjudicated the dispute between the soft coal operators and miners.

LAMBERT'S LOCALS.

C. W. Sidles, Hastings, Neb., is completing a greenhouse for carnations, of John C. Moninger Co. construction. Mr. Sidles reports a successful business for the season.

The Howe Floral Co., Hastings, Neb., was recently organized and has 100,000 feet of glass well stocked with plants. The houses, of John C. Moninger Co. construction, are complete in every detail. This firm is catering to both wholesale and retail trade. Mr. and Mrs. Howe went to Hastings from Fairfield, Neb.

The Davidson Floral Co., Holdrege, Neb., enjoys a fine business. It has added nursery and seed departments, which have proved profitable. J. A. L.

GROWERS' ORGANIZATION

EVERYONE knows that the average grower comes from a hard-working, industrious class of people, who by their hard work and love of independence acquire some land that will some day start them "out on their own hook," as the saying goes. It is evident to most of us that the grower is just a grower. No opportunity was placed before him to be anything else, and in justice to him as a grower, a lifetime is too short to know it all. His mind is largely concentrated to succeed, as a good grower confines himself mostly to his greenhouses, losing sight of the fact that he should be a good business man as well. If some of us growers had been better business men, our success as a whole would have been far greater. Many of the leading growers learned to grow stock, but attribute their progress to having applied up-to-date business methods to their greenhouse management. It was not so long ago that it was often said that the less the grower knew about business as it concerned him as a consignor the better for him.

The growers all over the country have been like a sleeping giant. As long as they did not wake up, they would not claim something of which they had been deprived in years gone by.

Conditions for the grower in this market until the growers organized were going from bad to worse. Ambition was throttled, since the grower was not able to get the needed improvements as an individual, and all the time his thoughts were farthest from a growers' organization—the very thing he needed most.

In Chicago.

Alone, I could do nothing to have my wishes brought to the attention of the trade. My time, labor and equipment were practically placed at the mercy of the success or failure in marketing—wholly dependent upon outsiders. With any grievances or complaints I had, I stood alone—to keep them to myself. There was no organization I could go to, either to convince myself of my faults or to compare my work with other growers'. If I could only be side by side with other growers in a body to counsel with, to talk about our problems, to meet other growers as friends in a common cause so as to better our business for you and me and somehow for all of us in an associated capacity! The small grower was particularly isolated from the affairs of the Chicago market.

The address of Joseph Kohout, president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, delivered at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club April 8, 1920.

In 1916 a beginning was made towards a growers' organization by petition. I just wanted to see what could be done that way toward getting together. This petition led to the organization as we have it today. Since its inception the Chicago market has seen more action than it had seen in twelve years past.

Organization Did It.

When we first started we had limited encouragement from the growers, sneers and slander from others, just as if by force of habit or custom the growers had no right to speak for themselves as an organization. The sales agent or commission merchant offered no encouragement, being firmly entrenched to stand for higher prices or for such prices as he could get. The retailer had no sympathy for us, as he has always stood for the lowest prices. But we are now organized to do things and here to stay. As an organization we have not scratched yet, but we will continue to keep pace with the opportunities as they open to the grower. Our organization has a purpose, to show a better service alike to the grower, wholesaler and retailer.

Our organization represents the highest percentage in membership and the greatest in financial strength. Our organization represents the wishes of the majority, so that a small grower like myself stands shoulder to shoulder, in voting power at least, with the largest grower, on the principle that what is good for the big grower is good for the small grower. Alone as a grower I could do nothing, but with him in our organization we get the results we hope for. From the interchange of ideas, of improvements, of successes and of failures we each one learn something to better his own condition at home. Strong in our membership, we can cooperate as our needs require. We can protect the retailer from the encroachments of a wholesaler upon the consumer direct. We can check such abuses as may arise that are detrimental to the general welfare of our industry. In fact, the preservation of our business lies within the activities of our own organization. As growers, of course, we have differences of opinions that make for competition, which is good for all of us. Such competition thrashes out questions raised among ourselves, that lead to better business for all of us.

For the Future.

Through our organization we can pave the way to a future inheritance to hand down to our children for them to continue our work. As it is, there must be something wrong when our sons refuse to follow the steps of their fathers in the growing of floricultural products, as is noticed on many occasions. There must be something wrong when we attract the lowest type of labor or the overflow from other industries. The hard, steady grind, with little recupera-tion, is one of the troubles confronting us and today we are willing to pay as much as we can afford under the present condition of the labor market. Progress is a watchword with us.

Organization Did It

The Allied Florists' Association owes its birth to the one hundred per cent membership we had to support it. Such a thing as an Allied Florists' Association was impossible two years ago. Only a year ago publicity was attempted and failed for lack of organization, lack of money and lack of teamwork.

The future will possibly not reveal the history of the real movers of the organization of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, but it is here now, for there is work to be done to improve our profession. The strength of our organization is what makes our organization something more than a name. Organization today is the product of modern business enterprise. Competition may be the life of trade, but co-operation is creeping in by competitive business becoming organized. As growers our organization has a distinct purpose; so we look kindly to such practical reforms as are adaptable to our needs. We avoid a selfish purpose by always having in mind the welfare of all those engaged in the industry. The rank and file is the strength of every organization; so we give every grower a free and untrammelled opportunity for expression, the real purpose for which we became organized.

Good Leadership.

The leadership of any organization should be devoid of any control or influence of the stronger members over the weak. Leadership in a successful organization should attract and hold the membership. This is only possible when it is in the hands of those who will give their time to working toward the success of all, men who by example of their membership have proved their sincerity to their organization. If we look back into the history of so-called organizations we find failure largely because the functions of an executive office served a group of individuals or such executive office was used for social glory.

Organizations of growers, wherever they may be, should tend to protect capital investment, stabilize prices as much as possible, improve labor conditions and restrain wasteful competition. Improved production, improved marketing and fair profits fairly represent the wishes of our organization. To obtain these desires we hope to obtain favorable viewpoints about the commission wholesaler, about the retail florist and the public at large and thus obtain an insight as to how other branches of the trade run their business, since we operate on such a different basis from those with whom we deal to maintain an outlet for our products.

Backbone of Business.

The grower is the backbone of the flower business, yet we have trusted the larger part of our interests to somebody else. There is the commission man, who always derives his profits from the work of the grower; there is the retailer, who derives his profit in adding his cost of selling to his purchase price, while the grower takes his chances on a possible profit from the unregulated law of supply and demand. Hence he now comes in on creating a demand for his products that will lead to a profit over the annual average cost of greenhouse production. Some day I hope to see a maximum selling price around the holidays because of the extra demand and a minimum price in times of an overabundance, whether because of heavy production or a small demand. In either case we should establish an equilibrium or a law of average to safeguard a margin of profit to continued successful flower production. Stock dumped has cost us millions of dollars. Finally, we believe we have the plan in grasping the value of advertising to reduce such losses. A supply in excess of the demand makes unstable and erratic prices to the public, while a demand in excess of the supply has the tendency to make prices more uniform to the public. If the retailer can be brought to harmonize his selling price with his purchase price on an established basis of the market selling on a minimum and maximum price, such regulation might reduce the waste in the sale and distribution of the growers' products. The national organization could well branch out as a result of our success in Chicago, since Chicago's geographical position lends support to the activities of a resident organizer, so as to effect further state or sectional organizations among the growers.

Nation-wide Coöperation.

Our plan of organization, adopted along national lines, will bring to other growers the remarkable progress we made within a year's time. Our preliminary experience is available to growers surrounding other centers of distribution. After these various organizations have been perfected, one section of the country will learn from the other. It is surprising how the Chicago growers overcome trade jealousies and suspicion and get together toward friendly coöperation.

On a national basis our organization will coöperate with the scientific and theoretical experimental work in floriculture. We can deal safely with positive results and leave the experimental stations to do the experimenting.

Disease control, soil fertility, heating and refrigeration, rotation of crops, crops to grow, marketing, cost of production, labor, employment of women and children, long hours, advertising—all these and more can be brought to a new idea, to the advantage of the growers as a whole.

A national organization can give us an exchange of the best cultural methods, of the best markets, supplying the different local organizations with instructors and organizers for every prospective and permanent organization.

To do our own advertising and create a growers' publicity fund to organize dollars to boost us all along.

As our industry advances we become individually more ready to surmount difficulties and make our profession in keeping with the most advanced methods in practice in other industries.

Our national organization will stand out like the rock of Gibraltar to husband our resources to meet any emergency. "In union there is strength."

Downieville, Pa.—R. P. Harmany recently formed a partnership with J. W. Church. The firm, which will carry on a general florists' business, is known as Church & Harmany and Mr. Harmany is manager.

Marion, Kan.—Mrs. Minnie L. Sherman, who has formerly owned establishments in Shenandoah, Ia.; Birch Tree, Mo.; Ellsworth and Topeka, Kan., and who has been ill in the hospital for a long time, is starting again in business.

RED COLUMBIA.

Should the new red rose of the Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., live up to its parent, the trade will have something which it has been long seeking. Red Columbia appeared first at Richmond two years ago, when a plant of Columbia bore a red bloom flecked with white, after the fashion of an occasional Richmond. Of three plants propagated from this, two yielded similarly flecked blooms and were discarded, while one bore a pure red. The plants propagated from this one have all come true and this year Mr. Hill will have a stock of about 800 plants worked up, 200 grafted and 600 budded. He does not intend to send out plants before 1922, since he will not have sufficient stock to take care of orders before that time.

The new rose resembles Columbia in all its characteristics save color and petalage. There are fewer petals in Red Columbia than in the parent, which is to be considered an advantage rather than otherwise in the opinion of growers who have handled the latter. The long guard petals protect the bloom and will aid it in shipping. The color is similar to Hoosier Beauty, but the flower is free from Hoosier Beauty's failing, a weak neck. A specimen bloom of Red Columbia exhibited at the Chicago Florists' Club April 8 aroused keen interest on the part of the growers present. Its further appearance will be watched closely by the trade.

CLUB DOINGS

CHICAGO CLUB HAS MOVIE.

"Wonderland Under Glass."

The special attraction of the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club Thursday evening, April 8, was the presentation of the 2-reel motion picture, "Wonderland Under Glass," by the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. This interesting and instructive movie was shown on that night for the first time in this country. Starting at the office of P. L. McKee, president of the company, the first reel showed the planning and measuring, the hauling and storing, the punching and riveting, the sanding and painting and all the other operations performed in the company's factory. The second reel showed various types of houses, many interesting details of construction and finally the houses in actual use, both for large-scale growing and for the retailer's display purposes. Actual views were shown of the company's houses erected for the W. A. Rowe Floral Co., and Albert Senger, Kirkwood, Mo.; Herman Knoll, and Wm. J. Lemp, St. Louis; Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., and A. N. Nielsen, Inc., and W. A. Amling, Pana, Ill.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. Owing to the small attendance, P. L. McKee, president of the company, was requested to allow the Chicago Florists' Club to present "Wonderland Under Glass" again at the May meeting, and he kindly consented to do so. Tickets free of cost will be issued for this occasion.

Joseph Kohout on Organization.

Another feature of the evening was an exceedingly instructive paper read by Joseph Kohout, president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, on the benefits to growers of organization, which appears on page 21.

When President Waters called for comments on Mr. Kohout's paper, J. E. Pollworth emphasized the desirability, for retailer, wholesaler and grower alike, of stabilizing prices, since the natural operation of the law of supply and demand causes the public to react against the purchase of flowers and thus hurts the whole industry.

Red Columbia Shown.

The flowers exhibited at the meeting totaled one bloom. But that one was of a quality which would have made it stand alone, even if there had been other exhibits. It was an excellent specimen of Red Columbia, which Joseph Hill had brought up from Richmond, Ind.

This flower attracted the attention of all the growers present, who had much admiration for its appearance and great interest in Mr. Hill's description of its characteristics, which, he said, are just like its parent's.

New Members.

In addition to these notable features, the regular business of the club showed progress. L. A. Woodward, 208 South

La Salle street, and Mr. Paselk, grower with Poehlmann Bros. Co., were proposed for membership and the following new members were elected: Charles S. McCauley, Geneva; William Langhout, 172 North Wabash avenue; Lorenz P. Geiger, 4905 Quincy street; Edward Clody, 3912 North Clark street; George Wienhoeber, 41 South Wabash avenue; A. Hall, 4700 Sheridan road; H. E. Bruns, 3040 West Madison street; Fred Stielow, Niles Center; C. Clemensen, 7801 Exchange avenue; Nick Damm, Jr., Morton Grove; James R. Paul, 1112 Lawrence avenue, and Ernst Weiss, Elmhurst.

Ladies' Night in May.

Paul Weiss, when asked whether he had anything to add to his "Facts About the Coal Situation" printed in the announcement of the meeting, repeated with emphasis his injunction to buy early.

Guy French, for the good-of-the-club committee, announced that the next meeting of the club would be ladies' night; the details are to be announced later. Mr. French suggested that there would be less occasion than usual for drying off plants this summer, since a good demand will result from such events as the Republican convention in this city in June and the gathering of the Elks July 5 to 10. Between 5,000 and 10,000 corsage bouquets will be required for the Elks' convention, as well as about 20,000 roses and probably other flowers in proportion.

NEW YORK CLUB MEETS.

Mossman Speaks on Orchids.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms, in the Engineering Societies' building, Monday evening, April 12, with a good attendance despite the bad transportation conditions due to the railroad trainmen's strike.

J. P. Mossman, superintendent of the orchid growing establishment of Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., read a most interesting paper on "Raising Orchids from Seed."

In the short discussion which followed, Joseph A. Manda asked the speaker whether in raising hybrid orchids he had found that the hybrids could be brought into flower at the same season as the species. The reply was that it had been found that some hybrids had come into flower two or three weeks earlier than the species. Mr. Manda explained that he had made the point before the Federal Horticultural Board in Washington that hybrids could not be depended upon for a crop of flowers at the same time as the species. For instance, brassocattleyas could be flowered three or four times.

S. G. Milosy spoke of difficulties in the flowering of cattleya seedlings and remarked that it would be necessary to have a separate house for each variety's seedlings. He believed it would take about ten years to work up a stock of cattleyas to make the plants of commercial value. On the motion of P. F. Kessler, Mr. Mossman was given a rising vote of thanks for his paper.

Committee Reports.

Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the dinner committee, reported that the club's annual dinner, March 17, was a complete success. There were sixty-eight guests and 375 tickets were taken by members. On motion of Max Schling, the report was approved and a rising vote of thanks was given the committee.

Secretary Young, for the flower show committee, made a preliminary report which, he said, was almost conclusive, the final report awaiting settlement of matters which might necessitate but a slight difference in the final report. Chairman Havemeyer and Treasurer Newbold had made an audit in detail of the accounts, which showed that receipts in all were $61,540.22, which, after running expenses, premiums and war taxes amounting to over $5,000 were deducted, would leave a balance of about $9,000 for division between the club and the Horticultural Society of New York. The report was, on motion, received amid applause.

The transportation committee presented a report on travel arrangements for the Cleveland convention of the S. A. F., covering two routes, but no action was taken and the matter was held over until the next meeting, when a third route is to be presented.

New Members.

The following were elected to membership in the club: J. N. Champion, New Haven, Conn.; D. A. Laird, Brooklyn, N. Y.; K. H. Zeevat, New York; H. Berkowitz, New York; J. M. Nitschke, New York; H. M. Cooke, Plattsburg, N. Y.; F. A. Heffner, Hoboken, N. J.; M. J. Watson, New York; Herman Mamitsch, Rockville Center, L. I.; A. H. Brown, Greenwich, Conn.; H. Bergman, Far Rockaway, N. Y., and D. A. Dawson, New York.

The following were nominated for election at the next meeting: T. E. King, Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Wm. A. Finger, Jr., Hicksville, N. Y.; Alonzo J. Bryan, Washington, N. J.; W. Stanley Murtfeldt, Newburgh, N. Y.; Samuel J. Clark, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; T. A. Weston, New York; Axel C. Palm, Portchester, N. Y., and J. P. Mossman, Hackensack, N. J.

Flower Markets Discussed.

Max Schling addressed the meeting at some length on the subject of the flower markets which Park Commissioner Gallatin was trying to establish at Columbus Circle, Union Square and other points. Mr. Schling appeared to see in these markets a means for the disposal of the surplus stock of growers of plants and flowers without detriment to the interests of the trade, and also for satisfying the demands of the poorer classes, a love for plants and flowers among whom he thought it desirable to cultivate. A long discussion followed, the consensus appearing to be that no grower could be found who would be willing to sell his products at retail in these markets and that if such selling were possible at all it would be through the energies of peddlers and others, who would take over any surpluses offered. No action was taken in the matter.

A. L. Miller reported the death of Mrs. Laird, mother of Daniel and George Laird, members of the club, and Secretary Young reported the death of Mrs. Laura Hammond, wife of Benjamin Hammond, a member of the club of many years' standing. On motion, the appointment of committees to prepare resolutions of sympathy with the bereaved was ordered.

A resolution of sympathy with the relatives of F. W. Bruggerhof, late head of the firm of J. M. Hartman & Co., New York, in his demise last month, was introduced by J. H. Pepper, adopted and ordered to be entered upon the minutes of the club.

A motion by J. A. Manda that a committee be appointed by President Henshaw to confer and act with a similar committee of the Horticultural Society of New York, in regard to arrangements for the eighth international flower show, in 1921, was carried, and it was announced that the appointment would be made later.

Quarantine Meeting.

Secretary Young reported a communication from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to the effect that at a special meeting of the advisory committee of that body called to consider the question of Quarantine 37, it was voted that the New York and Pennsylvania horticultural organizations be asked to join with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in a meeting to be held in New York at a date to be decided upon, the object to be a general discussion of the question. Secretary Young moved that the president appoint a delegate and alternate to attend this meeting, which would probably be held upon the invitation of Treasurer F. R. Newbold, of the Horticultural Society of New York, in the American Museum of Natural History, New York, sometime after May 19. The motion was carried and Joseph A. Manda was appointed delegate, with I. S. Hendrickson as alternate.

The secretary announced that through Mrs. J. C. Curtin, it was reported that a large number of wounded soldiers were still at the base hospital at Fox Hills, apparently forgotten, and receiving neither visitors nor other outside attention or commiseration. Mrs. Curtin had suggested that it would be a graceful act on the part of florists to provide gifts of surplus flowers and plants for these men, and she would see that visits were made and the men cheered by the distribution of the material collected. A number of members pledged contributions of plants and flowers for the purpose and a committee was appointed to make a general collection.

Awards to Exhibits.

The committee on awards passed upon plants and flowers exhibited before the meeting as follows:

Laeliocattleya Alphand, by Joseph Manda Co., West Orange, N. J., silver medal.
Brassocattleya Ilene, by Joseph Manda Co., silver medal.
Dendrobium nobile album, by Louis Strauss, Brooklyn, N. Y., honorable mention.
 Collection of Miltonia Bleuana grandiflora and Miltonia vexillaria, by S. G. Milosy, Geo. Schlegel estate, Brooklyn, N. Y., silver medal.
Antirrhinum Ruth Brewster, by Philip F. Kessler, New York, cultural certificate.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"The income tax took a considerable part of the long green," said Victor Dorval, of Victor S. Dorval Sons, Woodside, N. Y. "Fortunately, we had a fine crop of asparagus in long strings, which materially helped to fill the pocketbook, for this was one of the few items short on the market and brought the longest price on record." He said that a fine crop had been produced all winter, running a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees at night. Holland bulbs sold well. A batch of lilies did not bloom in time for Easter, but will sell as well for Mothers' day, for which preparations are being made, as it promises to be another big day for the trade:

The Nippon Nursery, Woodside, N. Y., had 10,000 lilies just right for Easter, that sold well. The quality was no better than the bulbs imported, according to P. Suzuki, the proprietor, who is in close touch with the grower in Japan. The whole crop was almost free from disease and it is hoped the same care will be taken in the future.

The introducer of the floral basket is entitled to a gold medal in the opinion of F. X. Dienst, of Middletown, N. Y., whose record of seventy-five baskets exceeds anything of the kind at any previous Easter. He says that it has abolished much detail, saves time in selling and, when properly figured out as to cost, is the most profitable item in the store.

"Have you heard anyone say that his lilies were too big?" inquired E. A. Lorentz, of Middletown, N. Y., who had formosum that averaged fourteen to fifteen blooms to a 9 to 11-inch bulb. The selling price was 50 cents per bloom and, consequently, with few exceptions, the plants were too large for ordinary purposes. It was an agreeable surprise to get a perfect crop and sell it all.

"Red hot" describes conditions prevailing around the place of Edward Seery, known as the telegraph florist of Passaic, N. J.

"I had nothing left over, but could have doubled sales if I only had accommodations," was the comment of J. Hundertmark, of Passaic, N. J.

Elmer Rawlings, Allegany, N. Y., was making a shipment to the far east and observed that a shipping business, extending from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, has been built up through the Classified column route and, in place of putting the profits in the air, so to speak, he has sunk them in the soil; in other words, purchased a fine farm adjoining the greenhouses. "One can do just so much business satisfactorily," said Mr. Rawlings, "for just as soon as more orders are taken than can satisfactorily be filled, then trouble for everyone begins." A fine stock of geraniums in 2-inch pots, grown on the ground, makes stockier plants than bench-grown. Rex begonias grown in the same way were noted.

A. Buchholz, of Woodside, N. Y., observed that, with the higher cost of Holland bulbs, it is more than ever necessary to buy carefully. The day for plunging has passed. Prices obtained at Easter and since are satisfactory.

"I have never been better equipped for Easter business," observed Carl Lange, of H. A. Lange's, Worcester, Mass., adding that the greenhouses were again in shape and running to full capacity.

Maurice M. Dye, Salamanca, N. Y., observed that the old saying of the new broom certainly applied to business in his experience, as his new houses have proved a sweeping success. More are in project, if conditions continue as they exist at present.

The whir of the motor of the New York-Chicago mail airplane caused E. Ross Adgate, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., to observe that before long they would be up in the air, as soon as suitable landings were secured. Conditions warrant the innovation, he asserted.

"Tate, in his Tips, aptly describes the relative conditions of cleaning up and out," said Frank W. Durand, of Rawson's, Elmira, N. Y. "Sassafras tea is an ideal spring tonic, which such veterans as myself in the business need after such a rush as was unknown before. Orders for Mothers' day are already being booked."

A. H. Woeppel, Corning, N. Y., reported excellent business, with stock in fine shape and prices well sustained.

Graham's Flower Store, Bradford, Pa., reports a satisfactory condition of things.

C. E. Gunton, Bradford, Pa., had a fine crop of roses and carnations, which brought the highest prices for Easter in the history of the business. "It is our fault," observed Mr. Gunton, "if prices are allowed to drop to any great extent, for it appears to me the public realizes more than ever before the value of flowers in winter."

Manuel Oppenheim, Olean, N. Y., reports great strides in his business since he returned from Paris, where he gave the Parisians some points on design work and obtained a few ideas in return, which are seen in the fine flower shop, with a soda fountain and real fountain adjoining. W. M.

NO PROFITEERING.

What should be your sales expense in moving a stock of plants, bulbs, seeds, or other item to the trade? You don't know offhand, but you'd guess a respect-

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE

The steadily increasing size of The Review, both in number of pages and in circulation, makes it imperative that advertising copy be obtained farther in advance of publication date. In order that forms may be held open as late as possible, advertisers are urged to send instructions (to start or change) to reach Chicago Thursday, Friday or Saturday, whenever possible. Monday is the last day on which instructions regarding display advertisements can be received for the issue of that week.

able percentage of the total business, you say. Not as low as one per cent; oh! no, that would be ridiculous!

Then if you sold them out right off the reel—just like that (a snap of the fingers)—and the cost of getting the orders was 45 cents, you'd think you had a bargain.

A lot of people are getting those bargains in the Classified pages of The Review. Pretty nearly every letter canceling an ad tells about such a bargain—a few cents' worth of advertising selling hundreds of dollars' worth of stock. The Review is doing that selling for florists at the bargain prices because its volume of business reduces the proportionate overhead cost. It doesn't charge what the market will bear—why, you'd pay considerably more than 45 cents to move several thousand gladiolus bulbs at $5 a thousand, wouldn't you? But that's all it cost this florist:

One ad in The Review more than sold out my surplus of Gladiolus Empress of India planting stock. Classified ads in The Review pay.—Alfred Oesterling, Butler, Pa., April 5, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The cold, dark weather which set in again the day before Easter continued during the whole of last week; following the beautiful, springlike weather of the two or three previous weeks, it appears to have taken the pep out of business. In addition, shippers have been somewhat up against it owing to the threatened strike; at certain points stock was not accepted for shipment by express and the only way in which to overcome the difficulty was to send small packages by parcel post. This, however, did not make fast connections.

The amount of business for Easter was greatly in advance of what was predicted. Plenty of good stock arrived all last week, when the pre-Easter prices were resumed. Included in this stock was an unusual supply of Easter lilies, which, in order to clear, were sold at $15 per hundred.

Callas are plentiful, with only a small sale. Roses, carnations and sweet peas are plentiful and good stock is arriving in all grades. Plenty of bulbous cut stock is arriving and it continues to sell well. Gardenias are fine and have a good sale. The demand for violets was not particularly brisk last week, since they were poorer in quality than before.

However, with colder weather we should still be able to get some good stock on the market again. Lily of the valley continues to be quite plentiful, but has no special demand. Orchids are in fair supply, with only a medium demand. Greens continue to be in sufficient supply for the demand.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at the Osborn House Friday evening, April 9. The speaker of the evening was Hugo Teute, one of the members, who spoke on his experience in growing cyclamen plants. Mr. Teute is a particularly successful grower and his talk was fully appreciated by all who attended.

Irving W. Briggs, the new secretary, presented nine names of candidates for membership, all of whom were voted on and accepted.

Charles H. Vick and his committee reported on the proposed flower show and after discussion it was decided to hold a flower show in the fall. Chrysanthemums and a general line of blooming plants will be featured. Among those invited to exhibit are the city florists, the growers and the many private floriculturists of Rochester.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., will be entertained at a dinner Friday, April 16. He is to address the Rochester Rose Society in the assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce. Dinner arrangements are in charge of George B. Hart, Edwin P. Wilson and George T. Boucher.

Various Notes.

An excellent exhibit of Easter stock was on display at the Lamberton Conservatories Easter Sunday, when thousands of people took advantage of the display. In spite of the bad weather, the houses were well filled throughout the day.

Among the visitors to this city last week were Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York; J. Keur, of Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland; William B. Leipzig, of A. L. Leipzig, New York, and J. K. Wilson, of the Taiyo Trading Co., Inc., New York.

A building covering a root cellar and stock belonging to the Heberle Bros. Nurseries, Brighton, N. Y., was burned early Saturday morning, April 10. Only the walls of the cement structure remain. Young trees and shrubs valued at more than $10,000 were destroyed. Altogether the loss is estimated by Arthur H. Heberle at from $25,000 to $30,000. The fire was discovered about 3 a. m. by one of the workmen, who lives a short distance from the root cellar and who was awakened by the crackling of the flames. Mr. Heberle also awakened and telephoned for the fire department. The firemen started out, but were prevented from reaching the burning building by the condition of the road.

WESTERLY, R. I.

The greenhouses located on Franklin street that have been owned and operated by Conrad Schultz for a number of years were sold at auction last week in bankruptcy proceedings and were purchased by Michael Dobridia, of Hobart street, Westerly. The price at which the property was struck off was $2,150. The sale included four greenhouses and three acres of land. Conrad Schultz went into bankruptcy several months ago and the sale of this property was in connection with the adjudication of his affairs.

Farquhar Smith had the decorations for the Larkin-Smith wedding at Ashaway last week, palms, laurel and Easter lilies being used.

John Newton has more than 70,000 tomato, pepper, cabbage and lettuce plants at his greenhouses at Bradford.

The decorations for the Easter Monday ball of Merrill post of the American Legion were furnished by Benjamin Spargo.

PUSHING SLOGAN ABROAD.

Not only in this country, but also abroad is the force of the florists' slogan recognized. It is being used by the trade in Great Britain and one way of impressing it on the public is by use of such poems as have been printed in the columns of The Review from time to time. These have been reprinted by florists in many parts of the United States. Now William Leighton, at Glasgow, Scotland, wishes to give them circularization in his country. He writes:

"The Review, to a Scotsman, is most interesting and attractive. Many articles in it give such valuable hints that one feels he has lost much in being so long without it. The issue of February 26 is just to hand. The poetry on 'Say It with Flowers' is 'pat.' What I want to know is, can I have permission to reprint those on neat cards, for presentation to my customers, and in this way help to make the S. A. F. slogan better known, as it ought to be, in 'Dear Auld Scotland?'"

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE 1919-20 year book of the New York Florists' Club shows a membership of 562 and an average attendance at meetings during the last year of 116.

THE latest state to promulgate a quarantine against the corn borer is South Dakota, through H. C. Severin, state entomologist. It was put in effect April 1.

A FLORIST wishes to know where he can purchase brass vases and such ware, which the old makers no longer supply. Perhaps some reader can furnish an address.

If you want your letter to get to The Review office or somewhere else by a set time, better mail it a day earlier than you have been, to allow for delay in the mail.

THE condition of the trade as regards labor needs is reflected in the Want Ad department of The Review this week. It never before carried so many requests for help.

THE wage expectations of the average employee astound many a florist. Not infrequently the wages asked are more than the owner ever has drawn out of the business for his own living expenses.

THOSE who send telegraph orders should give consideration to the probable prices prevailing where the order is to be filled. The price should be sufficiently high to buy the best grade of stock.

IN connection with an article on collecting native plants for the garden, the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin for March presents a list of eleven pages of native plants suitable for the gardens of Missouri and adjoining states.

THE bulletin of the American Dahlia Society, grown to the distinction of application for second class postage rates April 1, is full of experiences interesting to the amateur growers of this flower and affords a means of encouragement for florists to suggest to their customers devoted to the dahlia.

MANY a florist made large preparations for Easter and failed to realize his expectations. It is sure to react on the preparations for Mothers' day, in spite of the evident fact that the unexpected features of the Easter situation may all be traced to a general failure to guess the weather and its effects.

SAVE paper! Use as little as you can. The price not only still is going up but is rising faster than ever before.

SOME of the medical men have doped it out that there will be no epidemic of flu next winter, but that one is due in the late autumn of 1921. If this is correct, where will the growers go to get their gravy next winter?

IT costs twice as much today as it did five years ago to start a florists' business. The capital required is twice as great, for original investment and for operating expenses; also, the risk is double, but is the likelihood of profit increased?

How quickly things change in this trade! Only a couple of months ago the talk was all of the need for greater production; today it is of overproduction and the need for curtailment to keep the prices above the cost of growing.

UNDER present conditions the florists' business can grow only by the development of existing units. No one starts anything new; in times such as these it is all anyone can do to maintain existing enterprises, without trying to start anything new.

OPPORTUNITIES never were more numerous than now, in this trade. Note the Wanted and For Sale ads in this issue of The Review. They offer splendid openings in greater number than ever before, something for everybody. Read them; they're full of interest, illustrating trade tendencies.

EXPRESS EMBARGOES.

Embargoes in the principal cities have disorganized the usual shipping facilities during the last week. They have varied in effect from day to day and in different centers, so that no general statement of the situation can be expressed. There seems, however, to be a gradual waning of the difficulties in the west caused by the railroad strikes, as the wave passed in force to the eastward. Since the radical element, and not the regular organization, of the laborers is responsible, it is expected that the insurgent movement will speedily subside as the recognized leaders exert their authority.

Shipments, both in and out of the large cities, have been difficult. Growers have in some places been compelled to carry in their cuts as hand baggage on passenger trains. The usual means of getting around emergencies of this kind, which have become common of late, has enabled wholesalers to make many shipments to out-of-town customers, but the service has been far from regular.

Return of the express companies to private from government hands has not proved an unmixed blessing. In fact, many find preference for Uncle Sam's control. March and April have seen some of the worst express service ever given to the trade.

THE OUTLOOK FOR BUSINESS.

After Easter is past and preparations for Mothers' day and Memorial day are well in hand, the approach of summer causes florists, both greenhouse men and store proprietors, to form their judgment as to the outlook of business, upon which will depend their activities during the warm weather in anticipation of next season's demands. In formulating their opinion, they will find valuable the survey of the New York Journal of Commerce, the leading business paper of the country. It says in part:

"Taken in the aggregate, the testimony as to our economic outlook for the spring and summer of 1920 is bright. Crop prospects are satisfactory, so far as they can be judged at this early date, while industrially speaking, the productive machinery of the country is probably as fully occupied as it ever has been. Labor is fully employed at high wages and the output of American factories is decidedly larger than it has been in past months. There is little accumulation of goods in the country as a whole and during the war we fell so far behind in our investment in productive capital that it will be a good while before we can catch up. It would be almost absurd to suppose that overproduction in any general sense could occur, except perhaps locally. We need all that we can manufacture and if we do not dispose of it abroad we shall use it at home in enlarging our capital investment and in adding to the consumable goods of the community.

"The genuine prosperity which is in sight all over the country should not be allowed to blind us to some dangers in the outlook. Money rates are high and banking accommodation is relatively scanty. There is no use in pretending that credit facilities are ample, for they are not. The whole world has been destroying capital for several years past, and the processes of accumulation have reasserted themselves but slowly. It is an encouraging fact that some advance in the degree of thrift exhibited by various sections of the country is now noted, and there is a lessening of popular extravagance. There must be a still further revision of consumptive tendencies and more rapid accumulation of real wealth must be relied upon in order to fill the gap in capital formation caused by the war interruptions.

"During the time that capital accumulation is proceeding and until it is more nearly equal to the demand, money rates will continue high, and there will be urgent need for efficiency on the part of every dollar of productive plant.

"Our business outlook is excellent, and we have, with our new banking organization, every reason to hope for successful readjustment to the new post-war conditions without the extreme depression or violent break which has usually come after former wars. To attain these desirable results, however, skill and moderation in banking, avoidance of overcommitments and a large development of individual thrift will be requisite."

FIRST TIME, BUT NOT LAST.

There still are a few florists, particularly in the east, who do not realize how useful the Classified section of The Review would be to them. It works like this:

Just a line to thank you for the results from my delphinium adv. It was the first time I advertised in The Review. I sold all my stock and had to return checks. You know it means work harder to grow more stock when you have such results.—Jos. Haupt, Glenview, Ill., April 6, 1920.

Mr. Haupt sold out on an expenditure of $3.60. If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Henry Pritchard.

Henry Pritchard, long and well known in the trade about New York city, died at his home, 356 Thirteenth avenue, Astoria, L. I., after a lingering illness. He was in his seventy-sixth year.

Mr. Pritchard was born in Staffordshire, England, April 17, 1844. He was a grower of grafted fruit trees and general nursery stock at Birkenhead, England, for a number of years. He sold his business there in 1877 and came to the United States in 1878. He began in this country as head gardener on the estate of the late Joseph Towl, at Paterson, N. J. In 1880 he went to Long Island City and started in business for himself, growing cut flowers and bedding plants. He was quite successful. He won prizes for English cucumbers.

Mr. Pritchard is survived by his wife, Rhoda Pritchard; three sons, Albert E., Arthur H. and Walter Pritchard; two daughters, Mrs. George Keneuth and Mrs. Jacob Weimann; twenty-eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Interment was in the family vault at Cedar Grove cemetery, Flushing, L. I.

John T. Cochran.

John T. Cochran, for many years in business at Claymont, Del., died April 3. He is survived by his son, Paul T. Cochran. The business is being continued by William L. Hobbart.

Josiah W. Day.

Josiah W. Day died March 20 at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. A. B. Hall, at Omaha, Neb. He was 85 years of age.

Mr. Day was born in Tarentum, Pa. He served in the Civil war and was twice wounded. He went to Omaha in 1882 and engaged in the nursery business until his retirement, two years ago. He was a member of the Methodist church and Crook Post, G. A. R. He was buried beside his wife at Forest Lawn cemetery.

Charles Clegg.

Charles Clegg, a resident of West Orange, N. J., for the last forty-seven years, dropped dead at his home, 305 Valley road.

Mr. Clegg was engaged in the florists' business for over thirty years in that city. His death resulted from heart disease and hardening of the arteries.

Mrs. Carrie Lange.

Mrs. Carrie Lange, widow of the late William Lange, died April 6 at her home on South Meridian street, Indianapolis, Ind. She was 65 years of age.

Mrs. Lange had been in the business for the last forty years. Her husband was one of the first members of the trade in Indianapolis. She is survived by four children and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Laura Anthony Hammond.

Mrs. Laura Anthony Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y., whose death was briefly recorded in the obituary column of The Review last week, died early Thursday morning, April 1. About a month before her death Mrs. Hammond contracted a severe cold, which later developed into the pneumonia which caused her death. Every possible care was taken and two nurses were in attendance, but, just when it was thought that she had begun to recover, her heart gave way under the strain.

Mrs. Hammond was born in New York and her early life was spent in Harrison, Westchester county. In 1898 she became the wife of Benjamin Hammond, now president of the Hammond Paint & Slug Shot Works, at Beacon, N. Y. During her years of residence there she became prominently known and highly esteemed by all. She was deeply interested in the local hospital, in her church and in charity; while of a quiet disposition, she was constantly active in the philanthropic enterprises which seemed worthy of her support.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. George C. Park and Miss A. D. Anthony, of Harrison, N. Y., and three stepdaughters, of Fishkill, N. Y.

The funeral services at the home Friday evening, April 2, were conducted by the Rev. William H. Wheeler, rector of St. Andrew's church, of which Mrs. Hammond was a communicant. Interment took place the afternoon of the following day in Greenwood Union cemetery, Rye, N. Y.

The Market.

Stock is abundant. Although everything is in plentiful supply, there would not be a glut if business were good. Stock moves slowly.

Carnations, in any number, can be obtained in all qualities. In small quantities they are selling for $4 per hundred, but in large quantities can be had at almost the buyer's own price. Roses have been about equal to the demand and range from $4 to $30 per hundred. Snapdragons are now plentiful and sell fairly well. Plenty of bulbous stock is still available, such as jonquils, daffodils, hyacinths and tulips. Both Easter and calla lilies are in good supply. A few freesias remain in the market.

Sweet peas are, as usual, popular, but are not so plentiful as they were. Calendulas have been in unusual favor this winter and are still in demand. Delphinium is a newcomer in the market, but is short in supply.

On account of the railroad strike, green goods have been scarce. The embargo on ferns has been lifted, but they have been arriving slowly.

Various Notes.

The death of Mrs. Carrie Lange, wife of the late William Lange, is reported in this week's obituary column.

Albert Joackimi, who for several years has been with Bertermann Bros. Co., has sold his home and, with his family, will move to Portland, Ore.

The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. is cutting some good roses.

Tuesday, April 13, there was a meeting of the local committees that were appointed for the October meeting of the F. T. D., which is to be held in Indianapolis.

Albert Stanley is the first in the city to cut delphinium.

Mr. Herleman, of the M. Rice Co., and

Mr. Huddleson, of the Ove Gnatt Co., called on the trade last week.

W. Denny, of Cloverdale, Ind., was visiting the city last week.

While complaint about business was general among the store men last week, the city market enjoyed active trade.

Joseph Schoey, formerly with Bertermann Bros. Co., is now with A. Wiegand's Sons Co.

Bertermann Bros. Co. is cutting a fine lot of Darwin tulips.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Greene have a new baby daughter, born Sunday, April 11.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Joseph Leikens, Inc., has leased his former place of business on Bellevue avenue for the present season.

Mr. and Mrs. John K. MacLennan are in Canada for their annual month's vacation.

Arthur T. Bunyard will be found at his former location, on Bellevue avenue, having leased again for this season.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

As often happens, the rush of Easter was followed by several days of dull business. It has been noted that each of the special flower days, especially those on which plants are of prime importance, results in so stocking the public with flowers that the next few days see little demand except for funeral and other special uses. This time the condition was aggravated by the fact that large numbers of those who look to this market for their flowers had more or less stock left from Easter, which it took them several days to work off. Then the demand began to improve and at the beginning of this week flowers were being sold in large quantities, though at rather low prices. The shipping business again has become active. In spite of the difficulties of transportation, which still are a distinct handicap, the volume of shipping business is large. There have been times when the individual orders were larger, but the number of orders has increased so that many besides the regular buyers are being heard from.

There is an abundance of stock in most lines. Orchids are scarce, almost as scarce as in winter, and there has been almost a shortage of sweet peas. The latter are the principal corsage flowers at present and the dark, cold days following the cooking hot ones just before Easter have cut down the supply of peas to a surprising extent. Jonquils are on the wane, the present supply being principally from outdoors, and early tulips also are about at the end of their season.

The leading flower in the market at present is the carnation, the anticipated spring crops having come on in full force. Most of the stock is of fine quality and the carnations are selling well, though at low prices. The Allied Florists' Association has been making a trial this week of a new plan of relieving the market. It was arranged between wholesalers and retailers that good stock should be supplied at $30 per thousand for an advertised special sale in every flower store in Chicago at 75 cents per dozen. The retailers were by no means unanimous in backing up the idea, but enough of them took hold to have an appreciable effect on the market.

Some growers are in heavy crop with roses, while others are cutting comparatively little. Consequently, some houses have rather more roses than they need, while others are short. There are scarcely any Beauties.

The leftover stock of Easter lilies has been pretty well worked off in funeral designs; there still are plenty of lilies, but the iceboxes no longer are crowded with them. Callas also are down to normal supply. Freesias are nearly gone, but there are poet's narcissi and other southern flowers in considerable quantity. The green goods situation is easing up.

The Easter Aftermath.

The aftermath of Easter has been an unusual number of complaints from buyers. Beyond any question there was a good deal of poor stock in the market. It was inevitable with weather conditions as they were. Following a long spell of cool weather there were several hot days just at the time the shipments had to go out. Most buyers ordered their stock sent a day earlier than usual. If no attempt were made at accumulation it would be impossible to fill half the orders of any holiday. But the hot weather hit the accumulated stock one blow and much of it died. It also is a fact often observed that when the retailers sell out there are few complaints, regardless of what kind of stock was available, while there invariably are complaints when the retailers get stuck. The stormy Easter resulted in an unusual number getting stuck this spring. A good many of them wrote a letter to their wholesaler about it and some used rather strong language. The complaints are particularly numerous as to roses.

strikes, but there was considerable improvement last week in the situation in Chicago. For a day or two the company abandoned the market, because of the switchmen's walkout, but during the latter part of the week full service was given for shipments going out on the B. & O., Panhandle, C. B. & Q., St. Paul and Alton, except that there was a complete embargo against St. Louis, East St. Louis, Kansas City and Buffalo, where the conditions were worse than here. No pickups were made for points on the New York Central, Rock Island, Nickel Plate, I. C., Michigan Central, Big Four or Northwestern, but shipments of "funeral flowers" were accepted if taken to the stations. It was no longer necessary to fee the station men.

This week conditions in Chicago are still further improved, the express company is giving a little better service each day, but there is a lengthening list of eastern points for which shipments are not accepted. The express clerks' strike in Chicago has ceased to be much of a factor, the present trouble arising from the railroad employees' strikes.

Among the wholesalers the idea is fast gaining ground that conditions approach the intolerable and that something of serious character is likely to happen soon.

What Coal Will Cost.

The growers have a problem before them in the continual rise in the cost of fuel. N. J. Wietor says that if he ever had any question that Pocahontas is the cheapest coal for a florist to use, every doubt was dispelled during the war, while all Pocahontas was diverted from this district. Not so many years ago Pocahontas mine-run cost the growers $1 per ton at the mine mouth. Last season it was $3. Recently it has been $4, with the prospect of a further rise to $4.50 as the result of recent miners' wage adjustment. And then there is the matter of freight. It used to seem high at $1.65 per ton to Rogers Park, but government operation of the railroads brought the present rate to $2.70 per ton, with the almost certainty that before September freights will be advanced anywhere from twenty-five to fifty per cent. With a freight rate advance of only 75 cents per ton it will mean that fuel which last season cost $5.70 per ton on track next season will cost almost $8. When a grower uses, as do Wietor Bros., over 5,000 tons a year it means an addition of $12,000 to the cost of operation.

It might be said $12,000 does not grow on every rose bush.

Various Notes.

George Asmus has suffered an attack of his ancient enemy, rheumatism, aggravated by a general reduction of his well known resistant forces due to long continued overwork. His activities touch so many lines of trade welfare that everyone hopes for his early recovery.

Grossberg, Tyler, Finnerman Co., which has had two separate stores on the second floor of the Atlas block, 30 East Randolph street, has sold the lease on room 220, adjoining Percy Jones, Inc., to A. L. Vaughan & Co., who will remove to the new location by May 1. The space is completely fitted up for wholesaling cut flowers. For several years it was the headquarters of Zech & Mann.

C. A. Samuelson is delaying his return to the farm in Idaho to work out the details of a plan to form a corporation in which the store employees will be stockholders and managers. One by one Mr. Samuelson is arranging his interests here so that he can remain on the farm the year around, and so that Mrs.

Samuelson can be with him. They are agreed farming is the life and that Idaho is the place to live.

Eric Johnson has had an extremely painful experience. He was absent from business for nearly two weeks because of an abscess in his ear.

H. P. Gebhardt is back at Wilmette after spending the last three years farming in Michigan. He will not reëngage in the florists' business, as he expects to remove to California in the autumn.

The more easterly of the larger houses back of Daniel Branch's store on Fifty-first street has been demolished.

J. H. McNeilly has closed his combination flower and candy store at the corner of University avenue and Sixty-third street, the lease having been sold to a druggist. On a neighboring window appears a sign which has made most of Woodlawn stop and stare, indicating, as it does in strong language, that Mr. McNeilly has acquired the lease there by methods displeasing to the present tenant.

Joseph H. Hill brought a specimen bloom of Red Columbia from Richmond, Ind., to the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club April 8 and that night booked an order for 25,000 for the Weiss syndicate. Mr. Hill had just been in St. Louis, where a shipment of plants was stranded by the express strike and could not be shipped on to their destination or back to Richmond. He hastened home after the meeting, to the 3-months-old Joanna, who is doing splendidly.

Paul Weiss is a little busier than usual because the Fort Dearborn Coal Co., of which he is secretary, is preparing to hold the opening of the new offices, in the Fisher building as before.

When the grower must pay $6 for eight hours' work by shovel-and-wheelbarrow hands—and not any, too much work, either—he needs high prices in more than the winter months, says Joseph Kohout.

Escape from the tornado of Palm Sunday was only one reason for Otto Amling's rejoicing next day. The other was the arrival of a third daughter in his household.

The S. A. F. slides shown in the movies at Maywood by the Weiss & Meyer Co. have received the praise of patrons of the theater.

Ernst Amling examined Joseph Hill's specimen of Red Columbia at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club with keen interest, because he is nursing a red sport which appeared on a plant of Columbia at his greenhouses last December.

Ziska & Sons gauge the state of business largely by the demand for wire frames, which they say is so strong as to indicate that the average florist who does funeral work is having an active trade. Wire is high, but Ziska & Sons have as yet had no difficulty getting their requirements.

Lewis & Rocca are advertising their store in the Cable building, using the Sunday newspapers and the trade's slogan. The phrase "Members Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association" occupies enough space so that the explanation of what the service is might have been used instead.

The J. Bombenger greenhouses, on Woodlawn avenue south of Sixty-third street, are being demolished. It was the oldest florists' stand in Woodlawn, but has been closed since just before the armistice.

Edward Meuret says the season to date has been one of the best in his long experience as a carnation grower, in spite of the general disappointment with the results at Easter. Mr. Meuret has done so well as a grower that he would like to sell out and play the gentleman of leisure for a while.

The hearing on Arthur F. Keenan's petition for a discharge from bankruptcy was held in the U. S. District court in the Federal building April 12 and granted. Since his return from overseas Mr. Keenan has been employed as a salesman by the United States Rubber Co. Relieved of his old debts, which aggregated $5,403.09, he is in position to start in the florists' business again.

April 10 I. Rosnosky severed his connection with the W. W. Barnard Co.

K. N. Cooper, manager of the Auburn-dale Goldfish Co., says wholesale florists are by no means the only ones seriously affected by the express situation. Moreover, goldfish cannot be sent by parcel post even if express shipments have been held up for four weeks.

The Market.

A week of sunshine, following the disagreeable snow storm Easter Sunday afternoon, warmed up the atmosphere and created a large supply of cut flowers for the growers. The wholesale markets were loaded up with stock in all grades daily. Those markets which do much shipping had a great deal of stock left on their hands, since the railroad strike prevented the express companies from taking outbound shipments. Consequently the local market was choked up and cheap prices prevailed almost daily. To help dispose of the stock, some of which was of excellent quality, big lots were sold at low prices. Roses were of excellent quality, especially Premier, Russell, Ophelia and Milady. Killarney and Sunburst were also in fine crop. Carnations were plentiful and the top prices were not over $4 per hundred; many sales were made as low as $1.50 per hundred, all in excellent quality. Sweet peas were not plentiful at the end of last week, since the heavy cut for Easter kept them down, but a good supply was expected for this week. There were plenty of cut Easter lilies, which came down in price to as low as $6 per hundred blooms and sold fairly well at these figures. Violets are showing the effects of warm sunshine and will soon be over for this season. In miscellaneous stock, there is a good supply of irises, jonquils, freesias, mignonette, calendulas, pansies, snapdragons and candytuft. Valley is selling well, since a good many weddings are booked. Plants had a good sale in the wholesale market all week, since the retailers were restocking their stores after Easter. This market cleans up daily in aspen-

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon, April 8, in the tea room at Vandervoort's, at the invitation of Edward Steitz and Julius Schaeffer. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock, with President Hummert in the chair and all officers present. The attendance numbered forty. Mrs. Wagner spoke on the $24,000,000 bond issue and was followed by V. J. Gorly, who represents the club on the mayor's committee for the bond issue. At the conclusion of his talk, the members present voted to endorse the issue.

The publicity committee reported through its chairman, L. J. Bourdet, what the committee had accomplished last year and read a financial report showing receipts and expenditures. The report was thoroughly considered, J. F. Ammann and F. C. Weber taking a leading part in the discussion. F. A. Windler, of the Missouri State Florists' Association, reported that the arrangements were not yet complete for the annual meeting of that association, to be held in St. Louis in May. The committee on the reprinting of the by-laws reported through its chairman, H. C. Irish, who read the various changes adopted; this was their first reading and they will come up for final adoption at the May meeting. L. J. Bourdet, chairman of the committee for the national flower show, asked that his committee be discharged, as Cleveland had been selected for the city in which to hold the next national flower show, in 1922. On motion, the committee was discharged with thanks.

A discussion was then started by D. S. Geddis as to why St. Louis was ignored by the national flower show committee when the time came to select the city in which the show would be held, since St. Louis had been promised the next show. J. F. Ammann, former president of the S. A. F., explained to the satisfaction of those present why Cleveland was chosen to be the next flower show city.

The committee on the applications of R. E. Wallace, George S. Walters and T. Kammer for membership reported favorably and their election as members followed. Richard Hassell, of Webster Groves, Mo., submitted his application for membership.

J. F. Ammann, of the national publicity committee, was called upon for a talk on publicity, which was interest-
